RAIDERS FIGHT INDICTMENTS

WEBSTER-HARRIS SQUAD ATTACKS AUTHORITY OF STEUBENVILLE PROBERS

Detectives Who Took Part in East Liverpool-Wellsville Warfare File Demurrers Against Jefferson County Grand Jury's True Bills Charging Malicious Destruction of Property.

COURT RESERVES DECISION AFTER ARGUMENTS BY NINE DRY AGENTS

Charles Webster, One of Chiefs of Raiding Force, is Reported to Have Jumped $500 Bond Posted for Appearance in Assault Case Filed by Parlett Woman following Liquor Seizure.

Nine members of the Webster-Harris Detective agency, of Steubenville, some of them participants in the East Liverpool Wellsville raiders' war, today turned their guns on indictments returned against them by the Jefferson county grand jury.

Demurrers were filed in the Jefferson county common pleas court against charges of malicious destruction of property. It was declared in the arguments on the demurrers that the indictments were illegally drawn and that the grand jury was without authority to make the findings. It is also claimed that the indictments are without effect because neither the clerk nor the court presented the foreman or prosecutor with certified transcripts.

The enforcement officers, Charles Webster, Caleb Harris, John and William McCoy, Richard Riser, Charles McFarland, Fred Coff, Charles Sargent and B. F. Doom, were indicted following a raid on a construction camp near Knoxville, last December.

Judge J. S. Paisley, who heard the arguments, reserved his decision. Prosecuting Attorney Roy Merryman opposed the demurrer while Attorneys John Gardner and Edward McKinley appeared for the dry agents.

BRADY McKENZIE WILL ASK INQUIRY INTO SEARCH OF HIS SUITCASES

Pottery Worker Charges Patrolman McFarland, With Turnkey Cline Standing by, Ordered Him to Open Luggage on Street.

Brady McKenzie, pottery worker, of 707½ Avondale street, today said he intended to file a complaint with Chief of Police McDermott against the alleged action of Patrolman Norman McFarland in searching his luggage in front of the Broadway traction terminal.

According to McKenzie, McFarland, without arresting him or showing a search warrant, forced him, his brother Hugh McKenzie and Nathan Franklin of Seventh street, to open their suit cases before bystanders as they were waiting for a Beaver Interurban car last Saturday afternoon. McFarland was searching for liquor, but no contraband was in the suit cases.

Special Officer Named in Killing Of Raid Victim

ASHLAND, Feb. 18.—Ill with quinsy, Carlos Gorham, indicted last night by a special grand jury here on the charge of second degree murder with a count for manslaughter in the killing of a rubber chemist, John Dalton on October 29, 1924, will probably not be arraigned today.

Attorney general Crabbe and Sherman Deaton, Urbana attorney, were in charge of the special investigation, which Governor Donahey authorized after a grand jury last November failed to indict any of the nine local and county enforcement officers in the posse at the time Dalton, who lived northwest of Ashland, was shot.

Gorham, who is 26, is the son of the Ashland chief of police, a former traffic officer and had been made a special officer on the night the posse started on the liquor search.

Bloom and Huffman Choice for Utilities Commission.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 18—The senate, by a vote of 25 to 0, yesterday confirmed the re-appointment of T. J. Duffy, Democrat, of East Liverpool, to the industrial commission.

Opponents in the senate to confirmation of Duffy did not vote, but contented themselves with registering their silent protest. There was no debate. Senator Chester C. Bolton of Cleveland stated that an investigation of the record of Mr. Duffy among manufacturers and organized labor leaders had convinced the rules committee that the appointee was "well regarded, efficient and capable." Senator Homer A. Ramsey of Toledo spoke for confirmation and the roll was called.

Those not voting were Senators Harry M. Carpenter of Jefferson county and C. C. Chappelear of Pickaway

Incendiary Blast In Pittsburgh's Produce District

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 18.—Incendiary dynamite explosions blasted terror into the center of the wholesale produce district and demolished three buildings here today with a loss of $130,000, according to fire department officials. Firemen are digging in tons of debris following reports that five men might have been trapped, but owners of the buildings are certain no one was caught in the explosion.

Police believe the bombings may have been the work of a blackhand gang or by business rivals or the Landolina Brothers Produce company whose buildings were destroyed.

SEAL CREVICE OF SAND CAVE TOMB AS ITS VICTIM SLEEPS

Floyd Collins Will Not be Disturbed in Shroud of Rock.

NATION FORGETS

Nature Takes Steps to Protect Cavern Mausoleum.

SAND CAVE, Ky., Feb. 18. — To make sure that Floyd Collins will not be disturbed in his sand cave tomb 75 feet below the surface, workers today were sealing the crevice with cement.

This was decided upon after H. T. Carmichael, chief of the rescue crew which strove frantically to reach Collins while he was alive, abandoned plans to set off a huge charge of dynamite in the rescue shaft that would shake all the loose rock and talus together. Ned B. Doyle, owner of the farm on which Sand cave is located, objected to this procedure.

While Carmichael and engineers were conferring in regard to the last "clean-up" work to be done around the scene of the epic struggle to save a human from death, miners, scientists, engineers, surgeons, military men and the scores of others who have assisted in the work, were leaving for their homes in various parts of the country. And the nation was fast forgetting the tragedy in this little mountain village.

Crack at Base of Cliff.

Meanwhile, Floyd Collins sleeps in the tomb he perhaps would have chosen. There he will sleep forever.

Nature, which has sneered and mocked at man's puny efforts to bring him forth, is taking further steps to seal his mausoleum irrevocably.

A great crack appeared at the base of the cliff which overhangs the entrance to the cave. It is now six inches wide and the ground in front of the cliff seems to be sinking. Composed of treacherous, shifting muck even before the rescue operations started, the underground strata, which have been disturbed by the sinking of the shafts and tunnels, again are seeking to adjust themselves. It is likely that

"Suicide Leap" Span Of Bridge Claims Unidentified Man

CLEVELAND, Feb. 18. — "Suicide leap" span of the high level bridge here claimed another victim today, when workmen from the Erie Railroad coal yard stumbled across the body of an unidentified man.

The body was badly crushed, having dropped through nearly 100 feet of space, from the bridge span to the frozen ground below. Apparently an attempt had been made by the victim to alight in the river.

The body was taken to the morgue where it was admitted as "white man, 60, unidentified."

Ray of Hope For 'Hard Up' Districts In Relief Measure

Copies of Legislation, Recommended by Special Committee, Voted by Assembly and Signed by Donahey, Received Here.

Another ray of hope for school districts and other taxing subdivisions, which are "hard up" for money to meet operating expenses for the present year, is contained in the provisions of House bill No. 27, passed as an emergency measure, and signed by the governor, as a means of providing temporary relief, it was declared today.

Copies of the measure, which embodies one of the eleven recommendations made to the governor by a special committee, which included ex-County Prosecutor Jesse Hanley and Superintendent of Schools Geiger appointed several weeks ago, were received here yesterday.

The bill provides that school boards or other divisions in a taxing district facing deficits in operating expenses, may authorize their clerk or accounting officer to compile a detailed state-

Lima Boy Dead After Being Shot By His Playmate

LIMA, Ohio, Feb. 18.—Richard Wilson, 11, was dead today after being shot last night by his boyhood chum and playmate, George Sandy, aged 9.

According to the story told police by eye witnesses of the tragedy, Sandy and Wilson were playing in front of the Sandy home where they became involved in a childish argument. Sandy immediately ran into his house and returned with a .22 calibre rifle.

When Wilson turned to come towards him, Sandy pulled the trigger and the lad fell face downward, shot through the head. "I shot him— I didn't mean to do it," the Sandy youth sobbed to the police.

The juvenile authorities are making an investigation, but they declare that it is doubtful if Sandy will be held accountable because of his extreme youth.

"I do not know of any one in the Army who wishes to see the Air forces unified," Admiral Coontz said. At the same time he declined to comment on General Matchell's advocacy of this program.

HEART FAILURE CLAIMS CHIEF OF UNIVERSITY AT ANN ARBOR

Death of Coolidge Nominator Follows Pneumonia Attack.

Michigan Educator's End Comes While he is Sleeping.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 18. —Dr. Leroy Marion Burton, president of the University of Michigan, died at 3:20 a. m. today after an illness of 17 weeks. Failure of his heart to respond to the demands imposed by the relapse suffered last Thursday was named by physicians as the immediate cause of death. He was 50 years old.

Nurse Present At Death.

Dr. Burton's illness was diagnosed as pleural pneumonia. Funeral services will probably be private.

Dr. Burton died while sleeping quitely. No member of the family was present when the end came. A nurse who had just taken his pulse, finding it unchanged, heard him sigh deeply. She ran across the hall and summoned Dr. John P. Parsons, who was at the bedside in a moment. Dr. Burton, however, had already expired.

In the house were Mrs. Burton their son, Paul, 19, and their daughter, Jane, 12. The Rev. Dr. Harold Emerson Burton, of New York, brother of Dr. Burton, came to Ann Arbor last week, but found the patient too ill to be seen, and returned home Sunday.

Notification was sent to a daughter, Theodosia Burton Stewart.

Funeral Arrangements.

President and Mrs. Coolidge, to whom Mr. and Mrs. Burton a few months ago wired sympathy at the time of the death of the president's son, today paid similar respects to Dr. Burton.

Mrs. Burton received the following telegram from the White House:

"We are sharing your sorrow at the loss of our friend Dr. Burton, and send you and your family our sincere sympathies.

"Calvin Coolidge and Grace Coolidge"

Funeral services for Dr. Burton will be held Saturday, it was announced.

Film friends of the marchioness and her husband gathered at the St. Lazare station to bid them farewell in their scheduled departure on the 10:05 A. BORGLUM WILL CARVE WORLD'S LARGEST MONUMENT OUT OF GRANITE IN SOUTH DAKOTA'S HILLS

BY LLOYD LEHBRAS.
(Copyright 1925, I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The largest sculptured monnument in the world will be carved out of one great block of solid granite in the Black Hills of South Dakota at a point which is not far from the geopraphical center of the United States, Gutzom Borglum, the world famous sculptor, announced today.

Borglum, who is now carving the glory of the Confederacy on Stone Mountain in Georgia, will begin preliminary work on the massive memorial next spring and expects to complete it in four years at a cost of from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

As simple in design as it is monumental in scope the memorial will consist of only two stupendous figures of Washington and Lincoln, standing four hundred feet in height and from 36 to 40 feet in width, on a background of solid stone 600 feet high—50 feet higher than the Washington monument. Borglum's designs for the heads of Washington and Lincoln show that they will be 40 feet from brow to chin.

Washington and Lincoln Figures.

"I expect to carve a figure of Washington as he was at Valley Forge," Borglum explained, "A great silent figure in campaign uniform and cocked hat with his hand holding his coat together. Along side him I will carve Lincoln, bare-headed, with his hand resting on Washington's shoulder. Those two figures typify American history — Washington, the builder, and Lincoln, the saviour, of the union. There will be no secondary figures or decorations, just those two big figures standing in the beautiful natural surroundings of the Black Hills gazing over their nation. The cliff on which I will carve them is 600 feet high so that they can be seen from fifty miles away.

"Carving Stone Mountain is an attempt to put back in the nation's record for all time just what great good resulted from a civil war that was necessary to complete the work at which the politicians had failed, to forge a union of self determing states that is invisible. In carving the giant Monolith in South Dakota we will forever preserve in monumental form the great influences through which our country exists as exemplified by Washington and Lincoln."

Site Near Rapid City.

The stupendous sculpturing to be undertaken by the famous artist will be on a granite cliff standing in a 90,000 acre state park in the heart of the Black Hills along the western boundary of the state, 60 miles from the nearest town, Rapid City. The entire area is virgin country, timberlands and mountains cutting a jagged skyline against the blue western sky.

"And the natural beauty of the Black Hills will not be disturbed," Borglum asserted, "but will give the setting necessary to visualize in stone the power and sweep of our civilization through its very simplicity and magnitude."

Preliminary work is being financed by citizens of South Dakota, but a bill is now pending in congress through which the memorial will receive $100,000 from royalties on an aerial bomb invented by Lester P. Harlow. In-

White House Statt Heeds Coolidge Plea For Economy

Like Charity, it Should Begin at Home, so Budget Director Offers Cash Prize for Suggestions.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18. — Economy, according to President Coolidge, should begin at home.

Recently he asked General Lord, director of the budget, if he thought the White House could cut down any, and General Lord reckoned it could to the extent of about $12,500.

Now $12,500 is big money in almost anybody's office, and the additional economy edict had Noah F. Webster —who handles the president's cash— slightly worried. He saw hard sledding ahead.

Then Noah had an inspiration.

All of which leads up to the economy contest, open only to White House employes.

The idea is that everybody thinks hard until he thinks of a good scheme to save money around the office. Then he enters his scheme in the contest and if it turns out to be the best one he wins $10—the prize coming out of Noah's personal, right-hand pocket.

Halts Cross Word Puzzling.

Here is the circular letter passed around by Disbursing Clerk Webster that resulted in a general defection from cross word puzzling:

"Although this office has been putting into effect economy for the past two years, it is necessary that further economies in expenditures be brought about. It is desired that every employe of the office take a personal interest in this matter and make at least one suggestion. As the official responsible in this matter, I shall be glad to award a prize of $10 from personal fund to the employe who submits the best suggestion for bringing about a reduction of expenses. These suggestions should be along practical lines and should not be radical in their nature, and not tend to disorganize the work of the office."

Already a lot of economies have sprung up around the executive office. Where a cluster of lights used to burn there is a single beacon now. There is a noticeable shortage of towels in the washrooms. Paper cups no longer grace the drinking fountains, in their place are single glasses.

Plan to Push Tax Program Despite Donahey Objection

COLUMBUS, Feb. 18—Legislative leaders today made it clear that they propose to go ahead with the Republican permanent tax program, despite objections by Governor Donahey.

Two measures, now being studied by the governor with a view to a conference later, with legislative leaders, looking toward a compromise on tax legislation, both carrying home rule provisions, to meet the governor's wishes, are scheduled today to be made special orders in the House for next Tuesday afternoon when they will be called up for passage.

One is the Tallentire bill, providing that charter cities may, by vote of the people, fix their own tax limitations and also setting up a complete budget system for cities. This measure was scheduled to be reported out today by the house taxation committee.

The other is the Dodd bill, permitting sub-divisions to authorize by vote of the people, extra levies either for running expenses, sinking funds or for special permanent improvements, outside of present tax limitations. This measure has been reported out of committee and is awaiting final action in the house.

Both measures are leading items in the Republican permanent tax relief program. Legislative leaders said that they would be passed and repassed if Gov. Donahey should veto them.

Woman is Ready to Take Her Seat in Congress on Mar. 4

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Feb. 18.—"Just common horse sense."

This homely but sound course of reasoning will guide San Francisco's new congresswoman in shaping her course in statehood.

Defeating three men and her nearest opponent by more than 20,000 votes, Mrs. Florence Prag Kahn will on March 4 take the seat in congress occupied by her late husband, Julius Kahn, for many years. Actually, unless President Coolidge calls an important session, her work in congress will begin next December.

"It will be my aim to carry on the policies and ideals of my husband," Mrs. Kahn, a placid, motherly countenanced lady, said today.

"I want to serve the people of San Francisco to the best of my ability and carry out my pledge for maintaining the high standards of service to the people that Mr. Kahn set."

The new congresswoman has no fads nor fancies in the way of legislation to press.

King George Shows Improvement, Says Official Bulletin

LONDON, Feb. 18—The general condition of King George led his three physicians to hope today that he would be able to overcome the bronchitis trouble without it developing into anything more serious.

His specific illness is bronchitis due to influenza, it was stated.

An official bulletin issued at Buckingham Palace today said:

"The King had a fair night, although there is no chance in the bronchitis. The general condition of his majesty shows improvement."

(Signed) "Stanley Hewitt, Dawson of Penn, Milson Rees."

For a time yesterday the King's physicians were concerned about his condition, it was said, and now they are taking every precaution to ward off possible complications which would be pneumonia.

DOUBLE DENIAL OF TOKIO RUMOR

TOKIO, Feb. 18—The United States embassy and the Japanese foreign office both denied this afternoon a story printed in the Japanese newspaper Kokumin, that American Ambassador Bancroft had conferred with foreign minister Shidehara, informing him that President Coolidge intended to summon an arms parley and sounding out Japan's attitude.

county, who were absent from the chamber, and Senators Roy J. Gillen of Jackson county, J. Lowry Miller of Butler county, R. A. Powell of Wood county, Clarion L. Shafer of Van Wert county, Arthur W. Sweeney of Summit county and Frank C. Wise of Stark county.

Conspiracy Bill Appears.

Appointments by Governor Donahey of Former Lieutenant Governor Earl D. Bloom, Bowling Green, and James W. Huffman, Zanesville, both Democrats as members of the state utilities commission, are expected to be sent today to the senate for confirmation. Huffman is executive clerk in the governor's office.

Other Appointments.

In addition to his scheduled appointments to membership on the state utilities commission, Gov. Donahey also is expected to send to the senate for confirmation his appointments of a member of the state tax commission to succeed Chairman S. E. Forney, whose term expired February 2 of three trustees of Ohio state university, and a member of the state civil service commission.

It was generally understood in legislative circles that the governor would name Charles Follett a practicing attorney in Cleveland, as the member of the tax commission. Mr. Follett, who served as an assistant attorney general under Attorney General McGhee, has been the governor's advisor on tax legislation now pending before the general assembly.

The legislative mill will continue work on long calendars, while further floods of new bills are expected, in anticipation of the closing of the bill introducing period next Monday night. No outstanding measures are on the calendars for final passage today. The house will have before it for final passage Thursday afternoon of Collister city home rule bus bill.

The famous conspiracy bill, defeated two years ago, will appear again today on the legislative calendar when a new measure sponsored by Representative Hall, Scioto county, will be up for second reading and reference to committee in the house. The measure provides maximum fines of $10,000 and two years imprisonment for conspiracy to violate any law of the state or a sub-division.

Other Measures On Calendar.

Other measures scheduled for second reading and reference to House committees today include: By Hunt, Lucas, authorizing the state office building commission to select a site for the proposed new building wherever it chooses, either on or off the State House grounds; by Rose, Athens, requiring all contracts for municipal paving to contain provisions whereby contractors agree to keep improvement in repair, for not less than five, nor more than ten years; by Steiner, Hardin, extending terms of Prosecuting Attorneys for 1920 and providing for four-year terms; by Smith, Highland, abolishing right of utility companies to collect increased rates before the rate is approved by the utilities commission; by Westover, Mahoning, providing for a commission to revise and recodify existing state laws; by Robinson, Stark, to create a state board of barber examiners and to regulate the business, and a joint resolution by Hunt, Lucas, ordering the Attorney General to go to Washington to urge the Secretary of War to prevent the alleged Chicago "water steal."

Heart Failure

though the arrangements have not been completed yet.

Details thus far announced are that burial will take place in Forest Hill cemetery and that the body of Dr. Burton probably will lie in state before the funeral. George Lewis, mayor of Ann Arbor, has proclaimed public mourning until after the funeral hour. All flags in Ann Arbor are at half mast.

Call Meeting of Deans.

A meeting of the deans was to be called this morning to take any official action which might be deemed proper.

Dr. Harry B. Hutchins, president emeritus of the university, who was recently named one of a committee of three to manage the university pending Dr. Burton's recovery, was to preside at the dean's meeting. It was doubtful today whether any move toward appointment of a successor to Dr. Burton would be taken until the regular meeting of the board of regents, Feb. 17.

Dr. Burton's illness started when he collapsed after introducing Vilhalmur Stefanson, Arctic explorer, in Hill auditorium. An illness a year previous, before he made his nominating speech for President Calvin Coolidge at the Cleveland Republican convention, left his system weakened, physicians said.

His condition became very critical during the early stages of the illness, necessitating an operation upon the glands of the throat. His wonderful constitution enabled him to come through crisis after crisis, however, until the serious relapse last week.

The relapse was accompanied by hemorrhages which, physicians said, indicated that his heart was too weak to carry off all the blood delivered to the lungs; causing congestion there.

Dr. D. M. Cowie, the attending physician, diagnosed the illness yesterday as streptococcus pleurisy.

Dr. Burton was one of the closest friends of the president and annually visited the Coolidges at the White House.

Leader In Education.

As President of Smith college, Northampton, Mass., the University of Minnesota and the University of Michigan, Dr. Burton was recognized as one of the leaders in educational movements in America. He was born August 30, 1874, at Brooklyn, Iowa, receiving his bachelor of arts degree from Carleton college, Northfield, Minnesota, in 1900, and an additional degree from Yale with highest honors in 1903.

Dr. Burton was awarded his doctor of philosophy degree from Yale in 1907, a doctor of divinity degree from Carleton in 1909 and a doctor of laws from Tufts in 1911. On June 14, 1900, he married Nina Leona Moses of Northfield, Minn.

An instructor of Greek in Carleton Academy, in 1899-1909, Dr. Burton was named President of Windom institute, Windom, Minnesota, in 1900, where he served until appointed an assistant Professor at Yale in 1907.

Dr. Burton entered the clergy in 1908 was pastor of the church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y. While serving in this capacity, he was named President of Smith college, where he spent seven years until 1917. He took over the position as president of the University of Michigan in 1920. Since he has been President, a score of the greatest college buildings in the nation have been erected in Ann Arbor.

ment, showing deficits which are likely to occur during the year. The board may then issue certificates of indebtedness to meet these expenses. This must be completed on or before March 15, of this year.

May Petition Election.

A resolution must then be enacted, asking the board of elections to prepare petitions calling for the levy of a tax in an amount not greater than said deficiency and not greater than would be produced by a levy of three mills on the tax duplicate of the district.

These petitions would be circulated among the electors of the district under direction of the election board, parties circulating the same to receive not more than five cents for each signature secured. As soon as signatures, representing a majority of the electors who voted for governor in the last November election, have been secured, the petition shall be certified to the county auditor, who is authorized to place the special tax for collection in June. The petitions must be returned to the election boards not later than May 1 and shall be certified to the county auditor not later than May 20.

The emergency in the bill lies in the fact that "a great many municipalities and school districts are unable to carry on their necessary activities with the funds derived from taxation and all other sources of revenue and if authority is not vested in said subdivision to obtain the necessary funds with which to function, the peace, health and safety of the community will be endangered."

Several school districts in the county are facing a financial situation, which may mean a reduction in the school term this year as the result of the defeat of special millage issues at the general election last November. The new law will place these districts in line to secure immediate relief, it is pointed out, provided they act at once.

one child; Nathan Franklin and a girl friend and Hugh McKenzie, was enroute to Elwood City, Pa., to attend the wedding anniversary of a relative.

While awaiting the car, they noticed William Cline, city hall turnkey. Brady McKenzie said. However, Cline left before the arrival of the car.

McKenzie and his party left the building, when the interurban car stopped on the Broadway tracks. The three men—the two McKenzie brothers and Franklin—set their suit cases down on the sidewalk while the car was being unloaded, Clutter and Mays stepping to the side of the car. The women members of the family, Brady McKenzie declares, were standing beside them on the sidewalk when Patrolman McFarland, accompanied by Cline, approached him and inquired what was in the suit case. McKenzie said he replied that it contained nothing but a set of table ware, a gift for the couple they were to visit.

McFarland, McKenzie claims, ordered that he open it. McKenzie threw back the lid of the suit case and lifted the dishes in one end of it to convince the patrolman that it contained no liquor.

McFarland Defends Action.

"Now let's see what's in those other two bags," McFarland is alleged to have commanded Hugh McKenzie and Franklin. They opened their suit cases. Brady McKenzie charges that the officer ran his hand through articles of clothing which the brother had packed in his bag, but merely looked into the satchel of Franklin. Finding no liquor, the patrolman walked away. McKenzie says the women and children members of his party stood beside them while the search was being made.

In defense of his actions, Patrolman McFarland today declared that he had received two complaints, one Friday night and the other Saturday that the McKenzie brothers had planned to take liquor with them when they left town or bring a quantity back with them when they returned and that he was on the lookout for them. He claimed that he asked Turnkey Cline to walk through the waiting room to ascertain whether the McKenzies were there.

"Did you have a search warrant to look through the suit cases?" McFarland was asked.

"No, I didn't," he replied. "An officer oftimes has not time enough to obtain a search warrant in order to get the man whom he suspects of violating the law."

Says He Would Do It Again.

McFarland said that he picked up the suit cases carried by Brady McKenzie and ordered that he open them, but denied having touched any of the three bags after they were opened, merely glancing inside them.

"I do not feel that I committed an offense in asking those men to open their suitcases, when I suspected they were transferring liquor," he declared. "In fact, I would do the same thing again in similar circumstances."

Brady McKenzie, who is employed at the C. C. Thompson pottery, said he would call the matter to the attention of Chief McDermott today. He said he had not determined whether he will enter suit for damages against the officer.

Coal Miner's Right Hand is Amputated Following Accident

Carl Anderson, 25, Salineville coal miner, suffered the amputation of his right hand at the City hospital today as the result of an accident at the Grant Coal company's mine, about two miles east of Salineville, about 7:30 a. m.

Anderson was operating one of the trains, hauling coal from the mine, when his hand was mangled after being caught between one of the cars and the electric meter. Fellow workers went to his rescue and assisted him to the company's office. Dr. C. A. McCullough, of Salineville, after an examination, ordered Anderson's removal to the hospital. He was brought here in the John Hutson ambulance. Dr. W. A. Hobbs assisted in the operation.

The injured man was working in the place of John Scarry, Salineville, whose arm was broken in a mine accident last Monday. Anderson has a wife and child.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Active industrial stocks led the whole market in a sharp recovery of prices in the early trading today. At the opening of the market and continued to move forward, under the leadership of United States Steel, American Can, American Smelting, Cast Iron Pipe, etc. Oil stocks contributed to the bullish movement, most of the best known independent oils moving upward a point or more in the first hour.

Another record smashing report of freight movement for this time of year was issued by the American Railway association, showing car loadings for the week of February 27, at 928,244 cars, a considerable increase over other comparative records. This was a bullish factor.

U. S. Steel ran forward on heavy trading to 124¾, up 1½ points in the first hour. American Smelting at 99⅜, was up nearly 7 points from Tuesday's low point, showing a complete recovery from the slump which followed the adverse decision in a patent suit. Cast Iron Pipe sold about five points higher and Baldwin, American Can and toher high priced industrials absorbed a good volume of selling at a point or so above Tuesday's close. St. Paul made a good showing in the low priced rails, while Atchison, which gained six points yesterday, sold off on profit taking.

The oil stocks had the benefit not only of an improved technical position in the market, but also a number of favorable developments in the oil industry which passed unnoticed during the heavy liquidation and profit-taking of the last few days. Oil stocks made good gains in the curb and listed market; General Petroleum advancing two points; Sinclair 1½, Phillips 1½, California Petroleum, Cosden and a score of other oils were fractionally higher.

Another forward movement was under way in the motor stocks, with Mack Trucks up to; Studebaker, General Motors, Maxwell and Willys Overland a point higher on the average.

Call money was in good supply at 3½ per cent.

Admits $5,000 "Loan" To Prison Officer In Bribery Trial

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb 18—Another "loan" to an official of the United States penitentiary was placed in the record today at the trial of Albert F. Usarfain, formerly Warden, and L. J. Fletcher, his chief deputy, on charges of conspiracy to solicit and accept bribes.

Mannie Kessler, New York bootlegger serving a sentence at the prison, testified he had loaned L. J. Fletcher $5,000 with which to further plans to enter the ice business in Miami, Fla.

Following this the defense entered brief rebuttal testimony and announced its case complete.

Charles Webster, one of the heads of the agency, is reported to have jumped a $500 bond which was posted last Thursday following his arrest on a charge of assault filed by Mrs. Mary Vropolac, of Parlett, in connection with a raid at her home.

Webster pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Justice W. D. Downer and was released under bond for a hearing on Monday morning. Upon motion of Attorney Thomas Rock, Justice Downer ordered that the case be continued while an effort is being made to locate Webster. It is further charged that Webster is at liberty under bond on a charge of manslaughter at Columbus, where it is said he was a former member of the police force.

Rescue operations were formally abandoned yesterday. No extensions of the shaft or laterals were attempted. "But please, boys, say it ended in a fight, not a quit," Carmichael asked. "The men would have gone on, even given their lives, if I had said so."

Simple Funeral Services.

Brief and simple funeral services were held on top of the cliff overlooking Sand Cave entrance and the pit where the rescue fight was waged. The Rev. C. K. Dickey, pastor of the Morse Cave and Cave City Methodist churches, was in charge of the services, assisted by the Rev. Roy H. Biser of the Glasgow Christian church.

Several hundred folk from the hills and towns around about gathered about the preachers, there was also music by the Cave City combined choirs, reading of scriptures. A sermon of thanks to the world and the rescuers and Collins was left to sleep in the cave that he loved and explored in life.

Woman Mail Carrier Proves Self Heroine; Fights Snow Drifts

DUNDEE, N. Y., Feb.—Mrs. Mary Clark, only woman mail carrier in this vicinity, has proven herself to be as intrepid as the mail carrier of the North Country during the heavy snows of the last few weeks.

Her route takes her from the Dundee post office to the Sharkey post office, over roads which at this time of the year are almost obliterated by snow drifts.

She carries a shovel in the back of her light automobile, and when her car gets stuck she digs it out and travels on. She hasn't missed a day in the delivery of her mail.

POEMS THAT LIVE

Woodman, Spare That Tree.

Woodman, spare that tree!
Touch not a single bough!
In youth it sheltered me,
And I'll protect it now.
'Twas my forefather's hand
That placed it near his cot;
There, woodman, let it stand,
Thy axe shall harm it not!

That old familiar tree,
Whose glory and renown
Are spread o'er land and sea,
And would'st thou hew it down?
Woodman, forbear thy strike!
Cut not its earth-bound ties;
O spare that aged oak,
Now towering to the skies!

When but an idle boy
I sought its grateful shade;
In all their gushing joy
Here too my sisters played.
My mother kissed me here;
My father pressed my hand—
Forgive this foolish tear,
But let that old oak stand!

My heart-strings round thee cling
Close as thy bark, old friend!
Here shall the wildbird sing,
And still thy branches bend.
Old tree! the storm still brave!
And, woodman, leave the spot;
While I've a hand to save,
Thy axe shall harm it not.

Drive on Liquor Violators.

GLOUCESTER, Feb.—Minor courts in Athens county are making a drive against liquor law offenders who were fined here during the past year, or two, and then freed after settling only in part. A number of those persons who forgot to pay their balance are being rounded up.

Student Fined.

HORNELL, N. Y., Feb.—Four Canisto High school students were charged with larceny when arraigned in police court for the theft of forty gallons of wine from the cellar of a prominent citizen here. All paid fines.

LONDON DOCTOR HITS GLUTTONY IN HIS BOOK

Indictment is Made in Dr. Williams' Publication.

"TEA" CONDEMNED

Digestive Organs, Like Body, as Whole, Need Rest.

LONDON, Feb. — "The crime of this generation is gluttony begotten of an arrogant assumption of superiority."

This indictment is made by Dr. Leonard Williams in his recent book, "The Science and Art of Living."

Dr. Williams' denouncement of gluttony and particularly gluttony of Englishmen, has caused more than a mild sensation and aroused a considerable discussion of food and food values.

"An Englishman's breakfast, like his house, is his castle," says Dr. Williams. "Its foundations are laid in porridge; its battlements are of bacon and eggs and bread and butter; its minarets are of marmalade-in all, a mortal gorge, which should move any moderate man to exempt his stomach from any further ordeal for at least 24 hours."

It comes pretty near being treason when Dr. Williams discusses that great national institution of England, "afternoon tea." One must differentiate between "afternoon tea" and "morning tea."

"A large and heavy blue pencil should obliterate the words 'afternoon tea' from the schedule of any sensible, self-respecting civilized community," Dr. Williams says. "Of all the inventions with which a cunning sprite seeks to lure people to physiolological perdition this stodgy assemblage of saccharine and starchy horrors, insinuated between luncheon and dinner is at once the most indefensible and deadly."

The digestive organs, like the body as a whole, have need of a certain amount of rest, Dr. Williams believes, and he advocates fasts as an occasional variant to heavy eating.

The average glutton, however, will be able to forgive the doctor much, for he comes out definitely in favor of the moderate use of alcoholic drinks.

"If I were asked what I mean by their moderate use," says the doctor, "I should reply first that they should not be taken as a matter of routine, but reserved for occasional use. And I should further express a very decided opinion that in any case alcoholic liquors should not be taken until the day's work is over."

There is much food for thought in Dr. Williams' statements, and they have led to much thought of food.

Protest Entered.

COLUMBUS, Feb. — Objection to supervision of their business by the state utilities commission is voiced by members of the Ohio Truckers' association, comprising operators of motor trucks over irregular routes. Claim is made that, inasmuch as they have no regular routes, they are not common carriers. Nature of their business is such, these members assert, that it is virtually impossible to make reports covering their mileage through municipalities and counties. They charge, also, that they are compelled to contribute to state highway funds while their business competitors are exempted from such payments.

"John Doe" Forwards $6,100 in Checks To Revenue Bureau

AUGUSTA, Me., Feb.—Collector Frank J. Ham, of the Internal Revenue department here, is in possession of three checks, totaling $6,100, from "John Doe & Company" and drawn upon three individual Chicago banks. A letter accompanied the checks, each for about $2,000, and merely explained "Tax and interest."

Inquiry made of the three banks revealed that the sender of the checks was not known to them and that he gave the name of "John Smith," of Cleveland, Ohio.

A Child Labor Warning

The New York World, which opposed the child labor amendment on the ground that it was better to leave such matters to the several states, gives this warning to those who have been rejoicing over the defeat of the amendment:

"You gentlemen of the textile mills and canneries and so forth had best remember that the non-ratification of this amendment does not mean its final defeat. If after a sincere effort is made to bring the states up to standard it becomes evident that the curse of child labor is ineradicable by state action, sentiment for this amendment will revive. The employers of child labor are today in the position of the liquor interests before the war. They have been granted a period of grace in which to reform themselves or at least let themselves be reformed by state action. If they are as stupid as the liquor interests they will bring down upon themselves and the country the whole force of the federal power."

It is a true statement of the situation. There is no question in the mind of the American people as to the importance of protecting children from exploitation, ignorance and physical impairment. The only question is as to the best method of affording protection. And if there is not rapid and general improvement in the backward states, either from legislation or from voluntary reform among employers of child labor, there will soon be an overpowering demand again for federal action.

The Iron Ring

Everyone, perhaps, has seen a tree circled with an iron wire and left to its fate. It means death to that tree as surely as an iron band around the waist would mean death to a growing child. The live wood widens and eventually covers the wire ring, and the tree may appear to be as vigorous and durable as its fellows. But the barrier is not really overcome. Inevitably, sooner or later, it cuts the tree in two, and the trunk falls.

A city may be like that. Chicago today is described as bound by an iron ring—its famous "Loop." That elevated line, built around the down-town business section when the city was comparatively small, is now squeezing the life out of it. The transportation facilities are inadequate for that seething center of commerce, industry and recreation, and business has difficulty in growing beyond it.

Wherefore Chicago is now facing the expenditure of more than $400,000,000 to escape from the iron band and continue growing.

How many American cities are likewise hampered, if not by a circular barrier, at least by artificial barriers of some kind on this side or that, hindering natural expansion and preventing the flow of modern traffic.

There was a time when the great problem of the American city was political. Municipal government is now greatly improved. The problem now is engineering, to meet the needs of business and traffic, lest growth be stifled.

Perfection Diet

Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters, author of a popular book on diet, has a recipe for a new race of Americans, healthy and energetic and neither fat nor lean. Here it is:

"Buy a quart of milk for each child and a pint for each adult. Divide the remainder of the food money into three parts, using one-third for fruits and vegetables, one-third for bread, cereal and fats and one-third for meat, eggs, sweets and miscellaneous."

Physical perfection may not be quite so simple a thing as this. Exercise, rest, sleep, fresh air and a few other factors play important roles. Yet Dr. Hunt's financial-dietetic formula would probably make a big improvement in most families.

Especially worth heeding is her warning against too much sweet and starchy food in the diet. She insists that 130 pounds of sugar per year, eaten by the average American, is far too much, and wants to put milk, fresh vegetables, fruits and whole-grain cereals ahead of candy and cake.

Three women dog-catchers in Brooklyn, N. Y., bagged 100 dogs the first day. Wonder how many mice they would catch in a rodent round-up?

The cost of living is still high in Germany, but it's something to have reduced the cost of reparation.

Say what you will about the futility of academic education, they do need some doctors of laws down in Washington.

THE FIGHT FOR MILEAGE TICKETS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The long drawn out fight between the commercial travelers of the United States and the railroads, known as the interchangeable mileage ticket case, is about to be closed. The interstate commerce commission has concluded its hearings, briefs have been filed and the oral arguments have been made, and within four or five weeks it is expected that the commission's decision will be handed down.

Then, unless the decision is adverse to the railroads and appeal is taken to the courts, as was done when the commission decided against the carriers about two years ago, the controversy will be at an end. Should the railroads secure another injunction in the lower courts and the case be carried to the supreme court of the United States, the fight may drag on interminably, for it is probable that congress will be asked to take action in the matter.

The question involved is whether the railroads shall be required to sell interchangeable mileage or scrip coupons at a rate less than the one-way full fare rate, the reduction asked being 20 per cent, or a $90 book for $72.

The reduction would not, of course, apply to commercial travelers alone, for anyone who desires to do so and who has the price can purchase the mileage books when they are on sale. However, the traveling men are the ones who will be most benefited by the reduction, and it is they who have made the fight for it through a central organization known as the National Council of Traveling Salesmen's association.

For almost 50 years the railroads of the country sold mileage books at reduced rates. They did this of their own volition, and not because it was forced upon them by any governmental regulation. As a rule, the discount from the regular fare represented by the cost of the mileage books was 33 1-3 per cent. That is, 1,000 mile books were sold for $20 when the regular fare was cents per mile and a one-way ticket for 1,000 miles would have cost $30.

WIPED OUT IN WAR TIME

This concession to what might be termed wholesale patrons of the railroads—those who bought their transportation in large quantities—was wiped out under government operation of the railroads during the Wrld war. The order of the railroad administration was issued in 1918, and the traveling men say they accepted it without a murmur as a war time necessity.

However, when in 1920 the interstate commerce commission increased passenger rates 20 per cent, or from 3 cents a mile to 3.6 cents, and that increase was made applicable to mileage books, the men who are said to spend on an average nine months out of every year on the road started an agitation to be reinstated in the advantage they once enjoyed.

They appealed to the railroad managements, but without avail, and then were told that the interstate commerce commission could do nothing for them. Then they turned to congress, and in 1922 the national legislative body passed an amendment to the transportation act of 1920 which directed the commission to take up the mileage ticket question.

On March 6, 1923, the commission issued an order, effective May 1 following, prescribing rules and regulations for the issuance by the railroads of the desired mileage tickets. However, the carriers would not take that as final and appealed to the courts, securing an injunction that restrained the commission from making its order effective.

Thereupon the government, the interestate commerce commission and the commercial travelers' organization took an appeal to the supreme court of the United States, which on January 24, 1924, affirmed the decision of the lower court. The supreme court took the position that the interstate commerce commission had not acted on its own independent judgment in reducing the rate for mileage tickets, but had construed the act of congress as mandatory upon it.

The commission then vacated its order and the traveling men began their fight anew in the proceedings that are now coming to a head.

POINTS OF DIFFERENCE

There are numerous points of difference between the travelers and the railroads. In the first place, although not of major importance, they are far from agreeing as to the number of commercial travelers there in the United States. The railroads cite the census reports, which say there are approximately 180,000 "traveling salesmen" in the country, whereas the travelers assert that their various organizations have a total membership of 700,000 and that undoubtedly there are many men and women who are in reality commercial travelers who do not belong, although they have some members who do travel as a business.

The railroads rather get on both sides of this question of numbers, for at one point they argue that there are not sufficient commercial travelers to entitle them to especial consideration in the matter of rates, and a little later they contend that there are so many of them that the proposed reduction would seriously impair the revenues of the carriers.

That question of revenue is the real bone of contention and is considered from several angles. First, the carriers insist that they are not earning the 5.75 per cent net on valuation, which they are supposed to get, and that therefore there can be no reduction of any rates. In answer to this it is asserted that there is nothing in the law that guarantees or promises the railroads any specific rate of earnings, that the tentative valuation of the roads is too high anyhow, and that in any event the earnings of the roads would be increased through the issuance of mileage books because travel would be stimulated and encouraged.

The traveling men also contend that there is no evidence the railroads are not earning a fair return, and that the commission may order mileage books at reduced rates irrespective of the carriers' rate of return on valuation. To hold otherwise, they say, would paralyze the commission's rate-making powers.

Another point stressed by the travelers is that by selling mileage books the railroads have the benefit of holding constantly a great sum of money for which they have not rendered service. For instance, the average traveling man uses a 2,500-mile book every two months, it is claimed, wherefore the roads have his $72 for a 60-day period before completing the service for which it pays. In the aggregate this would run into the millions.

Labor costs have materially decreased since transportation rates were raised in 1920 and the traveling men say that this should be reflected in reductions in passenger rates, especially to them since they are wholesale buyers. The individual commercial man, it is said, will on an average travel about 15,000 miles a year, as against 250 to 300 miles for the average of other patrons of the transportation industry.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—There is a rich man in Gotham whose love for Main street has endured since the day he packed the carpet bag and took the 8:15 for the metropolis. He made his fortune here and won success, but his heart is in his little home town.

In his home he has a replica of his favorite room back yonder. Here he spends his idle moments in an atmosphere of horse hair furniture, a basket of fruit chromo, a hanging coal oil lamp, onyx clock and rag carpet.

In the garage there is an old blacksmith's anvil. He likes to tap it now and then with a hammer so it will give forth that pleasant "ting-ting—ting-ggg!" familiar to every resident of a village. He does not share these cherished views alone.

There are thousands of New Yorkers who remain on and on because their business interests hold them. They would rather have a two-line note of approval in their home town paper than a half column editorial of approval in the New York World.

The longer they live here the firmer the ties are cemented. Most of them day dream of the days they will return but they rarely do. New York inspires the continual greed for gold and they carry on until the end.

Suburban life out where the pavement ends only half satisfies. It is too much affected by city contact. The charm of Main street is not there. One misses the open forum at the village hotel, the back fence gossip and friendly intimacy.

Many suburban dwellers do not know their next door neighbors. The people who pass the front bay window are strangers. There is, of course, compensation in front yards, trees and porches. But the beloved intangible something of Main street is not there.

New York has single buildings which in value are the equivalent of entire cities. The Equitable, assessed for $30,000,000, is worth more than all the property in Amsterdam, N. Y., or Davenport, Ia. The Waldorf, valued at $12,225,000, is worth more than all the property in Columbia, S. C.; Joliet, Ill., or San Diego, Cal. Altman's, valued at $14,060,000, is worth more than all Decatur, Ill., or Sacramento, Cal. The total assessed valuation of property in New York is $13,125,457,745. It is more than the assessed valuation of the following states together: Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Arkansas, Nevada, Colorado, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Washington, Oregon and Minnesota. These 14 great commonwealths, comprising more than two-thirds of the entire United States west of the Mississippi, are—all of them—worth $13,050,000,000.

I believe the thing the transplanted Main streeter in the metropolis misses most is the clubby Pullman washroom intimacy of the small town. I don't believe small town people appreciate this simple neighborliness. Sticking the head into the barber shop door to see if Bill is there or to whistle out front for Tom to join you—well, it cannot be done here. If you stuck your head into a barber shop door suddenly you might be taken for a holdup bandit, and a shrill whistle in front of any home might cause your arrest by the society for the prevention of unnecessary noises.

Carnegie hall is soon to be torn down and a modern office building will arise where one of the world's greatest musical centers has operated for 33 years. There is also a rumor that the Metropolitan opera house is soon to be demolished. A new site is now being considered.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By DANIEL O'CONNELL.

DUBLIN, Feb. 18.—Remarkable developments the Irish political situation have taken place during the past few months.

The two outstanding facts are these: First, it is no longer certain that the Republicans will stay outside the Dail and continue to carry on their guerrilla political tactics in the country. Secondly, the Free State or government party is no longer the power that it was, due to dissension within its ranks.

Many of the government party's former supporters have disagreed with President Cosgrave over matters of policy and have formed themselves into a party under the name of the national group, led by Joseph McGrath, a budding young statesman in the thirties. His party claims that President Cosgrave is not carrying out a sufficiently national policy and is ousting all those who assisted Michael Collins in the fight against the 'Black and Tans."

This new party looks as if it might be the genesis of a future big Irish party, for many of President Cosgrave's biggest supporters are inclined to agree with its ideals. It includes many of the ex-officers of the old Republican army who sided with Collins at the time of the treaty. General Liam Tobin is, perhaps, the biggest figure, next to McGrath, in the party, for he commands general support and respect because of his distinguished record in the rebellion and its results. Disappointed and disgruntled ex-officers of all political parties are flocking to the new party in hopes that it may be able to remedy their grievances.

Some Free State ministers, and Kevin O'Higgins, the minister for home affairs, in particular, describe the attitude taken by the new group as "incentive to mutiny," and say that the state and the welfare of the country should come before all things and personalities. He indicates that he will not hesitate to put down any attempt at mutiny or rebellion with all the means at his command.

The government has the support of General Mulcahy in its opposition to the National group. Mulcahy is very popular in the country; and should President Cosgrave resign for reasons of ill health, or for any other reason, it is considered likely that either Mulcahy or O'Higgins will be the next president.

Meantime Eamonn de Valera continues to decline to enter the Dail until the oath to which he objects is withdrawn. His party is gaining power as a result of the government party split, but it is considered that he still lacks strength to win a general election.

The Labor group is having its difficulties, too. Tom Johnson and Jim Larkin continue at loggerheads and are not likely to compose their differences yet. Larkin's influence over the workers is by no means as strong as it was, due to the unemployment problem, and he is continually in and about the courts over libel cases. He is now appearing before the courts in his examination for bankruptcy.

Therefore, though the government party is full of dissension, it seems certain that it will continue in power for some time yet, because the other parties have the same difficulties.

Irishmen should have enough elections this year to satisfy them.

Due to the action of the National group in resigning from the Dail, there will be a miniature general election a few weeks from now. Besides this, there is a probability of the government resigning in the summer and seeking a vote of confidence, while in December the entire Free State will be called upon to elect about 20 new senators to replace those automatically retiring from office. Distinct from these elections, there will be the usual municipal elections of local bodies, whose seven years' period of office is nearly ended.

Now that the political outlook has quieted following the formation of the National group, the country is threatened with a new party under the leadership of Lord Middleton, who, as St. John Brodrick, was British minister of war from 1900 to 1903.

Its chief plank is likely to be a constitutional opposition to the boundary between the Free State and Ulster. The party is likely to get considerable support in the cities and towns, and, in a coalition with the farmer party—the third strongest party in the Free State—it is considered extremely likely that it will loom largely in the near future in the political fortunes of the country.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

COLLINS DEAD—BETTER SO.

Floyd Collins' suffering is over. The rescue party found him dead, in the cave trap. He had been dead more than 24 hours when rescuers broke through the roof of his tomb.

Better dead than living, in any case, if only one or two days of the intense suffering were escaped.

This man's death illustrates the power, the weakness of human imagination. A hundred men risked their lives to save his. Doctors went to his rescue by flying machine, but could do nothing. The entire nation followed closely the tragic story.

Imagination showed the man lying in the low cave, his leg crushed by the 14,000 pound rock, existing day after day, for nearly two weeks, in horrible agony and discomfort.

OUR FEEBLE IMAGINATION

It was possible to imagine clearly that dreadful situation. And the nation sympathized. Any legislature would gladly have voted $100,000 to save Collins.

The same nation, through its legislators, refuses to pass the child labor amendment that would free tens of thousands of children from years of slow torment.

The feeble public imagination cannot see clearly those children in the mills.

A GREAT NATION'S DANGER

Brigadier General Mitchell, a brave man, staking his brigadier's star, as Cyrus H. K. Curtis has well said, on his fight for the national safety, deserves the thanks of this nation, and will have them.

If he has found no supporters high up in the army or navy, more shame to his superior officers that are controlled by battleship building interests, or have idled away their time in the public service, learning nothing.

Desk men that get extra flying pay without ever flying, fail to support General Mitchell, quite naturally. He flies and risks his neck in our inferior machines constantly. That puzzles them. But men that flew in the war are back of him, 2,000 of them. And whatever other "heads" of the army and navy may do it is quite certain that President Coolidge, the real head of the army and navy, will see that Mitchell is properly treated.

Men of every branch of service, in the late war, saw with their own eyes the power of aircraft. Everyone of them should write to the president, if only 10 lines, urging an adequate air defense. President Coolidge will be glad to hear from any ex-soldier on any other citizen.

Every other citizen should read the testimony before the congressional committee yesterday by General Amos A. Fries, chief of the army chemical warfare service.

"There is no real answer to gas attacks, except airplanes with which to stop the enemy's onslaught, and gas him in turn."

General Fries further testified that gas warfare with the new chemicals would be 50 times as deadly as it was in the last war.

And, as for anti-aircraft guns, smoke curtains, and sprinkled smoke, combined with poison gases and rained down from the clouds would make anti-aircraft worthless artillery. The marksmen would be firing at a sky filled with smoke, while the flyers rained down their explosives and deadly gases.

EVERY MAN'S BUSINESS

The people's business is to realize what the next war will mean, and see that the nation is prepared for defense. Nice old maids in the navy quote Captain Mahan's book on sea power and his statement that command of the sea means command of the world.

Captain Mahan's, a great sea captain, knew as little about modern war, when he wrote his book, as Napoleon knew about transporting troops by rail, or using submarines to attack England.

Air power is now the only power. Who rules the air can rule the world. The great cities, the dwelling of every rules, president or king, is at his mercy.

This country needs fighting aircraft, ten thousand of them, the most efficient fleet in the world, to be used for the mails and other public use in peace, for fighting in war.

And, whether they "pay" or not, is of no importance. Safety is cheap at any price. One efficient grafting patriot, if a war came, could cost this nation more than all the flying machines necessary to save us from foreign aviators, and from home-bred corporation and individual grafters. If you believe that write to the president and tell him so. You'll help to pay the grafting bills and get your share of war from the sky, if war ever catches us unprepared.

You may say "too much aircraft talk in that column, I'll skip for a while."

All right, skip, if a war finds us lacking an adequate air force, you will remember this warning.

"This country is unprepared, defenseless as Germany was, when the French marched into the Ruhr. Any one of four nations, in a sudden attack, could destroy every great city in America and hold the nation to ransom.

The oceans no longer protect us. The Pacific coast is only 30 hours from Asia and the Atlantic coast 10 hours from Europe by airplane.

First would come the swift high power planes, throwing our cities and our unprepared government into confusion, with attacks on half a dozen cities at once, including Washington. Then would come the slower, heavy bombing machines, to force conviction upon us.

And, finally, would arrive in very safe machines, plenipotentiaries, with power to fix terms for us.

If they happened to be very polite gentlemen with exquisite manners and slanting eyes, courteously expressing their regret, and bringing us a new set of ready made immigration laws, we should not like it.

But that would not help us. Flying machines would help us and nothing else would.

Our army is at the mercy of gas and bombs from the sky. Our cities under airplane attack would be made horrible holes of suffocation and terror.

Our lumbering battleships would be a ghastly joke. And the government official that defends and urges reliance on the battleship in defiance of common sense, because his friends make millions in building battleships is a dangerous traitor and needs to have the truth told plainly.

God help those responsible from top to bottom, if an attack from the air ever finds this nation defenseless.

Dancing Musical Hit, "Lollipop," at Ceramic on Mar. 3

Henry W. Savage will offer his dancing musical hit, "Lollipop," with Ada May and the original New York cast and production, at the Ceramic theatre Tuesday, March 3.

Its small star, Ada May, has recently celebrated her twenty-first birthday. December was the month on and after which Miss Ada May qualified as a voter. In "Lollipop" she is playing her first star role, and as Zelda Sears, author of the libretto, declared in a curtain speech on the opening night in New York, "Ada May is the life of the party." Stardom in musical comedy, especially under the conservative management of Henry W. Savage, is unusual at twenty-one, but Ada May carries her big responsibilities lightly and delightfully. If she weren't so young she might not play her part with such youthful joy and abandon. As to experience, the little yellow-haired "Lollipop" star has danced in public since she was five, and has been playing prominent roles in musical productions for the past six years.

In "Lollipop" Ada May has a role that suits her perfectly, that of an orphan who determines to make her way in the world. There is comedy, romance and marvelous dancing as the story progresses, and the fine cast and chorus add to the joys of a delightful performance, and also enhance the charms of youthful Ada May. The company is one of 60 persons and embraces a thoroughly New York chorus of charming girls, also a troupe of twelve Tiller Girls from London, known as the "Dancing Lollipops." This same company has just completed an engagement at the Selwyn theatre, Chicago.

Answers to Questions

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Review-Tribune Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C. This offer applies strictly to information. The Bureau can not give advice on legal, medical and financial matters. It does not attempt to settle domestic troubles nor undertake exhaustive research on any subject. Q. Have Detroit and Pittsburgh any public schools where the "work-study-play" plan is followed? I. T. M.

A. Detroit has 85 schools on this plan. Pittsburgh has 40.

Q. Has football always been played by teams of eleven? H. J.

A. When the game of football was first played, 15 men were on a team. The number was reduced to 12 and then to 11, as it now stands.

Q. What is the story about the writing of the "Recessional" by Kipling? B. W. D.

A. Kipling wrote the poem called "Recessional" but regarding it as inadequate, threw away the manuscript. Mrs. Kipling found it in the waste basket from which she rescued it. The poem was sent immediately to the London Times and appeared in that paper on the date of the celebration of Queen Victoria's Great Jubilee.

Q. How have the four moons of Jupiter been responsible for the advancement of geography and navigation? I find this statement in a book. W. S. T.

A. The Naval Observatory says to determine his longitude a navigator or explorer gets the local time from astronomical observations and the Greenwich time from his chronometer. The difference between the two then gives the longitude from Greenwich. In the days before accurate chronometers were available the moons of Jupiter could be made use of as a substitute. Almanacs were published, as they still are, which gave in advance the time of all the eclipses of the four moons, which occur pretty frequently, and an explorer provided with such an almanac and a small telescope, by observing an eclipse, could get the Greenwich time at whatever other place in Europe the almanac was constructed for, though by no means so accurately as it would be got from a modern chronometer. The use of a telescope at sea being difficult, this method of determining longitude was not suited to mariners. The first almanac of the moons of Jupiter appeared at Bologna in 1688.

Q. Why is it stated that no one was ever bitten by a snake in Jerusalem? A. B. C.

A. The authorities we have consulted say that there are poisonous snakes in Jerusalem, and inasmuch as vipers are apt to attack people regardless of the vicinity where they are found, the statement made that persons in Palestine have never been bitten is not based on fact.

Q. When was the law passed reducing the flag to thirteen stripes? B. B.

A. The Continental Congress passed a resolution on June 14, 1777, that the flag have 13 stripes alternating red and white and a union consisting of 13 stars of white on a field of blue. Vermont having been admitted to the Union in 1791, and Kentucky in 1792, Congress enacted on January 13, 1794, a law that the flag of the United States be 15 stripes, alternating red and white, and that the union be 15 stars. The number of states increased rapidly and for this reason in 1818, Congress enacted a law that the number of stripes be reduced to 13 to represent the 13 original states and that the number of stars be increased to 20, or one for each state in the Union.

Q. What was the remark that Dr. Lyman Abbott made about Jenny Lind's singing? A. O. S.

A. He said "It was impossible to doubt the Resurrection while she was singing 'I Know That My Redeemer Liveth.'"

Q. When did arithmetic originate? S. W. P.

A. Mathematics as a science made it first definite appearance among the Egyptians. There are evidences of its antiquity among the Chinese, Hindus and Babylonians, but the earliest written records of considerable mathetmatical progress are found in Egypt, and give an interesting view of the state of the science as early as the latter part of the third millennium before Christ.

During the last civil war in China ninety native banks in Canton were closed for more than three weeks.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of our dear Mother, Mrs. Clarinda Ellen Campbell Freshwater, who passed away February 18th, 1923.
Thou art gone but not forgotten,
Oh, how sad for us to part
And thou knowest not the anguish
That dwell within our hearts
We will strive to bear the burden
While we linger here alone
And our hearts will leap with rapture
When our God shall call us home.

MAY ESTABLISH TOURIST CAMP

Measure Introduced in Legislature Backed by Healthers.

The state health department, cooperating with the state road commission, is planning to create statewide interest in the bill that has been introduced in the state legislature to establish tourists' camps under supervision of the health department in various sections of the state.

Since West Virginia has been opened to tourists by means of good roads the state must have tourists camps, and the biggest question is that of sanitation, according to Chief State Sanitary Engineer Tisdale.

"The splendor of West Virginia' scenery is going to attract tourists from all parts of the union, and the high typhoid fever rate of the rural sections testifies to the number of springs and wells that are contaminated by human waste, and of the dangers of drinking water while traveling through the state," said Mr. Tisdale.

Numbers of impure water supplies were made pure last year, but the road building program is developing faster than organization against disease prevention, as West Virginia still stands third from the bottom of all states in the union in the amount expended for health sanitation. The opening of heretofore unpenetrated parts of the state adds a new burden to the already inadaquate organization is a statement made by the state health department.

New York, Ohio and other states having networks of good roads take yeatly precaution to keep possible camp sites free from waste and to warn tourists of the dangers of polluted waters. Many states have special camp sites with posted rules and regulations for preserving sanitation. These states are also fortified by a staff of from 20 to 40 sanitary engineers and inspectors, and twice as many co operating district health officers, compared to three sanitary engineers and only six county health officers in West Virginia.

Dog Acts as Call Boy.

DeWolf Hopper, the comedian, maintains that he has one of the smartest dogs in the world. It is only a mongrel that he picked up in the streets, but "Mutt," as he is named, acts as a call boy in the theatre, barking and scratching at the door for an actor when it is his time to be on the stage. The dog learned his trick in three lessons, and now, after he has become acquainted with the play, does not have to be told when it is time to call an actor.

King of Gypsies, Violinist Rigo, of Romantic Past, Quits

Man Who Eloped With Princess Chimay Now Works Hard in Tiny New York Cafe.

NEW YORK, Feb.—Another royal crown is going begging today.

Who will be the next "King of the Gypsies?" The logical successor to "King" Nicholas John, of New London, Conn., who has just been buried at Yonkers, is Rigo, the gypsy violinist. Through the haze of cigarette smoke and the aroma of stale wine of a little cafe on the Eastside, Rigo magnanimously disclaimed the honor.

"The 'King of the Gypsies' is not dead, for I am the King!" he declared and added, with emphasis, "But I don't want the job. There is no money in it, and there is no palace to live in."

Rigo once had a palace—as grand as any king's. It was on the fabled Nile, in romantic Egypt. He occupied it with Princess de Chimay, who was Clara Ward, of Detroit, daughter of a Michigan millionaire. Rigo was playing at a cafe in Montmartre, Paris, when he met her.

Flies With Rigo.

The princess had a husband and two children, but she surrendered everything for the dapper gypsy head of the Boulevards, who had become known as one of the world's most famous lovers.

The younger generation will not remember Rigo. His name will come back as a pleasant memory to many women to whom alimony is no longer a novelty. His name is not such a pleasant memory to numerous men now well along into their second marriage.

Eighteen years ago, in Budapest, Hungary, 2000 gypsies surrounded the hotel where Rigo was living with Princess de Chimay and formally offered him the crown—infact, they insisted that he accept it.

"I am poor today," Rigo said. I would like to wander with the gypsies, but I am not young; I am fifty-six, I said fifty-six, not sixty-five.

Romance Not Dead.

"Romance? No, it is not dead within me. I am an older man than I used to be. Time is no friend of man. I am fat. I have not so much hair. There is not so much color in my face. Eight years I have played here. I used to play at the Techan Tavern, San Francisco, and many other wonderful places. Once I got $2,000 a week in vaudeville. Beautiful women courted me. Ha! ha! They don't now. I don't get much money here. But it is a living. I am happily married. A beautiful girl, twenty-three years younger than I am; daughter of a rich Baltimore man. I am happy. I get home at 4, 5, 6, o'clock in the morning. My wife she brings breakfast to me in bed. She my wife. She is beautiful. The Princess de Chimay was a beautiful woman, too. I have a picture of her face tattooed on my arm. Twelve years ago I spent my bridal night. The very same bed was in the room. I wrote our names on it.

"No I don't want to be King of the Gypsies. I just want to be happy and think about the past."

Japan a Fish Eating Country.

Japan eats more fish per capita than any other large nation, and the Japanese are singularly free from goiter troubles. This, it is maintained, is due to the iodine value of salt watter fish foods. Physicians now are recommending that growing young girls eat fish at least three times a week where they have a tendency to thyroid trouble, which is indicative of goiter.

Berlin Builds Many New Homes; City is Now Overpopulated

BERLIN, Feb.—With the aid of the revenues accruing from the rent tax of the municipal authorities of Berlin have built 2,000 apartments, partly in semi detached houses, just outside Steglitz, a suburb in the southwest of Berlin.

Further, 3,000 flats are to follow shortly, thus providing accommodation for about 20,000 people. In the western outskirts of this city the building of tenement houses is ceasing and semi-detached houses with tiny gardens are being erected instead.

Since the war the housing conditions in Berlin have become alarming. Berlin, where hundreds of flats were empty before the war, has become thoroughly overpopulated.

Clear The Head Stop That Cold

Cold in the head means a germ attack. The membranes become inflamed, head becomes stuffed. And that's misery.

Quick relief demands direct attack on those germs. Apply Ely's Cream Balm in the nostrils and breathe it. The head clears instantly, inflammation is subdued. The cold disappears.

Don't wait for internal effects. Fight the cold where it is—in the air passages. Ask your druggist for a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Enjoy this quick relief.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $5. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

BURBON TAKES UP HIS DUTIES

New Deputy Sheriff to Launch Work Weighing Auto Trucks.

Herman Burbon of Salem, who was appointed deputy sheriff Monday by Sheriff George Wright will devote considerable time during the next few weeks in the weighing of trucks.

For a first offense, the law has levied a fine ranging from $25 to $100 and for a second offense the fine shall be not less than $100.

Two years ago the county commissioners purchased a complete truck weighing outfit, but it has not been in general use.

Mr. Burton who was appointed constable for Perry township by the Perry township trustees last year will resign immediately, and it has not been indicated by the trustees whether or not a successor will be appointed.

STATE TO OPEN GRADING BIDS

Bids for the grading and surfacing of the Harrisburg-Wellsville road will be opened by the State Highway department at Columbus at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, according to advices just received by County Surveyor Lloyd C. Kirk.

This road is to be graded to a width of 34.5 feet. The new waterbound macadam surface is to be 18 feet wide. The job will cost $109,033.97 for grading and surfacing, according to the estimates now on file. The improvement will extend for 25,546 feet or 4.839 miles. It is to be completed not later than November 1 next.

PLAN TO DISCUSS ROAD PROGRAMS

Trustees of Butler and Knox townships will meet with the county commissioners next Tuesday for the purpose of going over the road improvement in those townships for this year. In Butler township, it is proposed to improve that section of the Salem-Hanover road while Hanover township proposes to grade the section of this road in its township this year.

West township trustees are interested in improving several roads in that township, which would give an extension of highways leading to Salem, and also to the south from the Cox highway.

A WOMAN'S WORK WHILE NEVER DONE MADE VERY EASY

Good Health, Good Digestion, Good Sleep, Convert Day's Tasks Into Pleasant Ones —Ka-di-ok Points the Way.

MRS. JAMES GEPHARDT, Charleston, W. Va.

"Man's work ends with the setting sun;
But woman's work is never done."

There is a great truth, theoretically, in these two lines, but a way has been discovered whereby the arduous tasks and daily routine of the housewife, borne down by aches and ills, can be made most pleasant.

Mrs. James Gephardt, residing at Flat 211, Goshorn St., Charleston, W. Va., is the discoverer of this way, and she tells of it in a statement to the Ka-di-ok representative. "I found that Ka-di-ok is a wonder as a tonic to build up one's nerves and to give one an excellent, healthy appetite so that you may eat what you like with no fear of indigestion," she said. "It gives one refreshing sleep and one gets up in the morning ready for a woman's work and a desire to do the tasks that come in a woman's way. I say Ka-di-ok is a wonder, and I for one, am boosting Ka-di-ok for all I am worth. It keeps one in perfect health and makes me feel good all the time."

So it is with woman's tasks. Some are naturally nervous and fretful, and to those, Ka-di-ok should appeal, as it did in the above case. Not only for nervousness, Ka-di-ok is highly recommended for kidney and liver troubles, rheumatism, headaches, bad blood, auto-intoxication, and other ills arising from a disordered stomach and impoverished blood.

Ka-di-ok is sold and recommended in East Liverpool by Mathews' Cut Rate Medicine Store, 129 W. Sixth Street.

Made Party Defendant.

On its own motion, the Valley Motor Transit Co., was made a party defendant in the case of Byrne Mollcban against the Steubenville, East Liverpool and Beaver Valley Traction Co., which was a claim for $300 damages as a result of an automobile wreck, and appealed by the traction interests from a justice of the peace court in East Liverpool to common pleas court.

Suit Instituted

Claiming that there is a balance of $276.85 due on a note for $1,481.85 Eli Bricker and Fred Bricker, doing business as Eli Bricker & Son have filed a petition in common pleas court against Fred Hippley and Lina Hippley, residing on R. F. D. No. 6 Salem. The petition shows that $1,205 has been paid the plaintiffs by the defendants.

May Improve Road

The improvement of the Benton road north of Salem is proposed by the County Commissioners and this work will no doubt be ordered at a very early date.

At a meeting of the Commissioners this week the board discussed this project, and it may follow that detailed plans will be made a matter of record next Monday.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

Century of Love Keeps Aged Woman Unmarried to End

Wealthy Southern Father Refused to Permit Marriage 100 Years Ago, and She Never Wed.

OKMULGEE, Okla., Feb. — Cherishing for more than a century a love of her girlhood, Miss Nancy Boyd of Okmulgee, has lived 119 years without marrying. Her life has been a round of disappointments; but as she sits in the deepening twilight of life she is happy in the thought that soon she and her lover will be reunited.

The daughter of a rich Tennessee plantation owner, her love for Jem Turner, the son of a poor man, was frowned upon by her father, who visioned for her a marriage into the ranks of the old southern aristocracy. Turner's persuasion that she not defy her father caused Miss Boyd to put aside hopes of an immediate marriage.

"I didn't stop loving him, though," she says. "Jem and I loved each other more than ever and began planning how we could get married later, when father might soften. You see, I refused to marry any one else.

Could Not Forget.

"Father thought I had forgotten Jem, and in the weeks that followed he had entertainment after entertainment in my honor, and young men for miles around attended them. I received many proposals of marriage, but I refused them, to the great anger of my father.

"Every week-end our big plantation house would be thronged with guests, and I was sure to get at least one proposal at each party, but no one could take the place of Jem.

"Finally my father asked me why I continually refused to marry. I told him. He vowed then that I should not marry Jem during his life. But we continued to hope."

This was in 1824. Years passed. Nancy grew to womanhood, Jem to manhood. Then came the year that began the southland's greatest tragedy—1861.

Still Hoped.

But Nancy and Jem still hoped. She was considered an old woman and he an old man. One evening as the war shadows were deepending, they stood on a small bridge near the Boyd plantation, discussing the seemingly inevitable conflict. Suddenly a brae-legged negro boy dashed past on a mule, shouting at them as he went:

"De wah is stahted! Dey's killin' ev'rybody!"

"Nancy," said Jem, "I'm going."

"I felt then—instinct, maybe," Miss Boyd says—"that I would never see Jem again. I told him so, but he laughed.

"'That is not a very cheerful thing to say,' he told me. But it was a true prophecy. I never saw him again. Throughout that bitter war I never heard from him. Father gave all we had to the Southern army, and in the last days of the war he was killed by a negro he once owned.

Killed at Front.

"The war ended, and I learned Jem was killed three days after he left Nashville in 1861. I was the last of our family, and as all our property was gone there was nothing for me to do but go to an aunt that had a small farm in Arkansas."

"The war ended, and I learned Jem was killed three days after he left Nashville in 1861. I was the last of our family, and as all our property was gone there was nothing for me to do but go to an aunt that had a small farm in Arkansas."

There she remained, working hard for a living from 1865 to 1918. She was off the farm but once.

Miss Boyd rode on a train for the first time in 1918, when she came to Okmulgee, and she has never ridden in an automobile.

"I'd rather like to ride in one of those automobiles some time, when I feel better," she says. "I don't like them as well as I did our fine coaches, drawn by beautiful horses. Ours were among the best in the South," she adds with pride.

"But then there are many things of this day and time that I don't care for. Everything is so cheap and artificial. Even love is not prompted by the sentiments and emotions, as it was in my day. You will think me old fashioned. I am dreadfully so."

Miss Boyd, apparently, is in good health, but her eyesight is rapidly failing.

She has a collection of Civil War newspapers, with brief stories of many important battles. She obtained all papers available searching for news of her lover.

Sirens Used To Scare Birds.

Sirens used for marine signalling will be used in the orchards at Sydney, New South Wales, to scare away birds from the orchards and vineyards in the irrigated districts. The sirens would be operated electrically from the farm house whenever a flock appeared. The irrigation Commission of the government has set aside a sum of money to carry on this unique experiment.

Zane Grey's New Film, "Border Legion," Booked at Ceramic

The "Old West" has come back! Once again in the far North country where Zane Grey wrote the novel "The Border Legion," cowboys in picturesque garb ride through the great stretches where wire fences have not come.

Once again the tinkle of spurs and the creak of saddle leather break the lazy hush of midday.

Once again, in a cloud of dust that darkens the sun, great herds of cattle move through the sagebrush wilderness with the steady rumble of a thousand hoofs.

Once again the rolling hills hear the shrill "coo-ee" of the cowboys, riding herd with one knee thrown nonchalantly over the saddle horn.

The old west was reborn for Paramount's picturiatiozn of "The Border Legion," in locations personally selected by Zane Grey. Far in the North country, a selected cast of Paramount players headed by Antonio Morono, Helene Chadwick, Charles Ogle, Rockcliffe Fellows and Gibson Gowland, brought to life the characters that lived long ago.

Approximately 100 minor players, chiefly cowboys, take part in the spectachar production, directed by William Howard.

"The Border Legion," which opens at the Ceramic Theatre on Thursday was filmed true to life.

The story, adapted to the screen by George Hull, has to do with the activities of a band of ruthless outlaws who preyed upon settlers and gold towns in the early days of Idaho.

A replica of one of the great cattle drives of the early days is a striking sight.

Here is, perhaps one of the greatest of all Zane Grey tales, produced as is fitting such a story, with a cast that approaches perfection. Moreno and Miss Chadwick have featured roles, and others, besides those already mentioned, include Charles Ogle, James Corey, Edward Gribbon and Luke Cosgrave.

He who fears all germs does not know that most of them are our very good friends, without which we could not exist.

Karesia had returned to apparent calm. Some of the things Rossiter had said were like divination, only strangely perverted. There was only one being on earth who could shake her belief in John Dascome and that was John Dascome himself, and she had his declaration of innocence. What drove a chill through Karesia was the realization that there were others who would think as Rossiter did; her discovery had not cleared Dascome of guilt; it had plunged him into further trouble. There rose before her the grim face of the law; was it possible that he would be forced into court on another charge, made to endure another term of agony? He knew the law, she did not; was that the reason he had paced the floor, thinking, thinking, his face gray-white? Was that the reason he had determined upon secrecy? Was he being racked by suspense, hoping from day to day that he might lay his hand on the criminal, fearing that he woudd not, knowing that, if he did not, he would be called to account? That was a thing he would not tell her; he knew that she would be in agony—as she was now. Then another fear gripped her; would Rossiter betray what she had told him?

The extremity of her terror froze her into calm. "I am sorry I spoke so sharply," she said through stiff lips. "I realize, as you say, that every individual has a right to his convictions. I don't agree with you, but that is no reason why I should be angry with you. I am glad, really, that we have had this talk. You are too big for hatred—you couldn't do a mean thing. What I have told you is in confidence—I know you will not speak of it."

Rossiter flashed a glance at her. "You love him pretty completely, don't you, Kara!" he said half bitterly, half sadly, and at the same time with a touch of amusement. "No, Kara dear, I may be all sorts of things I shouldn't be, but I don't think that I am an out-and-out cad. What you have told me is as safe with me as it is with you—don't worry over that. And, Kara, if ever there is anything I can do for you, personally, call on me. I bear you no grudge, dear—you've been honest throughout."

Even in her acute anxiety, Karesia did not forget Dascome's daughter. "Thank you, Rand, I'll remember. . . . Clarice wanted you to know—that's why I came."

"She'll come out all right, Kara. Real talent is scarce—that's been one of my troubles these last weeks. Tell her that I said she must go on in pictures."

He put Karesia in her car and patted her hand in parting: "You're not the kind to go under, either. No matter what happens, we must stay friends." He seemed very anxious that she should understand that he bore her no ill-will.

XL

Karesia did not know how she reached her house; she drove mechanically, went up to her room wrapped in the same ludir cloud of fear; Dascome was in danger. If they did not find out very soon who was the criminal, he would go through that agony all over again; he would not live through it, for there is a limit to endurance. She was not looking down a gray vista now, she was looking down a precipice.

When the telephone rang, she went to it mechanically. It was Dascome speaking, his voice deep and even. "Karesia?"

"Oh—John!" She had not meant it to be a cry, but it was.

"What is it?" he asked, alarm in every word.

Karesia controlled herself instantly. "I was—so surprised—and pleased."

"Are you ill?"

"No, no—I was thinking of something else when you called. I am well."

Evidently Dascome was doubtful. "If you hear anything that frightens you, you must tell me, Karesia. You must call me at once, no matter what hour of the day or night."

Not for anything would she have told him of the misery she was in; he had carefully concealed from her what he was enduring; it would only add to his anxiety. "May I call you at any time? I am so glad!"

His voice had a note of relief. "Yes, here at the apartment," and he gave her the number. "I want to tell you about Elaine. First of all, we found the identification marks of which I told you—there is no doubt at all in the mind of any one. Then, today, they made their examination, two other physicians and Dr. Kreppler. It's a growth, they say, the result of the injury she received when a child. In her present condition, she can live only a short time—they think another attack, such as she has had, would prove fatal—convulsions would induce hemorrhage. It's your care of her that has kept her alive. They held a consultation—the case is desperate. They advise an operation—it's the only chance of saving her."

It passed through Karesia's mind, "And if she should die, there are those who will say that he meant it to be so." She asked as steadily as she could: "Who—John?"

"In a few days. The examination had to be under an anesthetic. She has come out of it safely and is sleeping."

Karesia's thoughts had moved on. "Would an operation bring back her memory?"

"We hope so."

"Oh, John! Then she can tell us——"

"If she lives through it," Dascome said evenly.

It's a dangerous operation?"

"Very. But it has been done before."

Karesia was driven to the question. "Have you found out anything yet, John? Can't Colt help you to find out?"

"I sent him to Crisomby Lakes at once, Karesia, but he has discovered nothing."

What Rossiter had said passed through Karesia's mind: "I'll wager he has Colt busy covering up their tracks." Whatever Dascome did would be misconstrued.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS
By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Lover Was Gased.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: While away on my vacation this summer I met a man six years older than myself. We went places together and had a wonderful time. When I left he said he loved me and later wanted me as his wife. When I came back we corresponded with each other and now he says he is in a position to marry. My parents do not approve of him and he wants me to leave home and go back to his home with him. He has a lovely bungalow and a position that pays fine. While he was at war he was gassed twice. Do you think that would have any effect later on?

TROUBLED FRIEND.

You and not your parents are choosing a husband and therefore you should let the extent of your love answer your question. If you have any doubt about your desire to marry the man, put off your decision until you know more definitely what you want. The fact that he was gassed twice might cause trouble later on and again it might not. He might always suffer from stomach trouble and spells of dizziness. If he seems in good condition now, however, you have little to worry you in that respect

Dictates of Heart Should Determine Cause.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am only 22 and have been married four years and have two darling children. I have never loved my husband but was persuaded to marry him by my parents although they knew I loved a boy my own age. This man had money and to my parents that meant everything. The boy I loved is still single and just getting a start in life now. I believe he still cares for me although he never says anything about our love for each other when we meet. My husband no longer wants me and he takes no interest in the children. I have talked to him of divorce and he says he will settle a sum of money on me or give me monthly sums. Although I cannot trust him in many ways I really believe he would do that faithfully for the sake of his children. I want to do the right thing for my babies and it seems to me it would not injure their name if their father and I separated now. He enjoys the company of other women so much that I have to suffer all the time and I think such a life as he leads would be just as hard on their name. But my mother and father still urge me to stay with my husband. I have always tried to do as they have wanted because they have been very good to me, but their advice in the first place was wrong and so now I doubt their opinion. What would you say?

METTA.

You are a very fortunate young woman to take your two children and leave your husband, knowing that there will be means of support. Follow the dictates of your own heart in this matter. I see no reason why you should stay tied to a man who no longer wants you.

Wants To Dance.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been in this town two years. I do admire dancing, but am undecided whether to start going to dances or not. Mother and father wouldn't mind if I went except for what other people would think and say. What should I do?

BROWN EYES.

If you go to dances at respectable places people will not talk. You shou'd not, however, go alone but should join a party of friends. You might enter a dancing class. Even if you do not need lessons you will meet people in that way.

Overworked Mother.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: To begin with, I am 47 years old and the mother of six children, three boys and three girls. I have two boys and a girl married, and they were all home yesterday with their children. My 15-year-old high school daughter is a good enough girl, but she worries me so. She won't take her lunch to school even when I'm short of money; she has to have her hair dressed in town and won't wear any but the best silk stockings, and of course the 12 and 19-year old boys, still at home, are an expense, too. Now I work every day away from home, and do all the housework myself. My children simply won't help me unless I fuss, and then they don't half do the work. I earn $18 a week and spend it all on the home. This morning I had to borrow 15 cents carfare to give the last cent I had to this daughter who refuses to take her lunch, so she could buy lunch in town. My husband only gives me $12 a week for grocery bill, lights, gas bill and never buys either the children or myself anything, not even a book. Yet he fusses at us all the time and says everything is all my fault, and he doesn't like it if I buy them anything. I have been failing in health the last six months and they all know it. Yet the children have to have things to go to school; he fusses when I don't work, and won't even bring in a bucket of coal to help. I was told to stay in bed by my doctor, but I couldn't, because the children came and none of them would help. They just sat around and played games and laughed. Finally, when I had managed to get the dinner ready at last I was dirty and so sick I had an ugly look on my face, and then the girls said I was getting to be the ugliest woman they ever saw, and if I didn't fix up I would lose my husband, their stepfather. I couldn't help but cry, and that made him mad, and then there was a row. I want to do what is right by them all, and see my children nice men and women. My husband is a good man in his way, but he was a selfish old bachelor and stingy when we married, so though we have our own home, I have to help, and I don't know what is best to do.

WELL-MEANING MOTHER.

Evidently you have always been too fond. You have spoilt them all so badly by taking on your tender and plucky shoulders burdens thay should have at least helped to bear, that they have come to have contempt for you so often the portion of the too-kind and considerate, unjust as it may be. Your 12-year old son is the only one who ought to be an expense to you now and even he should be doing his bit to help. High school daughter should not only be doing the housework for you, but earning enough spending money to buy her own lunches, silk hose and hair dressing if she must have them. The 19-year old son should be fending for himself entirely and your husband shou'd have only you and the 12-year old to support altogether. Your whole mistaken attitude toward your children is epitomized in the incident of robbing yourself of carefare in order to humor your spoilt young daughter. She should have been made to take a luncheon with her or go hungry. It may now be too late, but you need an entire reorganization of your household. Your time has come to rest and you should take your rest, not as a pensioner asking a favor of your inconsiderate family, but as a person coming into what she has honestly earned. You should not attempt to work away from home, should let your husband know how you expect to be supported as is your right, and even in the matter of housework you should map out a generous share of it for the children at home to do.

WHEN KIDNEYS HURT DRINK MORE WATER

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

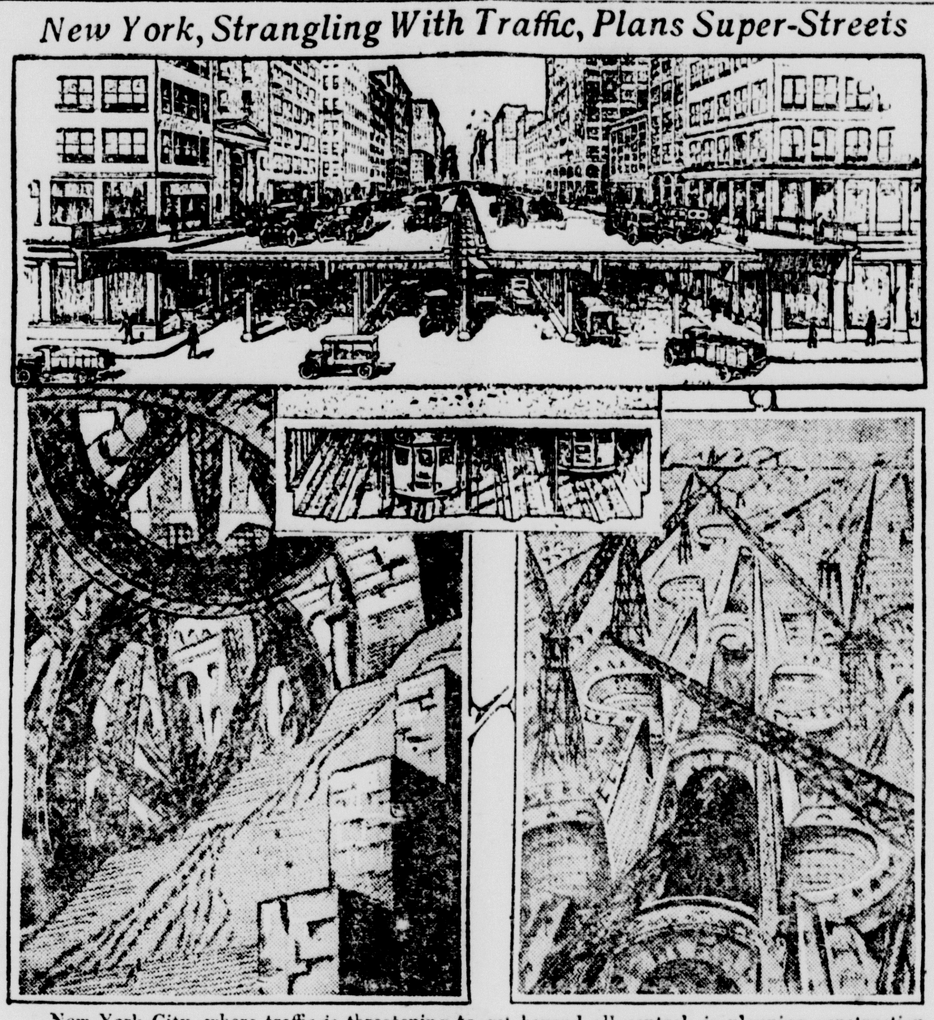
New York, Strangling With Traffic, Plans Super-Streets



New York City, where traffic is threatening to get beyond all control, is planning construction of super-streets of two, and possibly three levels. Stores would have entrances on all levels, which would be for vehicles, buses and pedestrians. Cars would run underground. New York is faced with the problem of providing for a population in 1960 twice as large as the present 6,000,000. Some idea of how the city will appear in the future is suggested in the drawing below, by Dobuzhinsky, a Russian artist. The sketch at top illustrates the super-street plan.

Menke's Daily Sport Letter

By Frank G. Menke

(Copyright, 1925, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

An outlaw golf ball, priced at 35 cents, threatens to revolutionize link standards, knock parity all askew and enable even the dub to stand in Ohio and perform a birdie on a course in Montana.

Wilmar Dunbar is responsible for it all. He's the raventressed child who created the ball which has such a carry that even the dub will be able to smack it for 300 or 325 yards—and boast not of the achievement.

The ball is "taboo" for tournament play. The youths and the elders who parcel out the laws that govern club, city and state and national championships have solemnly declared that the new ball cannot be used in championship matches—and that anyone caught using it will be served up the next day in the form of fricasse to his link victims.

The very fact that this new ball is priced at 35 cents and that a good profit is derived from its sale at that figure will give manufacturers of standardized balls quite a bit to think about. No doubt their thoughts will be toward a reduction from present "profiteering" mark of $1, which is assessed for the standard ball of today.

For many years the golfing students have maintained that the distance a fairly hit ball will travel depends almost entirely upon its center. The opinion was given that the more the center was solidified the greater would be the distance. And that set Dunbar to thinking, then to working—and a 35 cent ball that can be whacked 300 yards without herculean effort is the result.

"My ball has a MOULDED center—not a wound center, as is the case with other balls," explains Dunbar. "My solid center overcomes many of the objectionable features of a wound ball. It will last longer than the old type of ball, it will carry further on all drives and it is perfection itself on the green where a perfect roll is vital.

"When the club head hits a wound ball, the result frequently is that the power of the blow distorts the shape of the center of the ball. That may be called knocking the ball out of perfect balance. Naturally, when that happens, the ball does not carry as truly as it should, its roll is not perfect and certainly it is not a perfect rolling ball on the green—where perfection of roll is absolutely essential.

"My ball is moulded into a perfect sphere. It has all the life and the resiliency of a wound ball. Its center can't be battered out of shape. The ball is treated with Balata—the standardized covering for all golf balls of today. It is identical in size, weight and balance with the standard ball.

"This ball of mine retains perfect balance—and perfect balance is the thing which means that golfers who can't get more than 200 or 225 yards with the standard ball, can drive 300 yards or more with mine—for the simple reason that my ball gives them perfection in flight, perfection of balance and perfection in the roll."

Grade School Basketball Circuit Is Organized Here

Move, Sponsored by Athletic Director O. V. Boone, Will Aid in Development of Material for Future High School Teams.

With an eye to the development of future high school basketball stars, O. V. Boone, director of physical education, has practically completed the organization of a grade school court circuit which will set into action at least nine school teams in the district.

The entries are: Lincoln, Pleasant Heights, Maplewood, Washington, Sixth street, McKinley, Garfield, Neville and Central, with Glenmore and Walker questionable.

A series of games will be played on the high school court on March 2, 4, 9, 11 and 16. A schedule for the contests is now being drawn up by Director Boone.

On March 20 and 21, the grade passers will compete in a tournament, the grand finale to their brief season. To the tourney winner will be awarded a silver loving cup.

Central may have two teams in the circuit, on account of the large amount of material available. Glenmore and Walker have not indicated definitely yet whether they will be able to organize teams.

Members of the high school basketball squad will be assigned to coach the grade lads, the selections to be made as follows: Central—McConville; Garfield—E. English and McVey; Lincoln—Pusey; McKinley—McKeever; Maplewood—Liebschner; Neville—McGraw; Pleasant Heights—Hall and Allison; Sixth street—P. English; Washington—Bough and Hamilton.

Grade students who are passing in three of the five subjects in which examinations are required, are eligible to play on the teams. Lists of eligibles are to be filed by school principals with Director Boone before the first scheduled games.

Practice dates have been announced as follows: Monday—Lincoln and Pleasant Heights; Tuesday—Maplewood and Washington; Wednesday—Sixth street and McKinley; Thursday—Garfield and Neville; Saturday—Central. Practice periods will be held in the evenings between 6 and 7.

Officers of the organization are: President, Edward Harris; vice president, H. D. Rist; secretary, Miss Andrews; treasurer, Miss Gill.

Trotters Capture Clash With Power Class Court Team

The Power basketball five was unable to summon enough strength last night to cope with the Trotter Chevrolets, the contest going to the auto men by the count of 38 to 23.

Boulevards Trounce M.E. Five, 24-12

First Presbyterians Victors Over U. P. Quint, 48 to 15.

The First Presbyterians and the Park Boulevards came out on top in their Sunday school league games last night with the United Presbyterians and Methodist Episcopals, respectively. The scores were 48 to 15 and 24 to 12.

The First Presbyterians displayed an effective brand of basketball in their clash with the U. P. lads. Only in the first period did the losers appear to have a chance. Their hopes dimmed gradually as the evening wore on.

Allison and Cooper were the big guns in the Presbyterian scoring attack. Hall played a good game. Calhoun, Hoffman and Roberts were the chief U. P. performers.

The Park Boulevards and M. E. put on more of a battle. The teams played practically even in the first quarter, the count being 4 to 3. But the Parks had the better of it in the second period, the half-time score being 11 to 4. The M. E. lads rallied in the third period and, scoring four straight field goals, came within a point of tying things up. But the flash died out. The Boulevards resumed the business of making more field goals and at the three-quarter post were out in front with the score of 21 to 12.

As a result of their conquest, the Parks are tied with the Lutherans for second place in the league race. Barnes, Guyton and McKee played stellar roles for the winners while Bromby, Nease and Irwin were the M. E. mainstays.

Lineups:

First U. P.		First Presby.

Jimmy Slattery Jars Their Slats

By Norman E. Brown.

Some months ago Paul Berlenbach was headed for the center of the middleweight stage. He had set up an impressive record against a mixed field of opponents. Then Jack Delaney, a socker of some fame, was picked as an opponent for him. In view of Berlenbach's record Delaney was placed as sort of a "set up."

When the bout ended Berlenbach couldn't set up—for several seconds.

Berlenbach had to start his drive all over again. Delaney drew much attention for a time—until he, too, was licked.

Then Tiger Flowers plunged to the foreground by virtue of his clever boxing and deadly punching. The promoters offered him a bout with Delaney and he took it—and one on the jaw. Another swell start ruined.

Enter Jimmy Slattery of Buliafo and Niagara Falls.

Slattery, up to a few nights ago, had followed the footsteps of Berlenbach and Flowers. He had hung up an impressive record. He was credited with 59 fights and knockout victories in 21 of them. Thirty-six were decision victories. He had lost but two decisions and had never been knocked out.

He had fought twice in New York and the promoters decided he was about ready to tackle Delaney, who had become sort of a testing block for hopeful contenders for Harry Greb's crown. Slattery was willing. Some of his friends wept.

Delaney and Slattery met a few nights ago.

Now Slattery's tender age prevented the bout going more than six rounds.

Under the New York rules a mitt pusher must be twenty-one to engage in long bouts. Some of Slattery's adherents claimed he was old enough to vote but the jolly birth records in Buffalo's city hall showed James was born Aug. 25, 1904.

Delaney and his backers figured he wouldn't need six rounds to finish up his evening's task. But at the end of six rounds Mr. James Buffalo Slattery was not only up but doing—the majority of the leading. The judges gave Slattery the decision on points and the verdict was well received.

Now, having passed the Delenay hazard the world lies bright ahead of the young easterner.

And fewer middleweights cringe now when Jack Delaney says "woof" and looks mean.

Wills Refuses Bout With Gibbons; Wants Chance At Champion

Claims He's Already Qualified for Title Scrap; Rickard's Interest Said to Lie in Return go Between Dempsey and Tom.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18. — Harry Wills drew the "colar line" on Tom Gibbons today, after indulging himself in the annual formality of posting his $2,500 check with the State Athletic Commission to bind another challenge to Jack Dempsey. Harry made no secret of his attitude toward the white heir apparent to the heavyweight crown. To him, Thomas is out like a broken window and Mr. T. Rickard can bundle up his idealistic plans for a Gibbons-Wills bout and take a running jump in the nearby lake.

"Why should I meet Gibbons?" Wills asked. "He had his shot at Dempsey and couldn't win. I don't see why I should be going around meeting the losers. I took on Firpo and beat him easily. All I got out of it was a lot of abuse. Now, they want me to meet Gibbons in order to qualify for a match with Dempsey. If I haven't qualified already, I'd like to know who has."

Paddy Mullins, the man of monosyllables, stood by and nodded solemn concurrence with these sentiments. Mr. Mullins is nearly always silent as befits a man with an important mission in life. He must ever hold himself in readiness to post the checks, and when requested, come around and take them down again.

"Wills is the logical opponent for Dempsey," Mr. Mullins enunciated in accents rusty from lack of use. "He will not fight any contender until he gets a crack at the title."

Many followers of fistic affairs will be pleased to note in this statement a bright future for Mr. Wills along the Hoboken docks. They believe that a Dempsey-Wills bout will never transpire and that if Wills passes up all contenders he will, of necessity, pass up eating as a regular and daily form of amusement.

A few others, however, claim that Wills is nearer his title shot than ever before. How near that may be is a matter for careful estimate by a lick telescope. Yet those who make this statement are of what might be termed the outer-inner circle of boxing politics; in other words, just close enough possibly to have heard a faint echo of official sentiment toward the project. They claim that the State Athletic Commission is favorably disposed toward the proposition, in spite of chairman Brower's guarded reply to Mullins yesterday that the board "would take the challenge under consideration," means nothing.

Ostensibly Wills' objection to a Gibbons meeting will throw Rickard and his announced plans for the outdoor season for a ten yard loss behind the line of scrimmage. In reality, it will interfere with them hardly at all. Rickard's real interest lies in another meeting between Gibbons and Dempsey with Wills merely forming an excellent and literal screen in the background.

Hoppe Continues To Lead Cannefax In Seventh Block

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Willie Hoppe continued to lead Bob Cannefax today at the outset of the seventh block of their 600 point match for the unofficial world's championship in three cushion billiards, the balkline king being in front by a score of 360 to 352. A total of 439 innings have been consumed in reaching this score.

Hoppe suffered a net loss of five points as a result of the fifth and sixth blocks yesterday, although Willie won the former by sixty to 48, increasing his lead to 25 points. In the evening, however, Cannefax came back and won the block by 77 to 60.

Here, Hoppe, whose safety play in the afternoon had been a revelation, made the mistake of leaving a number of open shots for Cannefax and the three cushion champion lost no time in taxing advantage of the situation.

Johnson 'Holds Out' In Order to Get in Some More Hunting

RENO, Nev., Feb. 18—His love for hunting rather than preliminary training at Hot Springs is believed here to be back of Walter Johnson's "holdout," rather than a hitch over terms.

Johnson denied today that he was holding out and declared he would sign with the Washington Senators within the next three days.

Asked if his decision was definite, he replied that "he expected to sign up," and would leave either late this week or on March first for training camp.

Johnson denied he had negotiations on for the purchase of any club. He has been spending the winter on hunting trips and friends say he believes outdoor sports a better conditioning than training camp just now.

Willie Ritola to Attempt Another Two-mile Record

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—Willie Ritola, holder of the world's two-mile record for only 48 hours, will again attempt to set new figures at that distance tonight at the annual games of the Knights of St. Anthony in Brooklyn. Ritola has mapped out a careful time schedule through which he hopes to better Paavo Nurmi's record of 8:58 1-5, established last Saturday night.

Has-Beens Defeated By Tri-State-Keils In Ten Pin Contest

The "Has-Been" bowlers were has-beens for the Tri State-Keils last night at the Liberty alleys. The Tri State-Keils trounced their arch opponents at ten pins by a total margin of 305 pins in a three-game match, taking every game by a decisive margin.

The winners passed the 1,000 mark in the first game by 60 pins while the Has-Beens were making 857. The Has-Beens came a little closer in the second game, with the winners taking honors by a margin of 88 pins. This was cut still further in the third match which was won by the Tri State-Keils by only 14 pins.

H. Schneidmiller had high score of 212 and high average of 190.

How to Solve Puzzle.

The best way to solve this cross-word puzzle is to run over the list of horizontal and vertical synonyms in search of evident or "easy" words. If horizontal, the word you are looking for must extend crosswise from the number to the first shaded stop on the right; if vertical, it must extend downward from the number to the first shaded stop below. When finished, the words should read equally well crosswise and downward.

Lutherans In Winning Role In Cage Tilt

Defeat Chester Presbyterian Passers by Big Score.

The Chester Presbyterians of the Sunday school cage loop last night offered very little opposition to the Lutherans who ran away with the affair by the tally of 46 to 11. The clash took place on the high school court.

The First M. E. Juniors were victors over the Lutheran Juniors in the preliminary, the score being 43 to 15.

The Lutheran Intermediates were too strong for the West Virgilians in every department. They had the game sewed up practically at the end of the first half when the count stood 20 to 6, and scored even more in the last half than they did in the first.

The Lutheran defense was on a par with their offense, and as a result, the opposition collected only three field goals during the engagement.

G. Woessner, R. Woessner, Schneidmiller and Anthony were scoring stars for the Lutherans while Kibble and Dawson performed well at guards. Cox, Haney, Wallace and Bartly were outstanding performers on the Chester squad.

RAIDERS FIGHT INDICTMENTS

WEBSTER-HARRIS SQUAD ATTACKS AUTHORITY OF STEUBENVILLE PROBERS

Detectives Who Took Part in East Liverpool-Wellsville Warfare File Demurrers Against Jefferson County Grand Jury's True Bills Charging Malicious Destruction of Property.

COURT RESERVES DECISION AFTER ARGUMENTS BY NINE DRY AGENTS

Charles Webster, One of Chiefs of Raiding Force, is Reported to Have Jumped $500 Bond Posted for Appearance in Assault Case Filed by Parlett Woman following Liquor Seizure.

Nine members of the Webster-Harris Detective agency, of Steubenville, some of them participants in the East Liverpool Wellsville raiders' war, today turned their guns on indictments returned against them by the Jefferson county grand jury.

Demurrers were filed in the Jefferson county common pleas court against charges of malicious destruction of property. It was declared in the arguments on the demurrers that the indictments were illegally drawn and that the grand jury was without authority to make the findings. It is also claimed that the indictments are without effect because neither the clerk nor the court presented the foreman or prosecutor with certified transcripts.

The enforcement officers, Charles Webster, Caleb Harris, John and William McCoy, Richard Riser, Charles McFarland, Fred Goff, Charles Sargent and B. F. Doom, were indicted following a raid on a construction camp near Knoxville, last December.

Judge J. S. Paisley, who heard the arguments, reserved his decision. Prosecuting Attorney Roy Merryman opposed the demurrer while Attorneys John Gardner and Edward McKinley appeared for the dry agents.

DR. LEROY MARION BURTON, 50, IS DEAD

HEART FAILURE CLAIMS CHIEF OF UNIVERSITY AT ANN ARBOR

Death of Coolidge Nominator Follows Pneumonia Attack.

Michigan Educator's End Comes While he is Sleeping.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 18.—Dr. Leroy Marion Burton, president of the University of Michigan, died at 3:20 a. m. today after an illness of 17 weeks. Failure of his heart to respond to the demands imposed by the relapse suffered last Thursday was named by physicians as the immediate cause of death. He was 50 years old.

Nurse Present At Death.

Dr. Burton's illness was diagnosed as pleural pneumonia. Funeral services will probably be private.

Dr. Burton died while sleeping quitely. No member of the family was present when the end came. A nurse who had just taken his pulse, finding it unchanged, heard him sigh deeply. She ran across the hall and summoned Dr. John P. Parsons, who was at the bedside in a moment. Dr. Burton, however, had already expired.

In the house were Mrs. Burton their son, Paul, 19, and their daughter, Jane, 12. The Rev. Dr. Harold Emerson Burton, of New York, brother of Dr. Burton, came to Ann Arbor last week, but found the patient too ill to be seen, and returned home Sunday.

Notification was sent to a daughter, Theodosia Burton Stewart.

Funeral Arrangements.

President and Mrs. Coolidge, to whom Mr. and Mrs. Burton a few months ago wired sympathy at the time of the death of the president's son, today paid similar respects to Dr. Burton.

Mrs. Burton received the following telegram from the White House:

"We are sharing your sorrow at the loss of our friend Dr. Burton, and send you and your family our sincere sympathies.

"Calvin Coolidge and Grace Coolidge"

Funeral services for Dr. Burton will be held Saturday, it was announced.

SENATE VOTES CONFIRMATION OF T. J. DUFFY

Opponents Content Themselves With Silent Protest.

Bloom and Huffman Choice for Utilities Commission.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 18—The senate, by a vote of 25 to 0, yesterday confirmed the re-appointment of T. J. Duffy, Democrat, of East Liverpool, to the industrial commission.

Opponents in the senate to confirmation of Duffy did not vote, but contented themselves with registering their silent protest. There was no debate. Senator Chester C. Bolton of Cleveland stated that an investigation of the record of Mr. Duffy among manufacturers and organized labor leaders had convinced the rules committee that the appointee was "well regarded, efficient and capable." Senator Homer A. Ramsey of Toledo spoke for confirmation and the roll was called.

Those not voting were Senators Harry M. Carpenter of Jefferson county and C. C. Chappelear of Pickaway

SEAL CREVICE OF SAND CAVE TOMB AS ITS VICTIM SLEEPS

Floyd Collins Will Not be Disturbed in Shroud of Rock.

NATION FORGETS

Nature Takes Steps to Protect Cavern Mausoleum.

SAND CAVE, Ky., Feb. 18. — To make sure that Floyd Collins will not be disturbed in his sand cave tomb 75 feet below the surface, workers today were sealing the crevice with cement.

This was decided upon after H. T. Carmichael, chief of the rescue crew which strove frantically to reach Collins while he was alive, abandoned plans to set off a huge charge of dynamite in the rescue shaft that would shake all the loose rock and talus together. Ned B. Doyle, owner of the farm on which Sand cave is located, objected to this procedure.

While Carmichael and engineers were conferring in regard to the last "clean-up" work to be done around the scene of the epic struggle to save a human from death, miners, scientists, engineers, surgeons, military men and the scores of others who have assisted in the work, were leaving for their homes in various parts of the country. And the nation was fast forgetting the tragedy in this little mountain village.

Crack at Base of Cliff.

Meanwhile, Floyd Collins sleeps in the tomb he perhaps would have chosen. There he will sleep forever.

Nature, which has sneered and mocked at man's puny efforts to bring him forth, is taking further steps to seal his mausoleum irrevocably.

A great crack appeared at the base of the cliff which overhangs the entrance to the cave. It is now six inches wide and the ground in front of the cliff seems to be sinking. Composed of treacherous, shifting muck even before the rescue operations started, the underground strata, which have been disturbed by the sinking of the shafts and tunnels, again are seeking to adjust themselves. It is likely that

Pottery Worker Charges Patrolman McFarland, With Turnkey Cline Standing by, Ordered Him to Open Luggage on Street.

Brady McKenzie, pottery worker, of 707½ Avondale street, today said he intended to file a complaint with Chief of Police McDermott against the alleged action of Patrolman Norman McFarland in searching his luggage in front of the Broadway traction terminal.

According to McKenzie, McFarland, without arresting him or showing a search warrant, forced him, his brother Hugh McKenzie and Nathan Franklin of Seventh street, to open their suit cases before bystanders as they were waiting for a Beaver Interurban car last Saturday afternoon. McFarland was searching for liquor, but no contraband was in the suit cases.

Special Officer Named in Killing Of Raid Victim

ASHLAND, Feb. 18.—Ill with quinsy, Carlos Gorham, indicted last night by a special grand jury here on the charge of second degree murder with a count for manslaughter in the killing of a rubber chemist, John Dalton on October 29, 1924, will probably not be arraigned today.

Attorney general Crabbe and Sherman Deaton, Urbana attorney, were in charge of the special investigation, which Governor Donahey authorized after a grand jury last November failed to indict any of the nine local and county enforcement officers in the posse at the time Dalton, who lived northwest of Ashland, was shot.

Gorham, who is 26, is the son of the Ashland chief of police, a former traffic officer and had been made a special officer on the night the posse started on the liquor search.

Lieut.-governor To Represent Ohio At Inauguration

COLUMBUS, Feb. 18.—Lieut. Governor Lewis will represent Ohio at the inauguration of President Coolidge and vice president Dawes. Official notice of his selection by Governor Donahey was received today by Lewis. His military escort will be Adjutant General Henderson and Col. E. P. Lawler, quartermaster general, Ohio national guard.

Speaker Silver, of the house, said today that final arrangements for participation in the inaugural ceremonies will be complete today. The legislature will be represented by Lieut. Governor Lewis, Speaker Silver and three members each from the house and senate.

The legislature is expected to recess a week over the inaugural period. This will permit the finance committee to complete preparation of the appropriation bills, it was explained.

"Red" Grange, Star Football Player, Ill With Mumps

RICHMOND, Mich., Feb. 18.—Howard "Red" Grange, star football player, who has been bed-ridden here with the mumps, was resting easily today but will be forced to remain here for another week, physicians said. A high fever which has been evident for several days has gone down. Grange was isolated here after delivering a speech at a local banquet.

PROTESTS REVENUE BUREAU INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—A protest against continuation of the senatorial investigation of the internal Revenue bureau was made to the senate Finance committee today by A. W. Gregg, special adviser to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. Gregg explained a number of tax discrepancies revealed by the Couzens investigation and urged the committee to close the inquiry.

As a result of Gregg's statements it was indicated the Couzens' committee would abandon its sessions when congress adjourns March 4.

Incendiary Blast In Pittsburgh's Produce District

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 18.—Incendiary dynamite explosions blasted terror into the center of the wholesale produce district and demolished three buildings here today with a loss of $130,000, according to fire department officials. Firemen are digging in tons of debris following reports that five men might have been trapped, but owners of the buildings are certain no one was caught in the explosion.

Police believe the bombings may have been the work of a blackhand gang or by business rivals or the Landolina Brothers Produce company whose buildings were destroyed.

"Suicide Leap" Span Of Bridge Claims Unidentified Man

CLEVELAND, Feb. 18. — "Suicide leap" span of the high level bridge here claimed another victim today, when workmen from the Erie Railroad coal yard stumbled across the body of an unidentified man.

The body was badly crushed, having dropped through nearly 100 feet of space, from the bridge span to the frozen ground below. Apparently an attempt had been made by the victim to alight in the river.

The body was taken to the morgue where it was admitted as "white man, 60, unidentified."

Lima Boy Dead After Being Shot By His Playmate

LIMA, Ohio, Feb. 18.—Richard Wilson, 11, was dead today after being shot last night by his boyhood chum and playmate, George Sandy, aged 9.

According to the story told police by eye witnesses of the tragedy, Sandy and Wilson were playing in front of the Sandy home where they became involved in a childish argument. Sandy immediately ran into his house and returned with a .22 calibre rifle.

When Wilson turned to come towards him, Sandy pulled the trigger and the lad fell face downward, snot through the head. "I shot him— I didn't mean to do it," the Sandy youth sobbed to the police.

The juvenile authorities are making an investigation, but they declare that it is doubtful if Sandy will be held accountable because of his extreme youth.

A. T. Seymour Quits As Assistant to Attorney General

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The resignation of A. T. Seymour, assistant to the attorney general, who has directed anti-trust prosecutions on behalf of the government, has been submitted to President Coolidge, Seymour announced today.

He will retire shortly after the argument in the case of the Industrial Association of San Francisco versus the United States in the supreme court. This case, involving a union labor situation, is to be heard the week of March 9.

Seymour will return to his home at Columbus, Ohio, to enter the practice of law.

Copies of Legislation, Recommended by Special Committee, Voted by Assembly and Signed by Donahey, Received Here.

Another ray of hope for school districts and other taxing subdivisions, which are "hard up" for money to meet operating expenses for the present year, is contained in the provisions of House bill No. 27, passed as an emergency measure, and signed by the governor, as a means of providing temporary relief, it was declared today.

Copies of the measure, which embodies one of the eleven recommendations made to the governor by a special committee, which included ex-County Prosecutor Jesse Hanley and Superintendent of Schools Geiger appointed several weeks ago, were received here yesterday.

The bill provides that school boards or other divisions in a taxing district facing deficits in operating expenses, may authorize their clerk or accounting officer to compile a detailed state-

Gloria Swanson, Film Actress, Hurriedly Undergoes Operation

PARIS, Feb. 18.—Gloria Swanson, famous American film star, was hurriedly and mysteriously removed from the Plaza Athenne hotel at 1:30 o'clock this morning and taken to a hospital where it was said an operation was performed.

Miss Swanson recently became the bride of Marquise De La Falaise De La Coudraye.

Film friends of the marchioness and her husband gathered at the St. Lazare station to bid them farewell in their scheduled departure on the 10:05 A. M. boat train to catch the liner France for America were astounded to learn from officials of the French line that Miss Swanson had been operated on and was in a hospital.

Miss Swanson's two children and their governess caught the boat train per schedule and will sail on the France.

BORGLUM WILL CARVE WORLD'S LARGEST MONUMENT OUT OF GRANITE IN SOUTH DAKOTA'S HILLS

BY LLOYD LEHBRAS.
(Copyright 1925, I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The largest sculptured monnument in the world will be carved out of one great block of solid granite in the Black Hills of South Dakota at a point which is not far from the geopraphical center of the United States, Gutzom Borglum, the world famous sculptor, announced today.

Borglum, who is now carving the glory of the Confederacy on Stone Mountain in Georgia, will begin preliminary work on the massive memorial next spring and expects to complete it in four years at a cost of from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

As simple in design as it is monumental in scope the memorial will consist of only two stupendous figures of Washington and Lincoln, standing four hundred feet in height and from 36 to 40 feet in width, on a background of solid stone 600 feet high—50 feet higher than the Washington monument. Borglum's designs for the heads of Washington and Lincoln show that they will be 40 feet from brow to chin.

Washington and Lincoln Figures.

"I expect to carve a figure of Washington as he was at Valley Forge," Borglum explained, "A great silent figure in campaign uniform and cocked hat with his hand holding his coat together. Along side him I will carve Lincoln, bare-headed, with his hand resting on Washington's shoulder. Those two figures typify American history — Washington, the builder, and Lincoln, the saviour, of the union. There will be no secondary figures or decorations, just those two big figures standing in the beautiful natural surroundings of the Black Hills gazing over their nation. The cliff on which I will carve them is 600 feet high so that they can be seen from fifty miles away.

"Carving Stone Mountain is an attempt to put back in the nation's record for all time just what great good resulted from a civil war that was necessary to complete the work at which the politicians had failed, to forge a union of self determing states that is invisible. In carving the giant Monolith in South Dakota we will forever preserve in monumental form the great influences through which our country exists as exemplified by Washington and Lincoln."

Site Near Rapid City.

The stupendous sculpturing to be undertaken by the famous artist will be on a granite cliff standing in a 90,000 acre state park in the heart of the Black Hills along the western boundary of the state, 60 miles from the nearest town, Rapid City. The entire area is virgin country, timberlands and mountains cutting a jagged skyline against the blue western sky.

"And the natural beauty of the Black Hills will not be disturbed," Borglum asserted, "but will give the setting necessary to visualize in stone the power and sweep of our civilization through its very simplicity and magnitude."

Preliminary work is being financed by citizens of South Dakota, but a bill is now pending in congress through which the memorial will receive $100,000 from royalties on an aerial bomb invented by Lester P. Harlow. In-

White House Statt Heeds Coolidge Plea For Economy

Like Charity, it Should Begin at Home, so Budget Director Offers Cash Prize for Suggestions.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18 — Economy, according to President Coolidge, should begin at home.

Recently he asked General Lord, director of the budget, if he thought the White House could cut down any, and General Lord reckoned it could to the extent of about $12,500.

Now $12,500 is big money in almost anybody's office, and the additional economy edict had Noah F. Webster—who handles the president's cash—slightly worried. He saw hard sledding ahead.

Then Noah had an inspiration.

All of which leads up to the economy contest, open only to White House employes.

The idea is that everybody thinks hard until he thinks of a good scheme to save money around the office. Then he enters his scheme in the contest and if it turns out to be the best one he wins $10—the prize coming out of Noah's personal, right-hand pocket.

Halts Cross Word Puzzling.

Here is the circular letter passed around by Disbursing Clerk Webster that resulted in a general defection from cross word puzzling:

"Although this office has been putting into effect economy for the past two years, it is necessary that further economies in expenditures be brought about. It is desired that every employe of the office take a personal interest in this matter and make at least one suggestion. As the official responsible in this matter, I shall be glad to award a prize of $10 from personal fund to the employe who submits the best suggestion for bringing about a reduction of expenses. These suggestions should be along practical lines and should not be radical in their nature, and not tend to disorganize the work of the office."

Already a lot of economies have sprung up around the executive office. Where a cluster of lights used to burn there is a single beacon now. There is a noticeable shortage of towels in the washrooms. Paper cups no longer grace the drinking fountains, in their place are single glasses.

Plan to Push Tax Program Despite Donahey Objection

COLUMBUS, Feb. 18—Legislative leaders today made it clear that they propose to go ahead with the Republican permanent tax program, despite objections by Governor Donahey.

Two measures, now being studied by the governor with a view to a conference later, with legislative leaders, looking toward a compromise on tax legislation, both carrying home rule provisions, to meet the governor's wishes, are scheduled today to be made special orders in the House for next Tuesday afternoon when they will be called up for passage.

One is the Tallentire bill, providing that charter cities may, by vote of the people, fix their own tax limitations and also setting up a complete budget system for cities. This measure was scheduled to be reported out today by the house taxation committee.

The other is the Dodd bill, permitting sub-divisions to authorize, by vote of the people, extra levies either for running expenses, sinking funds or for special permanent improvements, outside of present tax limitations. This measure has been reported out of committee and is awaiting final action in the house.

Both measures are leading items in the Republican permanent tax relief program. Legislative leaders said that they would be passed and repassed if Gov. Donahey should veto them.

Woman is Ready to Take Her Seat in Congress on Mar. 4

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Feb. 18.—"Just common horse sense."

This homely but sound course of reasoning will guide San Francisco's new congresswoman in shaping her course in statehood.

Defeating three men and her nearest opponent by more than 20,000 votes, Mrs. Florence Prag Kahn will on March 4 take the seat in congress occupied by her late husband, Julius Kahn, for many years. Actually, unless President Coolidge calls an important session, her work in congress will begin next December.

"It will be my aim to carry on the policies and ideals of my husband," Mrs. Kahn, a placid, motherly countenanced lady, said today.

"I want to serve the people of San Francisco to the best of my ability and carry out my pledge for maintaining the high standards of service to the people that Mr. Kahn set."

The new congresswoman has no fads nor fancies in the way of legislation to press.

King George Shows Improvement, Says Official Bulletin

LONDON, Feb. 18—The general condition of King George led his three physicians to hope today that he would be able to overcome the bronchitis trouble without it developing into anything more serious.

His specific illness is bronchitis due to influenza, it was stated.

An official bulletin issued at Buckingham Palace today said:

"The King had a fair night, although there is no chance in the bronchitis. The general condition of his majesty shows improvement."

(Signed) "Stanley Hewitt, Dawson of Penn, Milson Rees."

For a time yesterday the King's physicians were concerned about his condition, it was said, and now they are taking every precaution to ward off possible complications which would be pneumonia.

DOUBLE DENIAL OF TOKIO RUMOR

TOKIO, Feb. 18—The United States embassy and the Japanese foreign office both denied this afternoon a story printed in the Japanese newspaper Kokumin, that American Ambassador Bancroft had conferred with foreign minister Shidehara, informing him that President Coolidge intended to summon an arms parley and sounding out Japan's attitude.

COMMERCIAL WAR WARNING ISSUED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—A commercial war, "comparable only to the Civil War," will result if Northern States enact discriminatory laws against cotton products, Senator Overman, Democrat of North Carolina, warned the nation today in a speech in the senate.

county, who were absent from the chamber, and Senators Roy J. Gillen of Jackson county, J. Lowry Miller of Butler county, R. A. Powell of Wood county, Clarion L. Shafer of Van Wert county, Arthur W. Sweeney of Summit county and Frank C. Wise of Stark county.

Conspiracy Bill Appears.

Appointments by Governor Donahey of Former Lieutenant Governor Earl D. Bloom, Bowling Green, and James W. Huffman, Zanesville, both Democrats as members of the state utilities commission, are expected to be sent today to the senate for confirmation. Huffman is executive clerk in the governor's office.

Other Appointments.

In addition to his scheduled appointments to membership on the state utilities commission, Gov. Donahey also is expected to send to the senate for confirmation his appointments of a member of the state tax commission to succeed Chairman S. E. Forney, whose term expired February 2, of three trustees of Ohio state university, and a member of the state civil service commission.

It was generally understood in legislative circles that the governor would name Charles Follett a practicing attorney in Cleveland, as the member of the tax commission. Mr. Follett, who served as an assistant attorney general under Attorney General McGhee, has been the governor's advisor on tax legislation now pending before the general assembly.

The legislative mill will continue work on long calendars, while further floods of new bills are expected, in anticipation of the closing of the bill introducing period next Monday night. No outstanding measures are on the calendars for final passage today. The house will have before it for final passage Thursday afternoon of Collister city home rule bus bill.

The famous conspiracy bill, defeated two years ago, will appear again today on the legislative calendar when a new measure sponsored by Representative Ball, Scioto county, will be up for second reading and reference to committee in the house. The measure provides maximum fines of $10,000 and two years imprisonment for conspiracy to violate any law of the state or a subdivision.

Other Measures On Calendar.

Other measures scheduled for second reading and reference to House committees today include: By Hunt, Lucas, authorizing the state office building commission to select a site for the proposed new building wherever it chooses, either on or off the State House grounds; by Rose, Athens, requiring all contracts for municipal paving to contain provisions whereby contractors agree to keep improvement in repair, for not less than five, nor more than ten years; by Steiner, Hardin, extending terms of Prosecuting Attorneys for 1920 and providing for four-year terms; by Smith, Highland, abolishing right of utility companies to collect increased rates before the rate is approved by the utilities commission; by Westover, Mahoning, providing for a commission to revise and recodify existing state laws; by Robinson, Stark, to create a state board of barber examiners and to regulate the business, and a joint resolution by Hunt, Lucas, ordering the Attorney General to go to Washington to urge the Secretary of War to prevent the alleged Chicago "water steal."

Mekka Sanctorium Elects Officers at Meeting on Tuesday

John C. Hassler, Lisbon, was elected grand hyastytee of Mekka Sanctorium No. 231, Oriental Order of Splendor and Perfection, at a meeting in the I. O. O. F. temple last evening.

Other officers, elected for a term of one year, are: Vice Grand Hayastytee, Willard E. McCoy; registrar, George H. Campman; collector of sheckles, James L. Schrum; banker, F. L. Copenhaver.

The organization, known as the "shrine of the I. O. O. F." has a membership of about 135.

U. S. FORCES BAG BIG RUM RUNNER

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Feb. 18—The United States coast guard early today captured its second big Canadian rum running ship.

Loaded to the limit with liquor, from Vancouver, the Auxiliary schooner Coal Harbor, operated by the Consolidated Mexican Shipping Company, limited, of Vancouver, was captured by the coast guard cutter Cahoia within the 12-mile limit.

Heart Failure

though the arrangements have not been completed yet.

Details thus far announced are that burial will take place in Forest Hill cemetery and that the body of Dr. Burton probably will lie in state before the funeral. George Lewis, mayor of Ann Arbor, has proclaimed public mourning until after the funeral hour. All flags in Ann Arbor are at half mast.

Call Meeting of Deans.

A meeting of the deans was to be called this morning to take any official action which might be deemed proper.

Dr. Harry B. Hutchins, president emeritus of the university, who was recently named one of a committee of three to manage the university pending Dr. Burton's recovery, was to preside at the dean's meeting. It was doubtful today whether any move toward appointment of a successor to Dr. Burton would be taken until the regular meeting of the board of regents, Feb. 17.

Dr. Burton's illness started when he collapsed after introducing Vilhjalmur Stefanson, Arctic explorer, in Hill auditorium. An illness a year previous, before he made his nominating speech for President Calvin Coolidge at the Cleveland Republican convention, left his system weakened, physicians said.

His condition became very critical during the early stages of the illness, necessitating an operation upon the glands of the throat. His wonderful constitution enabled him to come through crisis after crisis, however, until the serious relapse last week.

The relapse was accompanied by hemorrhages which, physicians said, indicated that his heart was too weak to carry off all the blood delivered to the lungs, causing congestion there.

Dr. D. M. Cowie, the attending physician, diagnosed the illness yesterday as streptococcus pleurisy.

Dr. Burton was one of the closest friends of the president and annually visited the Coolidges at the White House.

Leader in Education.

As President of Smith college, Northampton, Mass., the University of Minnesota and the University of Michigan, Dr. Burton was recognized as one of the leaders in educational movements in America. He was born August 30, 1874, at Brooklyn, Iowa, receiving his bacheler of arts degree from Carleton college, Northfield, Minnesota, in 1900, and an additional degree from Yale with highest honors in 1909.

Dr. Burton was awarded his doctor of philosophy degree from Yale in 1907, a doctor of divinity degree from Carleton in 1909 and a doctor of laws from Tufts in 1911. On June 14, 1900, he married Nina Leona Moses of Northfield, Minn.

An instructor of Greek in Carleton Academy, in 1899-1909, Dr. Burton was named President of Windom institute, Windom, Minnesota, in 1900, where he served until appointed an assistant Professor at Yale in 1907.

Dr. Burton entered the clergy in 1908 was pastor of the church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y. While serving in this capacity, he was named President of Smith college, where he spent seven years until 1917. He took over the position as president of the University of Michigan in 1920. Since he has been President, a score of the greatest college buildings in the nation have been erected in Ann Arbor.

Ray of Hope

ment, showing deficits which are likely to occur during the year. The board may then issue certificates of indebtedness to meet these expenses. This must be completed on or before March 15, of this year.

May Petition Election.

A resolution must then be enacted, asking the board of elections to prepare petitions calling for the levy of a tax in an amount not greater than said deficiency and not greater than would be produced by a levy of three mills on the tax duplicate of the district.

These petitions would be circulated among the electors of the district under direction of the election board, parties circulating the same to receive not more than five cents for each signature secured. As soon as signatures, representing a majority of the electors who voted for governor in the last November election, have been secured, the petition shall be certified to the county auditor, who is authorized to place the special tax for collection in June. The petitions must be returned to the election boards not later than May 1 and shall be certified to the county auditor not later than May 20.

The emergency in the bill lies in the fact that "a great many municipalities and school districts are unable to carry on their necessary activities with the funds derived from taxation and all other sources of revenue and if authority is not vested in said subdivision to obtain the necessary funds with which to function, the peace, health and safety of the community will be endangered."

Several school districts in the county are facing a financial situation, which may mean a reduction in the school term this year as the result of the defeat of special millage issues at the general election last November. The new law will place these districts in line to secure immediate relief, it is pointed out, provided they act at once.

NOONDAY SERVICE AT K. T. K. PLANT

The noonday shop meeting in the Knowles, Taylor and Knowles pottery Thursday noon will be in charge of Rev. O. L. Benedum, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, and his party. This service is one of the series under the auspices of the industrial department of the Y. M. C. A.

Brady McKenzie

one child; Nathan Franklin and a girl friend and Hugh McKenzie, was enroute to Elwood City, Pa., to attend the wedding anniversary of a relative.

While awaiting the car, they noticed William Cline, city hall turnkey, Brady McKenzie said. However, Cline left before the arrival of the car.

McKenzie and his party left the building, when the interurban car stopped on the Broadway tracks. The three men—the two McKenzie brothers and Franklin—set their suit cases down on the sidewalk while the car was being unloaded, Clutter and Mays stepping to the side of the car. The women members of the family, Brady McKenzie declares, were standing beside them on the sidewalk when Patrolman McFarland, accompanied by Cline, approached him and inquired what was in the suit case. McKenzie said he replied that it contained nothing but a set of table ware, a gift for the couple they were to visit.

McFarland, McKenzie claims, ordered that he open it. McKenzie threw back the lid of the suit case and lifted the dishes in one end of it to convince the patrolman that it contained no liquor.

McFarland Defends Action.

"Now let's see what's in those other two bags," McFarland is alleged to have commanded Hugh McKenzie and Franklin. They opened their suit cases. Brady McKenzie charges that the officer ran his hand through articles of clothing which the brother had packed in his bag, but merely looked into the satchel of Franklin. Finding no liquor, the patrolman walked away. McKenzie says the women and children members of his party stood beside them while the search was being made.

In defense of his actions, Patrolman McFarland today declared that he had received two complaints, one Friday night and the other Saturday that the McKenzie brothers had planned to take liquor with them when they left town or bring a quantity back with them when they returned and that he was on the lookout for them. He claimed that he asked Turnkey Cline to walk through the waiting room to ascertain whether the McKenzies were there.

"Did you have a search warrant to look through the suit cases?" McFarland was asked.

"No, I didn't," he replied. "An officer oftimes has not time enough to obtain a search warrant in order to get the man whom he suspects of violating the law."

Says He Would Do It Again.

McFarland said that he picked up the suit cases carried by Brady McKenzie and ordered that he open them, but denied having touched any of the three bags after they were opened, merely glancing inside them.

"I do not feel that I committed an offense in asking those men to open their suitcases, when I suspected they were transferring liquor," he declared. "In fact, I would do the same thing again in similar circumstances."

Brady McKenzie, who is employed at the C. C. Thompson pottery, said he would call the matter to the attention of Chief McDermott today. He said he had not determined whether he will enter suit for damages against the officer.

Coal Miner's Right Hand is Amputated Following Accident

Carl Anderson, 25, Salineville coal miner, suffered the amputation of his right hand at the City hospital today as the result of an accident at the Grant Coal company's mine, about two miles east of Salineville, about 7:30 a. m.

Anderson was operating one of the trains, hauling coal from the mine, when his hand was mangled after being caught between one of the cars and the electric motor. Fellow workers went to his rescue and assisted him to the company's office. Dr. C. A. McCullough, of Salineville, after an examination, ordered Anderson's removal to the hospital. He was brought here in the John Hutson ambulance. Dr. W. A. Hobbs assisted in the operation.

The injured man was working in the place of John Scarry, Salineville, whose arm was broken in a mine accident last Monday. Anderson has a wife and child.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Active industrial stocks led the whole market in a sharp recovery of prices in the early trading today. At the opening of the market and continued to move forward, under the leadership of United States Steel, American Can, American Smelting, Cast Iron Pipe, etc. Oil stocks contributed to the bullish movement, most of the best known independent oils moving upward a point or more in the first hour.

Another record smashing report of freight movement for this time of year was issued by the American Railway association, showing car loadings for the week of February 27, at 928,244 cars, a considerable increase over other comparative records. This was a bullish factor.

U. S. Steel ran forward on heavy trading to 124½, up 1½ points in the first hour. American Smelting at 99¾, was up nearly 7 points from Tuesday's low point, showing a complete recovery from the slump which followed the adverse decision in a patent suit. Cast Iron Pipe sold about five points higher and Baldwin, American Can and toher high priced industrials absorbed a good volume of selling at a point or so above Tuesday's close. St. Paul made a good showing in the low priced rails, while Atchison, which gained six points yesterday, sold off on profit taking.

The oil stocks had the benefit not ony of an improved technical position in the market, but also a number of favorable developments in the oil industry which passed unnoticed during the heavy liquidation and profit-taking of the last few days. Oil stocks made good gains in the curb and listed market; General Petroleum advancing two points; Sinclair 1½, Phillips 1½, California Petroleum, Cosden and a score of other oils were fractionally higher.

Another forward movement was under way in the motor stocks, with Mack Trucks up to; Studebaker, General Motors, Maxwell and Wills Overland a point higher on the average.

Call money was in good supply at 3½ per cent.

Toledo Live Stock.

Admits $5,000 "Loan" To Prison Officer In Bribery Trial

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 18—Another "loan" to an official of the United States penitentiary was placed in the record today at the trial of Albert E. Usartain, formerly Warden, and L. J. Fletcher, his chief deputy, on charges of conspiracy to solicit and accept bribes.

Mannie Kessler, New York bootlegger serving a sentence at the prison, testified he had loaned L. J. Fletcher $5,000 with which to further plans to enter the ice business in Miami, Fla.

Following this the defense entered brief rebuttal testimony and announced its case complete.

Charles Webster, one of the heads of the agency, is reported to have jumped a $500 bond which was posted last Thursday following his arrest on a charge of assault filed by Mrs. Mary Vropolac, of Parlett, in connection with a raid at her home.

Webster pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Justice W. D. Downer and was released under bond for a hearing on Monday morning. Upon motion of Attorney Thomas Rock, Justice Downer ordered that the case be continued while an effort is being made to locate Webster. It is further charged that Webster is at liberty under bond on a charge of manslaughter at Columbus, where it is said he was a former member of the police force.

the ground will sink until all the natural passageways have been closed.

Rescue operations were formally abandoned yesterday. No extensions of the shaft or laterals were attempted. "But please, boys, say it ended in a fight, not a quit," Carmichael asked. "The men would have gone on, even given their lives, if I had said so."

Simple Funeral Services.

Brief and simple funeral services were held on top of the cliff overlooking Sand Cave entrance and the pit where the rescue fight was waged. The Rev. C. K. Dickey, pastor of the Morse Cave and Cave City Methodist churches, was in charge of the services, assisted by the Rev. Roy H. Biser of the Glasgow Christian church.

Several hundred folk from the hills and towns around about gathered about the preachers, there was also music by the Cave City combined choirs, reading of scriptures. A sermon of thanks to the world and the rescuers, and Collins was left to sleep in the cave that he loved and explored in life.

RAIDERS FIGHT INDICTMENTS

WEBSTER-HARRIS SQUAD ATTACKS AUTHORITY OF STEUBENVILLE PROBERS

Detectives Who Took Part in East Liverpool-Wellsville Warfare File Demurrers Against Jefferson County Grand Jury's True Bills Charging Malicious Destruction of Property.

COURT RESERVES DECISION AFTER ARGUMENTS BY NINE DRY AGENTS

Charles Webster, One of Chiefs of Raiding Force, is Reported to Have Jumped $500 Bond Posted for Appearance in Assault Case Filed by Parlett Woman following Liquor Seizure.

Nine members of the Webster-Harris Detective agency, of Steubenville, some of them participants in the East Liverpool Wellsville raiders' war, today turned their guns on indictments returned against them by the Jefferson county grand jury.

Demurrers were filed in the Jefferson county common pleas court against charges of malicious destruction of property. It was declared in the arguments on the demurrers that the indictments were illegally drawn and that the grand jury was without authority to make the findings. It is also claimed that the indictments are without effect because neither the clerk nor the court presented the foreman or prosecutor with certified transcripts.

The enforcement officers, Charles Webster, Caleb Harris, John and William McCoy, Richard Riser, Charles McFarland, Fred Goff, Charles Sargent and B. F. Doom, were indicted following a raid on a construction camp near Knoxville, last December.

Judge J. S. Paisley, who heard the arguments, reserved his decision. Prosecuting Attorney Roy Merryman opposed the demurrer while Attorneys John Gardner and Edward McKinley appeared for the dry agents.

SENATE VOTES CONFIRMATION OF T. J. DUFFY

Opponents Content Themselves With Silent Protest.

Bloom and Huffman Choice for Utilities Commission.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 18—The senate, by a vote of 25 to 0, yesterday confirmed the re-appointment of T. J. Duffy, Democrat, of East Liverpool, to the industrial commission.

Opponents in the senate to confirmation of Duffy did not vote, but contented themselves with registering their silent protest. There was no debate. Senator Chester C. Bolton of Cleveland stated that an investigation of the record of Mr. Duffy among manufacturers and organized labor leaders had convinced the rules committee that the appointee was "well regarded, efficient and capable." Senator Homer A. Ramsey of Toledo spoke for confirmation and the roll was called.

Those not voting were Senators Harry M. Carpenter of Jefferson county and C. C. Chappelear of Pickaway

SEAL CREVICE OF SAND CAVE TOMB AS ITS VICTIM SLEEPS

Floyd Collins Will Not be Disturbed in Shroud of Rock.

NATION FORGETS

Nature Takes Steps to Protect Cavern Mausoleum.

SAND CAVE, Ky., Feb. 18. — To make sure that Floyd Collins will not be disturbed in his sand cave tomb 75 feet below the surface, workers today were sealing the crevice with cement.

This was decided upon after H. T. Carmichael, chief of the rescue crew which strove frantically to reach Collins while he was alive, abandoned plans to set off a huge charge of dynamite in the rescue shaft that would shake all the loose rock and talus together. Ned B. Doyle, owner of the farm on which Sand cave is located, objected to this procedure.

While Carmichael and engineers were conferring in regard to the last "clean-up" work to be done around the scene of the epic struggle to save a human from death, miners, scientists, engineers, surgeons, military men and the scores of others who have assisted in the work, were leaving for their homes in various parts of the country. And the nation was fast forgetting the tragedy in this little mountain village.

Crack at Base of Cliff.

Meanwhile, Floyd Collins sleeps in the tomb he perhaps would have chosen. There he will sleep forever.

Nature, which has sneered and mocked at man's puny efforts to bring him forth, is taking further steps to seal his mausoleum irrevocably.

A great crack appeared at the base of the cliff which overhangs the entrance to the cave. It is now six inches wide and the ground in front of the cliff seems to be sinking. Composed of treacherous, shifting muck even before the rescue operations started, the underground strata, which have been disturbed by the sinking of the shafts and tunnels, again are seeking to adjust themselves. It is likely that

HEART FAILURE CLAIMS CHIEF OF UNIVERSITY AT ANN ARBOR

Death of Coolidge Nominator Follows Pneumonia Attack.

Michigan Educator's End Comes While he is Sleeping.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 18. —Dr. Leroy Marion Burton, president of the University of Michigan, died at 3:20 a. m. today after an illness of 17 weeks. Failure of his heart to respond to the demands imposed by the relapse suffered last Thursday was named by physicians as the immediate cause of death. He was 50 years old.

Nurse Present At Death.

Dr. Burton's illness was diagnosed as pleural pneumonia. Funeral services will probably be private.

Dr. Burton died while sleeping quitely. No member of the family was present when the end came. A nurse who had just taken his pulse, finding it unchanged, heard him sigh deeply. She ran across the hall and summoned Dr. John P. Parsons, who was at the bedside in a moment. Dr. Burton, however, had already expired.

In the house were Mrs. Burton their son, Paul, 19, and their daughter, Jane, 12. The Rev. Dr. Harold Emerson Burton, of New York, brother of Dr. Burton, came to Ann Arbor last week, but found the patient too ill to be seen, and returned home Sunday.

Notification was sent to a daughter, Theodosia Burton Stewart.

Funeral Arrangements.

President and Mrs. Coolidge, to whom Mr. and Mrs. Burton a few months ago wired sympathy at the time of the death of the president's son, today paid similar respects to Dr. Burton.

Mrs. Burton received the following telegram from the White House:

"We are sharing your sorrow at the loss of our friend Dr. Burton, and send you and your family our sincere sympathies.

"Calvin Coolidge and Grace Coolidge"

Funeral services for Dr. Burton will be held Saturday, it was announced.

Special Officer Named in Killing Of Raid Victim

ASHLAND, Feb. 18.—Ill with quinsy, Carlos Gorham, indicted last night by a special grand jury here on the charge of second degree murder with a count for manslaughter in the killing of a rubber chemist, John Dalton on October 29, 1924, will probably not be arraigned today.

Attorney general Crabbe and Sherman Deaton, Urbana attorney, were in charge of the special investigation, which Governor Donahey authorized after a grand jury last November failed to indict any of the nine local and county enforcement officers in the posse at the time Dalton, who lived northwest of Ashland, was shot.

Gorham, who is 26, is the son of the Ashland chief of police, a former traffic officer and had been made a special officer on the night the posse started on the liquor search.

Incendiary Blast In Pittsburgh's Produce District

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 18.—Incendiary dynamite explosions blasted terror into the center of the wholesale produce district and demolished three buildings here today with a loss of $130,000, according to fire department officials. Firemen are digging in tons of debris following reports that five men might have been trapped, but owners of the buildings are certain no one was caught in the explosion.

Police believe the bombings may have been the work of a blackhand gang or by business rivals or the Landolina Brothers Produce company whose buildings were destroyed.

Lima Boy Dead After Being Shot By His Playmate

LIMA, Ohio, Feb. 18.—Richard Wilson, 11, was dead today after being shot last night by his boyhood chum and playmate, George Sandy, aged 9.

According to the story told police by eye witnesses of the tragedy, Sandy and Wilson were playing in front of the Sandy home where they became involved in a childish argument. Sandy immediately ran into his house and returned with a .22 calibre rifle.

When Wilson turned to come towards him, Sandy pulled the trigger and the lad fell face downward, shot through the head. "I shot him— I didn't mean to do it," the Sandy youth sobbed to the police.

The juvenile authorities are making an investigation, but they declare that it is doubtful if Sandy will be held accountable because of his extreme youth.

Copies of Legislation, Recommended by Special Committee, Voted by Assembly and Signed by Donahey, Received Here.

Another ray of hope for school districts and other taxing subdivisions, which are "hard up" for money to meet operating expenses for the present year, is contained in the provisions of House bill No. 27, passed as an emergency measure, and signed by the governor, as a means of providing temporary relief, it was declared today.

Copies of the measure, which embodies one of the eleven recommendations made to the governor by a special committee, which included ex-County Prosecutor Jesse Hanley and Superintendent of Schools Geiger appointed several weeks ago, were received here yesterday.

The bill provides that school boards or other divisions in a taxing district facing deficits in operating expenses, may authorize their clerk or accounting officer to compile a detailed state-

BORGLUM WILL CARVE WORLD'S LARGEST MONUMENT OUT OF GRANITE IN SOUTH DAKOTA'S HILLS

BY LLOYD LEHBRAS.
(Copyright 1925, I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The largest sculptured monnument in the world will be carved out of one great block of solid granite in the Black Hills of South Dakota at a point which is not far from the geopraphical center of the United States, Gutzom Borglum, the world famous sculptor, announced today.

Borglum, who is now carving the glory of the Confederacy on Stone Mountain in Georgia, will begin preliminary work on the massive memorial next spring and expects to complete it in four years at a cost of from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

As simple in design as it is monumental in scope the memorial will consist of only two stupendous figures of Washington and Lincoln, standing four hundred feet in height and from 36 to 40 feet in width, on a background of solid stone 600 feet high—50 feet higher than the Washington monument. Borglum's designs for the heads of Washington and Lincoln show that they will be 40 feet from brow to chin.

Washington and Lincoln Figures.

"I expect to carve a figure of Washington as he was at Valley Forge," Borglum explained, "A great silent figure in campaign uniform and cocked hat with his hand holding his coat together. Along side him I will carve Lincoln, bare-headed, with his hand resting on Washington's shoulder. Those two figures typify American history — Washington, the builder, and Lincoln, the saviour, of the union. There will be no secondary figures or decorations, just those two big figures standing in the beautiful natural surroundings of the Black Hills gazing over their nation. The cliff on which I will carve them is 600 feet high so that they can be seen from fifty miles away.

"Carving Stone Mountain is an attempt to put back in the nation's record for all time just what great good resulted from a civil war that was necessary to complete the work at which the politicians had failed, to forge a union of self determing states that is invisible. In carving the giant Monolith in South Dakota we will forever preserve in monumental form the great influences through which our country exists as exemplified by Washington and Lincoln."

Site Near Rapid City.

The stupendous sculpturing to be undertaken by the famous artist will be on a granite cliff standing in a 90,000 acre state park in the heart of the Black Hills along the western boundary of the state, 60 miles from the nearest town, Rapid City. The entire area is virgin country, timberlands and mountains cutting a jagged skyline against the blue western sky.

"And the natural beauty of the Black Hills will not be disturbed," Borglum asserted, "but will give the setting necessary to visualize in stone the power and sweep of our civilization through its very simplicity and magnitude."

Preliminary work is being financed by citizens of South Dakota, but a bill is now pending in congress through which the memorial will receive $100,000 from royalties on an aerial bomb invented by Lester P. Harlow. In-

Woman Mail Carrier Proves Self Heroine; Fights Snow Drifts

DUNDEE, N. Y., Feb.—Mrs. Mary Clark, only woman mail carrier in this vicinity, has proven herself to be as intrepid as the mail carrier of the North Country during the heavy snows of the last few weeks.

Her route takes her from the Dundee post office to the Sharkey post office, over roads which at this time of the year are almost obliterated by snow drifts.

She carries a shovel in the back of her light automobile, and when her car gets stuck she digs it out and travels on. She hasn't missed a day in the delivery of her mail.

POEMS THAT LIVE

Woodman, Spare That Tree.

Woodman, spare that tree!
Touch not a single bough!
In youth it sheltered me,
And I'll protect it now.
'Twas my forefather's hand
That placed it near his cot;
There, woodman, let it stand,
Thy axe shall harm it not!

That old familiar tree,
Whose glory and renown
Are spread o'er land and sea,
And would'st thou hew it down?
Woodman, forbear thy strike!
Cut not its earth-bound ties;
O spare that aged oak,
Now towering to the skies!

When but an idle boy
I sought its grateful shade;
In all their gushing joy
Here too my sisters played.
My mother kissed me here;
My father pressed my hand—
Forgive this foolish tear,
But let that old oak stand!

My heart-strings round thee cling
Close as thy bark, old friend!
Here shall the wildbird sing,
And still thy branches bend.
Old tree! the storm still brave!
And, woodman, leave the spot;
While I've a hand to save,
Thy axe shall harm it not.

LONDON DOCTOR HITS GLUTTONY IN HIS BOOK

Indictment is Made in Dr. Williams' Publication.

"TEA" CONDEMNED

Digestive Organs, Like Body, as Whole, Need Rest.

LONDON, Feb. — "The crime of this generation is gluttony begotten of an arrogant assumption of superiority."

This indictment is made by Dr. Leonard Williams in his recent book, "The Science and Art of Living."

Dr. Williams' denouncement of gluttony and particularly gluttony of Englishmen, has caused more than a mild sensation and aroused a considerable discussion of food and food values.

"An Englishman's breakfast, like his house, is his castle," says Dr. Williams. "Its foundations are laid in porridge; its battlements are of bacon and eggs and bread and butter; its minarets are of marmalade-in-all, a mortal gorge, which should move any moderate man to exempt his stomach from any further ordeal for at least 24 hours."

It comes pretty near being treason when Dr. Williams discusses that great national institution of England, "afternoon tea." One must differentiate between "afternoon tea" and "morning tea."

"A large and heavy blue pencil should obliterate the words 'afternoon tea' from the schedule of any sensible, self-respecting civilized community," Dr. Williams says. "Of all the inventions with which a cunning sprite seeks to lure people to physiological perdition this stodgy assemblage of saccharine and starchy horrors, insinuated between luncheon and dinner is at once the most indefensible and deadly."

The digestive organs, like the body as a whole, have need of a certain amount of rest, Dr. Williams believes, and he advocates fasts as an occasional variant to heavy eating.

The average glutton, however, will be able to forgive the doctor much, for he comes out definitely in favor of the moderate use of alcoholic drinks.

"If I were asked what I mean by their moderate use," says the doctor, "I should reply first that they should not be taken as a matter of routine, but reserved for occasional use. And I should further express a very decided opinion that in any case alcoholic liquors should not be taken until the day's work is over."

There is much food for thought in Dr. Williams' statements, and they have led to much thought of food.

Protest Entered.

COLUMBUS, Feb. — Objection to supervision of their business by the state utilities commission is voiced by members of the Ohio Truckers' association, comprising operators of motor trucks over irregular routes. Claim is made that, inasmuch as they have no regular routes, they are not common carriers. Nature of their business is such, these members assert, that it is virtually impossible to make reports covering their mileage through municipalities and counties. They charge, also, that they are compelled to contribute to state highway funds while their business competitors are exempted from such payments.

"John Doe" Forwards $6,100 in Checks To Revenue Bureau

AUGUSTA, Me., Feb.—Collector Frank J. Ham, of the Internal Revenue department here, is in possession of three checks, totaling $6,100, from "John Doe & Company" and drawn upon three individual Chicago banks. A letter accompanied the checks, each for about $2,000, and merely explained "Tax and interest."

Inquiry made of the three banks revealed that the sender of the checks was not known to them and that he gave the name of "John Smith," of Cleveland, Ohio.

White House Statt Heeds Coolidge Plea For Economy

Like Charity, it Should Begin at Home, so Budget Director Offers Cash Prize for Suggestions.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18. — Economy, according to President Coolidge, should begin at home.

Recently he asked General Lord, director of the budget, if he thought the White House could cut down any, and General Lord reckoned it could to the extent of about $12,500.

Now $12,500 is big money in almost anybody's office, and the additional economy edict had Noah F. Webster —who handles the president's cash— slightly worried. He saw hard sledding ahead.

Then Noah had an inspiration.

All of which leads up to the economy contest, open only to White House employes.

The idea is that everybody thinks hard until he thinks of a good scheme to save money around the office. Then he enters his scheme in the contest and if it turns out to be the best one he wins $10—the prize coming out of Noah's personal, right-hand pocket.

Halts Cross Word Puzzling.

Here is the circular letter passed around by Disbursing Clerk Webster that resulted in a general defection from cross word puzzling:

"Although this office has been putting into effect economy for the past two years, it is necessary that further economies in expenditures be brought about. It is desired that every employe of the office take a personal interest in this matter and make at least one suggestion. As the official responsible in this matter, I shall be glad to award a prize of $10 from personal fund to the employe who submits the best suggestion for bringing about a reduction of expenses. These suggestions should be along practical lines and should not be radical in their nature, and not tend to disorganize the work of the office."

Already a lot of economics have sprung up around the executive office. Where a cluster of lights used to burn there is a single beacon now. There is a noticeable shortage of towels in the washrooms. Paper cups no longer grace the drinking fountains, in their place are single glasses.

Plan to Push Tax Program Despite Donahey Objection

COLUMBUS, Feb. 18—Legislative leaders today made it clear that they propose to go ahead with the Republican permanent tax program, despite objections by Governor Donahey.

Two measures, now being studied by the governor with a view to a conference later, with legislative leaders, looking toward a compromise on tax legislation, both carrying home rule provisions, to meet the governor's wishes, are scheduled today to be made special orders in the House for next Tuesday afternoon when they will be called up for passage.

One is the Tallentire bill, providing that charter cities may, by vote of the people, fix their own tax limitations and also setting up a complete budget system for cities. This measure was scheduled to be reported out today by the house taxation committee.

The other is the Dodd bill, permitting sub-divisions to authorize, by vote of the people, extra levies either for running expenses, sinking funds or for special permanent improvements, outside of present tax limitations. This measure has been reported out of committee and is awaiting final action in the house.

Both measures are leading items in the Republican permanent tax relief program. Legislative leaders said that they would be passed and repassed if Gov. Donahey should veto them.

Woman is Ready to Take Her Seat in Congress on Mar. 4

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Feb. 18.—"Just common horse sense."

This homely but sound course of reasoning will guide San Francisco's new congresswoman in shaping her course in statehood.

Defeating three men and her nearest opponent by more than 20,000 votes, Mrs. Florence Prag Kahn will on March 4 take the seat in congress occupied by her late husband, Julius Kahn, for many years. Actually, unless President Coolidge calls an important session, her work in congress will begin next December.

"It will be my aim to carry on the policies and ideals of my husband," Mrs. Kahn, a placid, motherly countenanced lady, said today.

"I want to serve the people of San Francisco to the best of my ability and carry out my pledge for maintaining the high standards of service to the people that Mr. Kahn set."

The new congresswoman has no fads nor fancies in the way of legislation to press.

King George Shows Improvement, Says Official Bulletin

LONDON, Feb. 18—The general condition of King George led his three physicians to hope today that he would be able to overcome the bronchitis trouble without it developing into anything more serious.

His specific illness is bronchitis due to influenza, it was stated.

An official bulletin issued at Buckingham Palace today said:

"The King had a fair night, although there is no chance in the bronchitis. The general condition of his majesty shows improvement."

(Signed) "Stanley Hewitt, Dawson of Penn, Milson Rees."

For a time yesterday the King's physicians were concerned about his condition, it was said, and now they are taking every precaution to ward off possible complications which would be pneumonia.

DOUBLE DENIAL OF TOKIO RUMOR

TOKIO, Feb. 18—The United States embassy and the Japanese foreign office both denied this afternoon a story printed in the Japanese newspaper Kokumin, that American Ambassador Bancroft had conferred with foreign minister Shidehara, informing him that President Coolidge intended to summon an arms parley and sounding out Japan's attitude.

COMMERCIAL WAR WARNING ISSUED

county, who were absent from the chamber, and Senators Roy J. Gillen of Jackson county, J. Lowry Miller of Butler county, R. A. Powell of Wood county, Clarion L. Shafer of Van Wert county, Arthur W. Sweeney of Summit county and Frank C. Wise of Stark county.

Conspiracy Bill Appears.

Appointments by Governor Donahey of Former Lieutenant Governor Earl D. Bloom, Bowling Green, and James W. Huffman, Zanesville, both Democrats as members of the state utilities commission, are expected to be sent today to the senate for confirmation. Huffman is executive clerk in the governor's office.

Other Appointments.

In addition to his scheduled appointments to membership on the state utilities commission, Gov. Donahey also is expected to send to the senate for confirmation his appointments of a member of the state tax commission to succeed Chairman S. E. Forney, whose term expired February 2, of three trustees of Ohio state university, and a member of the state civil service commission.

It was generally understood in legislative circles that the governor would name Charles Follett a practicing attorney in Cleveland, as the member of the tax commission. Mr. Follett, who served as an assistant attorney general under Attorney General McGhee, has been the governor's advisor on tax legislation now pending before the general assembly.

The legislative mill will continue work on long calendars, while further floods of new bills are expected, in anticipation of the closing of the bill introducing period next Monday night. No outstanding measures are on the calendars for final passage today. The house will have before it for final passage Thursday afternoon of Collister city home rule bus bill.

The famous conspiracy bill, defeated two years ago, will appear again today on the legislative calendar when a new measure sponsored by Representative Ball, Scioto county, will be up for second reading and reference to committee in the house. The measure provides maximum fines of $10,000 and two years imprisonment for conspiracy to violate any law of the state or a sub-division.

Other Measures On Calendar.

Other measures scheduled for second reading and reference to House committees today include: By Hunt, Lucas, authorizing the state office building commission to select a site for the proposed new building wherever it chooses, either on or off the State House grounds; by Rose, Athens, requiring all contracts for municipal paving to contain provisions whereby contractors agree to keep improvement in repair, for not less than five, nor more than ten years; by Steiner, Hardin, extending terms of Prosecuting Attorneys for 1920 and providing for four-year terms; by Smith, Highland, abolishing right of utility companies to collect increased rates before the rate is approved by the utilities commission; by Westover, Mahoning, providing for a commission to revise and recodify existing state laws; by Robinson, Stark, to create a state board of barber examiners and to regulate the business, and a joint resolution by Hunt, Lucas, ordering the Attorney General to go to Washington to urge the Secretary of War to prevent the alleged Chicago "water steal."

Heart Failure

though the arrangements have not been completed yet.

Details thus far announced are that burial will take place in Forest Hill cemetery and that the body of Dr. Burton probably will lie in state before the funeral. George Lewis, mayor of Ann Arbor, has proclaimed public mourning until after the funeral hour. All flags in Ann Arbor are at half mast.

Call Meeting of Deans.

A meeting of the deans was to be called this morning to take any official action which might be deemed proper.

Dr. Harry B. Hutchins, president emeritus of the university, who was recently named one of a committee of three to manage the university pending Dr. Burton's recovery, was to preside at the dean's meeting. It was doubtful today whether any move toward appointment of a successor to Dr. Burton would be taken until the regular meeting of the board of regents, Feb. 17.

Dr. Burton's illness started when he collapsed after introducing Viljhalmur Stefanson, Arctic explorer, in Hill auditorium. An illness a year previous, before he made his nominating speech for President Calvin Coolidge at the Cleveland Republican convention, left his system weakened, physicians said.

His condition became very critical during the early stages of the illness, necessitating an operation upon the glands of the throat. His wonderful constitution enabled him to come through crisis after crisis, however, until the serious relapse last week.

The relapse was accompanied by hemorrhages which, physicians said, indicated that his heart was too weak to carry off all the blood delivered to the lungs, causing congestion there.

Dr. D. M. Cowie, the attending physician, diagnosed the illness yesterday as streptococcus pleurisy.

Dr. Burton was one of the closest friends of the president and annually visited the Coolidges at the White House.

Leader in Education.

As President of Smith college, Northampton, Mass., the University of Minnesota and the University of Michigan, Dr. Burton was recognized as one of the leaders in educational movements in America. He was born August 30, 1874, at Brooklyn, Iowa, receiving his bachelor of arts degree from Carleton college, Northfield, Minnesota, in 1900, and an additional degree from Yale with highest honors in 1909.

Dr. Burton was awarded his doctor of philosophy degree from Yale in 1907, a doctor of divinity degree from Carleton in 1909 and a doctor of laws from Tufts in 1911. On June 14, 1900, he married Nina Leona Moses of Northfield, Minn.

An instructor of Greek in Carleton Academy, in 1899-1909, Dr. Burton was named President of Windom institute, Windom, Minnesota, in 1900, where he served until appointed an assistant Professor at Yale in 1907.

Dr. Burton entered the clergy in 1908 was pastor of the church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y. While serving in this capacity, he was named President of Smith college, where he spent seven years until 1917. He took over the position as president of the University of Michigan in 1920. Since he has been President, a score of the greatest college buildings in the nation have been erected in Ann Arbor.

ment, showing deficits which are likely to occur during the year. The board may then issue certificates of indebtedness to meet these expenses. This must be completed on or before March 15, of this year.

May Petition Election.

A resolution must then be enacted, asking the board of elections to prepare petitions calling for the levy of a tax in an amount not greater than said deficiency and not greater than would be produced by a levy of three mills on the tax duplicate of the district.

These petitions would be circulated among the electors of the district under direction of the election board, parties circulating the same to receive not more than five cents for each signature secured. As soon as signatures, representing a majority of the electors who voted for governor in the last November election, have been secured, the petition shall be certified to the county auditor, who is authorized to place the special tax for collection in June. The petitions must be returned to the election boards not later than May 1 and shall be certified to the county auditor not later than May 20.

The emergency in the bill lies in the fact that "a great many municipalities and school districts are unable to carry on their necessary activities with the funds derived from taxation and all other sources of revenue and if authority is not vested in said subdivision to obtain the necessary funds with which to function, the peace, health and safety of the community will be endangered."

Several school districts in the county are facing a financial situation, which may mean a reduction in the school term this year as the result of the defeat of special millage issues at the general election last November. The new law will place these districts in line to secure immediate relief, it is pointed out, provided they act at once.

one child; Nathan Franklin and a girl friend and Hugh McKenzie, was enroute to Elwood City, Pa., to attend the wedding anniversary of a relative.

While awaiting the car, they noticed William Cline, city hall turnkey, Brady McKenzie said. However, Cline left before the arrival of the car.

McKenzie and his party left the building, when the interurban car stopped on the Broadway tracks. The three men—the two McKenzie brothers and Franklin—set their suit cases down on the sidewalk while the car was being unloaded, Clutter and Mays stepping to the side of the car. The women members of the family, Brady McKenzie declares, were standing beside them on the sidewalk when Patrolman McFarland, accompanied by Cline, approached him and inquired what was in the suit case. McKenzie said he replied that it contained nothing but a set of table ware, a gift for the couple they were to visit.

McFarland, McKenzie claims, ordered that he open it. McKenzie threw back the lid of the suit case and lifted the dishes in one end of it to convince the patrolman that it contained no liquor.

McFarland Defends Action.

"Now let's see what's in those other two bags," McFarland is alleged to have commanded Hugh McKenzie and Franklin. They opened their suit cases. Brady McKenzie charges that the officer ran his hand through articles of clothing which the brother had packed in his bag, but merely looked into the satchel of Franklin. Finding no liquor, the patrolman walked away. McKenzie says the women and children members of his party stood beside them while the search was being made.

In defense of his actions, Patrolman McFarland today declared that he had received two complaints, one Friday night and the other Saturday that the McKenzie brothers had planned to take liquor with them when they left town or bring a quantity back with them when they returned and that he was on the lookout for them. He claimed that he asked Turnkey Cline to walk through the waiting room to ascertain whether the McKenzies were there.

"Did you have a search warrant to look through the suit cases?" McFarland was asked.

"No, I didn't," he replied. "An officer oftimes has not time enough to obtain a search warrant in order to get the man whom he suspects of violating the law."

Says He Would Do It Again.

McFarland said that he picked up the suit cases carried by Brady McKenzie and ordered that he open them, but denied having touched any of the three bags after they were opened, merely glancing inside them.

"I do not feel that I committed an offense in asking those men to open their suitcases, when I suspected they were transferring liquor," he declared. "In fact, I would do the same thing again in similar circumstances."

Brady McKenzie, who is employed at the C. C. Thompson pottery, said he would call the matter to the attention of Chief McDermott today. He said he had not determined whether he will enter suit for damages against the officer.

Coal Miner's Right Hand is Amputated Following Accident

Carl Anderson, 25, Salineville coal miner, suffered the amputation of his right hand at the City hospital today as the result of an accident at the Grant Coal company's mine, about two miles east of Salineville, about 7:30 a. m.

Anderson was operating one of the trains, hauling coal from the mine, when his hand was mangled after being caught between one of the cars and the electric motor. Fellow workers went to his rescue and assisted him to the company's office. Dr. C. A. McCullough, of Salineville, after an examination, ordered Anderson's removal to the hospital. He was brought here in the John Hutson ambulance. Dr. W. A. Hobbs assisted in the operation.

The injured man was working in the place of John Scarry, Salineville, whose arm was broken in a mine accident last Monday. Anderson has a wife and child.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Active industrial stocks led the whole market in a sharp recovery of prices in the early trading today. At the opening of the market and continued to move forward, under the leadership of United States Steel, American Can, American Smelting, Cast Iron Pipe, etc. Oil stocks contributed to the bullish movement, most of the best known independent oils moving upward a point or more in the first hour.

Another record smashing report of freight movement for this time of year was issued by the American Railway association, showing car loadings for the week of February 27, at 928,244 cars, a considerable increase over other comparative records. This was a bullish factor.

U. S. Steel ran forward on heavy trading to 124⅝, up 1½ points in the first hour. American Smelting at 99⅝, was up nearly 7 points from Tuesday's low point, showing a complete recovery from the slump which followed the adverse decision in a patent suit. Cast Iron Pipe sold about five points higher and Baldwin, American Can and other high priced industrials absorbed a good volume of selling at a point or so above Tuesday's close. St. Paul made a good showing in the low priced rails, while Atchison, which gained six points yesterday, sold off on profit taking.

The oil stocks had the benefit not ony of an improved technical position in the market, but also a number of favorable developments in the oil industry which passed unnoticed during the heavy liquidation and profit-taking of the last few days. Oil stocks made good gains in the curb and listed market; General Petroleum advancing two points; Sinclair 1⅞, Phillips 1½, California Petroleum, Cosden and a score of other oils were fractionally higher.

Another forward movement was under way in the motor stocks, with Mack Trucks up to; Studebaker, General Motors, Maxwell and Willys Overland a point higher on the average.

Call money was in good supply at 3½ per cent.

Admits $5,000 "Loan" To Prison Officer In Bribery Trial

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 18—Another "loan" to an official of the United States penitentiary was placed in the record today at the trial of Albert E. Usartain, formerly Warden, and L. J. Fletcher, his chief deputy, on charges of conspiracy to solicit and accept bribes.

Mannie Kessler, New York bootlegger serving a sentence at the prison, testified he had loaned L. J. Fletcher $5,000 with which to further plans to enter the ice business in Miami, Fla.

Following this the defense entered brief rebuttal testimony and announced its case complete.

Charles Webster, one of the heads of the agency, is reported to have jumped a $500 bond which was posted last Thursday following his arrest on a charge of assault filed by Mrs. Mary Vropolac, of Parlett, in connection with a raid at her home.

Webster pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Justice W. D. Downer and was released under bond for a hearing on Monday morning. Upon motion of Attorney Thomas Rock, Justice Downer ordered that the case be continued while an effort is being made to locate Webster. It is further charged that Webster is at liberty under bond on a charge of manslaughter at Columbus, where it is said he was a former member of the police force.

Rescue operations were formally abandoned yesterday. No extensions of the shaft or laterals were attempted. "But please, boys, say it ended in a fight, not a quit," Carmichael asked. "The men would have gone on, even given their lives, if I had said so."

Simple Funeral Services.

Brief and simple funeral services were held on top of the cliff overlooking Sand Cave entrance and the pit where the rescue fight was waged. The Rev. C. K. Dickey, pastor of the Morse Cave and Cave City Methodist churches, was in charge of the services, assisted by the Rev. Roy H. Biser of the Glasgow Christian church.

Several hundred folk from the hills and towns around about gathered about the preachers, there was also music by the Cave City combined choirs, reading of scriptures. A sermon of thanks to the world and the rescuers, and Collins was left to sleep in the cave that he loved and explored in life.

A Child Labor Warning

The New York World, which opposed the child labor amendment on the ground that it was better to leave such matters to the several states, gives this warning to those who have been rejoicing over the defeat of the amendment:

"You gentlemen of the textile mills and canneries and so forth had best remember that the non-ratification of this amendment does not mean its final defeat. If after a sincere effort is made to bring the states up to standard it becomes evident that the curse of child labor is ineradicable by state action, sentiment for this amendment will revive. The employers of child labor are today in the position of the liquor interests before the war. They have been granted a period of grace in which to reform themselves or at least let themselves be reformed by state action. If they are as stupid as the liquor interests they will bring down upon themselves and the country the whole force of the federal power."

It is a true statement of the situation. There is no question in the mind of the American people as to the importance of protecting children from exploitation, ignorance and physical impairment. The only question is as to the best method of affording protection. And if there is not rapid and general improvement in the backward states, either from legislation or from voluntary reform among employers of child labor, there will soon be an overpowering demand again for federal action.

The Iron Ring

Everyone, perhaps, has seen a tree circled with an iron wire and left to its fate. It means death to that tree as surely as an iron band around the waist would mean death to a growing child. The live wood widens and eventually covers the wire ring, and the tree may appear to be as vigorous and durable as its fellows. But the barrier is not really overcome. Inevitably, sooner or later, it cuts the tree in two, and the trunk falls.

A city may be like that. Chicago today is described as bound by an iron ring—its famous "Loop." That elevated line, built around the down-town business section when the city was comparatively small, is now squeezing the life out of it. The transportation facilities are inadequate for that seething center of commerce, industry and recreation, and business has difficulty in growing beyond it.

Wherefore Chicago is now facing the expenditure of more than $400,000,000 to escape from the iron band and continue growing.

How many American cities are likewise hampered, if not by a circular barrier, at least by artificial barriers of some kind on this side or that, hindering natural expansion and preventing the flow of modern traffic.

There was a time when the great problem of the American city was political. Municipal government is now greatly improved. The problem now is engineering, to meet the needs of business and traffic, lest growth be stifled.

Perfection Diet

Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters, author of a popular book on diet, has a recipe for a new race of Americans, healthy and energetic and neither fat nor lean. Here it is:

"Buy a quart of milk for each child and a pint for each adult. Divide the remainder of the food money into three parts, using one-third for fruits and vegetables, one-third for bread, cereal and fats and one-third for meat, eggs, sweets and miscellaneous."

Physical perfection may not be quite so simple a thing as this. Exercise, rest, sleep, fresh air and a few other factors play important roles. Yet Dr. Hunt's financial-dietetic formula would probably make a big improvement in most families.

Especially worth heeding is her warning against too much sweet and starchy food in the diet. She insists that 130 pounds of sugar per year, eaten by the average American, is far too much, and wants to put milk, fresh vegetables, fruits and whole-grain cereals ahead of candy and cake.

Three women dog-catchers in Brooklyn, N. Y., bagged 100 dogs the first day. Wonder how many mice they would catch in a rodent round-up?

The cost of living is still high in Germany, but it's something to have reduced the cost of reparation.

Say what you will about the futility of academic education, they do need some doctors of laws down in Washington.

THE FIGHT FOR MILEAGE TICKETS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The long drawn out fight between the commercial travelers of the United States and the railroads, known as the interchangeable mileage ticket case, is about to be closed. The interstate commerce commission has concluded its hearings, briefs have been filed and the oral arguments have been made, and within four or five weeks it is expected that the commission's decision will be handed down.

Then, unless the decision is adverse to the railroads and appeal is taken to the courts, as was done when the commission decided against the carriers about two years ago, the controversy will be at an end. Should the railroads secure another injunction in the lower courts and the case be carried to the supreme court of the United States, the fight may drag on interminably, for it is probable that congress will be asked to take action in the matter.

The question involved is whether the railroads shall be required to sell interchangeable mileage or scrip coupons at a rate less than the one-way full fare rate, the reduction asked being 20 per cent, or a $90 book for $72.

The reduction would not, of course, apply to commercial travelers alone, for anyone who desires to do so and who has the price can purchase the mileage books when they are on sale. However, the traveling men are the ones who will be most benefited by the reduction, and it is they who have made the fight for it through a central organization known as the National Council of Traveling Salesmen's association.

For almost 50 years the railroads of the country sold mileage books at reduced rates. They did this of their own volition, and not because it was forced upon them by any governmental regulation. As a rule, the discount from the regular fare represented by the cost of the mileage books was 33 1-3 per cent. That is, 1,000-mile books were sold for $20 when the regular fare was cents per mile and a one-way ticket for 1,000 miles would have cost $30.

WIPED OUT IN WAR TIME

This concession to what might be termed wholesale patrons of the railroads—those who bought their transportation in large quantities—was wiped out under government operation of the railroads during the Wrld war. The order of the railroad administration was issued in 1918, and the traveling men say they accepted it without a murmur as a war time necessity.

However, when in 1920 the interstate commerce commission increased passenger rates 20 per cent, or from 3 cents a mile to 3.6 cents, and that increase was made applicable to mileage books, the men who are said to spend on an average nine months out of every year on the road started an agitation to be reinstated in the advantage they once enjoyed.

They appealed to the railroad managements, but without avail, and then were told that the interstate commerce commission could do nothing for them. Then they turned to congress, and in 1922 the national legislative body passed an amendment to the transportation act of 1920 which directed the commission to take up the mileage ticket question.

On March 6, 1923, the commission issued an order, effective May 1 following, prescribing rules and regulations for the issuance by the railroads of the desired mileage tickets. However, the carriers would not take that as final and appealed to the courts, securing an injunction that restrained the commission from making its order effective.

Thereupon the government, the interestate commerce commission and the commercial travelers' organization took an appeal to the supreme court of the United States, which on January 24, 1924, affirmed the decision of the lower court. The supreme court took the position that the interstate commerce commission had not acted on its own independent judgment in reducing the rate for mileage tickets, but had construed the act of congress as mandatory upon it.

The commission then vacated its order and the traveling men began their fight anew in the proceedings that are now coming to a head.

POINTS OF DIFFERENCE

There are numerous points of difference between the travelers and the railroads. In the first place, although not of major importance, they are far from agreeing as to the number of commercial travelers there in the United States. The railroads cite the census reports, which say there are approximately 180,000 "traveling salesmen" in the country, whereas the travelers assert that their various organizations have a total membership of 700,000 and that undoubtedly there are many men and women who are in reality commercial travelers who do not belong, although they have some members who do travel as a business.

The railroads rather get on both sides of this question of numbers, for at one point they argue that there are not sufficient commercial travelers to entitle them to especial consideration in the matter of rates, and a little later they contend that there are so many of them that the proposed reduction would seriously impair the revenues of the carriers.

That question of revenue is the real bone of contention and is considered from several angles. First, the carriers insist that they are not earning the 5.75 per cent net on valuation, which they are supposed to get, and that therefore there can be no reduction of any rates. In answer to this it is asserted that there is nothing in the law that guarantees or promises the railroads any specific rate of earnings, that the tentative valuation of the roads is too high anyhow, and that in any event the earnings of the roads would be increased through the issuance of mileage books because travel would be stimulated and encouraged.

The traveling men also contend that there is no evidence the railroads are not earning a fair return, and that the commission may order mileage books at reduced rates irrespective of the carriers' rate of return on valuation. To hold otherwise, they say, would paralyze the commission's rate-making powers.

Another point stressed by the travelers is that by selling mileage books the railroads have the benefit of holding constantly a great sum of money for which they have not rendered service. For instance, the average traveling man uses a 2,500-mile book every two months, it is claimed, wherefore the roads have his $72 for a 60-day period before completing the service for which it pays. In the aggregate this would run into the millions.

Labor costs have materially decreased since transportation rates were raised in 1920 and the traveling men say that this should be reflected in reductions in passenger rates, especially to them since they are wholesale buyers. The individual commercial man, it is said, will on an average travel about 15,000 miles a year, as against 250 to 300 miles for the average of other patrons of the transportation industry.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—There is a rich man in Gotham whose love for Main street has endured since the day he packed the carpet bag and took the 8:15 for the metropolis. He made his fortune here and won success, but his heart is in his little home town.

In his home he has a replica of his favorite room back yonder. Here he spends his idle moments in an atmosphere of horse hair furniture, a basket of fruit chromo, a hanging coal oil lamp, onyx clock and rag carpet.

In the garage there is an old blacksmith's anvil. He likes to tap it now and then with a hammer so it will give forth that pleasant "ting-ting—ting-ggg!" familiar to every resident of a village. He does not share these cherished views alone.

There are thousands of New Yorkers who remain on and on because their business interests hold them. They would rather have a two-line note of approval in their home town paper than a half column editorial of approval in the New York World.

The longer they live here the firmer the ties are cemented. Most of them day dream of the days they will return but they rarely do. New York inspires the continual greed for gold and they carry on until the end.

Suburban life out where the pavement ends only half satisfies. It is too much affected by city contact. The charm of Main street is not there. One misses the open forum at the village hotel, the back fence gossip and friendly intimacy.

Many suburban dwellers do not know their next door neighbors. The people who pass the front bay window are strangers. There is, of course, compensation in front yards, trees and porches. But the beloved intangible something of Main street is not there.

New York has single buildings which in value are the equivalent of entire cities. The Equitable, assessed for $30,000,000, is worth more than all the property in Amsterdam, N. Y., or Davenport, Ia. The Waldorf, valued at $12,225,000, is worth more than all the property in Columbia, S. C.; Joliet, Ill., or San Diego, Cal. Altman's, valued at $14,060,000, is worth more than all Decatur, Ill., or Sacramento, Cal. The total assessed valuation of property in New York is $13,125,457,745. It is more than the assessed valuation of the following states together: Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Arkansas, Nevada, Colorado, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Washington, Oregon and Minnesota. These 14 great commonwealths, comprising more than two-thirds of the entire United States west of the Mississippi, are—all of them—worth $13,050,000,000.

I believe the thing the transplanted Main streeter in the metropolis misses most is the clubby Pullman washroom intimacy of the small town. I don't believe small town people appreciate this simple neighborliness. Sticking the head into the barber shop door to see if Bill is there or to whistle out front for Tom to join you—well, it cannot be done here. If you stuck your head into a barber shop door suddenly you might be taken for a hold-up bandit, and a shrill whistle in front of any home might cause your arrest by the society for the prevention of unnecessary noises.

Carnegie hall is soon to be torn down and a modern office building will arise where one of the world's greatest musical centers has operated for 33 years. There is also a rumor that the Metropolitan opera house is soon to be demolished. A new site is now being considered.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By DANIEL O'CONNELL.

DUBLIN, Feb. 18.—Remarkable developments the Irish political situation have taken place during the past few months.

The two outstanding facts are these: First, it is no longer certain that the Republicans will stay outside the Dail and continue to carry on their guerilla political tactics in the country. Secondly, the Free State or government party is no longer the power that it was, due to dissension within its ranks.

Many of the government party's former supporters have disagreed with President Cosgrave over matters of policy and have formed themselves into a party under the name of the national group, led by Joseph McGrath, a budding young statesman in the thirties. His party claims that President Cosgrave is not carrying out a sufficiently national policy and is ousting all those who assisted Michael Collins in the fight against the 'Black and Tans."

This new party looks as if it might be the genesis of a future big Irish party, for many of President Cosgrave's biggest supporters are inclined to agree with its ideals. It includes many of the ex-officers of the old Republican army who sided with Collins at the time of the treaty. General Liam Tobin is, perhaps, the biggest figure, next to McGrath, in the party, for he commands general support and respect because of his distinguished record in the rebellion and its results. Disappointed and disgruntled ex-officers of all political parties are flocking to the new party in hopes that it may be able to remedy their grievances.

Some Free State ministers, and Kevin O'Higgins, the minister for home affairs, in particular, describe the attitude taken by the new group as "incentive to mutiny," and say that the state and the welfare of the country should come before all things and personalities. He indicates that he will not hesitate to put down any attempt at mutiny or rebellion with all the means at his command.

The government has the support of General Mulcahy in its opposition to the National group. Mulcahy is very popular in the country; and should President Cosgrave resign for reasons of ill health, or for any other reason, it is considered likely that either Mulcahy or O'Higgins will be the next president.

Meantime Eamonn de Valera continues to decline to enter the Dail until the oath to which he objects is withdrawn. His party is gaining power as a result of the government party split, but it is considered that he still lacks strength to win a general election.

The Labor group is having its difficulties, too. Tom Johnson and Jim Larkin continue at loggerheads and are not likely to compose their differences yet. Larkin's influence over the workers is by no means as strong as it was, due to the unemployment problem, and he is continually in and about the courts over libel cases. He is now appearing before the courts in his examination for bankruptcy.

Therefore, though the government party is full of dissension, it seems certain that it will continue in power for some time yet, because the other parties have the same difficulties.

Irishmen should have enough elections this year to satisfy them.

Due to the action of the National group in resigning from the Dail, there will be a miniature general election a few weeks from now. Besides this, there is a probability of the government resigning in the summer and seeking a vote of confidence, while in December the entire Free State will be called upon to elect about 20 new senators to replace those automatically retiring from office. Distinct from these elections, there will be the usual municipal elections of local bodies, whose seven years' period of office is nearly ended.

Now that the political outlook has quieted following the formation of the National group, the country is threatened with a new party under the leadership of Lord Middleton, who, as St. John Brodrick, was British minister of war from 1900 to 1903.

Its chief plank is likely to be a constitutional opposition to the boundary between the Free State and Ulster. The party is likely to get considerable support in the cities and towns, and, in a coalition with the farmer party—the third strongest party in the Free State—it is considered extremely likely that it will loom largely in the near future in the political fortunes of the country.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

COLLINS DEAD—BETTER SO.

Floyd Collins' suffering is over. The rescue party found him dead, in the cave trap. He had been dead more than 24 hours when rescuers broke through the roof of his tomb.

Better dead than living, in any case, if only one or two days of the intense suffering were escaped.

This man's death illustrates the power, the weakness of human imagination. A hundred men risked their lives to save his. Doctors went to his rescue by flying machine, but could do nothing. The entire nation followed closely the tragic story.

Imagination showed the man lying in the low cave, his leg crushed by the 14,000 pound rock, existing day after day, for nearly two weeks, in horrible agony and discomfort.

OUR FEEBLE IMAGINATION

It was possible to imagine clearly that dreadful situation. And the nation sympathized. Any legislature would gladly have voted $100,000 to save Collins.

The same nation, through its legislators, refuses to pass the child labor amendment that would free tens of thousands of children from years of slow torment.

The feeble public imagination cannot see clearly those children in the mills.

A GREAT NATION'S DANGER

Brigadier General Mitchell, a brave man, staking his brigadier's star, as Cyrus H. K. Curtis has well said, on his fight for the national safety, deserves the thanks of this nation, and will have them.

If he has found no supporters high up in the army or navy, more shame to his superior officers that are controlled by battleship building interests, or have idled away their time in the public service, learning nothing.

Desk men that get extra flying pay without ever flying, fail to support General Mitchell, quite naturally. He flies and risks his neck in our inferior machines constantly. That puzzles them. But men that flew in the war are back of him, 2,000 of them. And whatever other "heads" of the army and navy may do it is quite certain that President Coolidge, the real head of the army and navy, will see that Mitchell is properly treated.

Men of every branch of service, in the late war, saw with their own eyes the power of aircraft. Everyone of them should write to the president, if only 10 lines, urging an adequate air defense. President Coolidge will be glad to hear from any ex-soldier on any other citizen.

Every other citizen should read the testimony before the congressional committee yesterday by General Amos A. Fries, chief of the army chemical warfare service.

"There is no real answer to gas attacks, except airplanes with which to stop the enemy's onslaught, and gas him in turn."

General Fries further testified that gas warfare with the new chemicals would be 50 times as deadly as it was in the last war.

And, as for anti-aircraft guns, smoke curtains, and sprinkled smoke, combined with poison gases and rained down from the clouds would make anti-aircraft worthless artillery. The marksmen would be firing at a sky filled with smoke, while the flyers rained down their explosives and deadly gases.

EVERY MAN'S BUSINESS

The people's business is to realize what the next war will mean, and see that the nation is prepared for defense. Nice old maids in the navy quote Captain Mahan's book on sea power and his statement that command of the sea means command of the world.

Captain Mahan's, a great sea captain, knew as little about modern war, when he wrote his book, as Napoleon knew about transporting troops by rail, or using submarines to attack England.

Air power is now the only power. Who rules the air can rule the world. The great cities, the dwelling of every rules, president or king, is at his mercy.

This country needs fighting aircraft, ten thousand of them, the most efficient fleet in the world, to be used for the mails and other public use in peace, for fighting in war.

And, whether they "pay" or not, is of no importance. Safety is cheap at any price. One efficient grafting patriot, if a war came, could cost this nation more than all the flying machines necessary to save us from foreign aviators, and from home-bred corporation and individual grafters. If you believe that write to the president and tell him so. You'll help to pay the grafting bills and get your share of war from the sky, if war ever catches us unprepared.

You may say "too much aircraft talk in that column, I'll skip for a while."

All right, skip, if a war finds us lacking an adequate air force, you will remember this warning.

"This country is unprepared, defenseless as Germany was, when the French marched into the Ruhr. Any one of four nations, in a sudden attack, could destroy every great city in America and hold the nation to ransom.

The oceans no longer protect us. The Pacific coast is only 30 hours from Asia and the Atlantic coast 10 hours from Europe by airplane.

First would come the swift high power planes, throwing our cities and our unprepared government into confusion, with attacks on half a dozen cities at once, including Washington. Then would come the slower, heavy bombing machines, to force conviction upon us.

And, finally, would arrive in very safe machines, plenipotentiaries, with power to fix terms for us.

If they happened to be very polite gentlemen with exquisite manners and slanting eyes, courteously expressing their regret, and bringing us a new set of ready made immigration laws, we should not like it.

But that would not help us. Flying machines would help us and nothing else would.

Our army is at the mercy of gas and bombs from the sky. Our cities under airplane attack would be made horrible holes of suffocation and terror.

Our lumbering battleships would be a ghastly joke. And the government official that defends and urges reliance on the battleship in defiance of common sense, because his friends make millions in building battleships is a dangerous traitor and needs to have the truth told plainly.

God help those responsible from top to bottom, if an attack from the air ever finds this nation defenseless.

ALL WOMEN WHO WORK

Whether in the home, store, shop, mill or office, they alone know how often they are really unfit for work. It may be a headache, backache, pain in the side, nervous depression, cramps or those dreadful dragging-down pains, all of which symptoms have their origin in some feminine ailment that is making life a burden. In almost every such case these ailments will yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For a great many years this simple root and herb remedy has been restoring women to health and strength and it will pay every suffering woman to try it.

Woman Mail Carrier Proves Self Heroine; Fights Snow Drifts

DUNDEE, N. Y., Feb.—Mrs. Mary Clark, only woman mail carrier in this vicinity, has proven herself to be as intrepid as the mail carrier of the North Country during the heavy snows of the last few weeks.

Her route takes her from the Dundee post office to the Sharkey post office, over roads which at this time of the year are almost obliterated by snow drifts.

She carries a shovel in the back of her light automobile, and when her car gets stuck she digs it out and travels on. She hasn't missed a day in the delivery of her mail.

POEMS THAT LIVE

Woodman, Spare That Tree.

Woodman, spare that tree!
Touch not a single bough!
In youth it sheltered me,
And I'll protect it now.
'Twas my forefather's hand
That placed it near his cot;
There, woodman, let it stand,
Thy axe shall harm it not!

That old familiar tree,
Whose glory and renown
Are spread o'er land and sea,
And would'st thou hew it down?
Woodman, forbear thy strike!
Cut not its earth-bound ties;
O spare that aged oak,
Now towering to the skies!

When but an idle boy
I sought its grateful shade;
In all their gushing joy
Here too my sisters played.
My mother kissed me here;
My father pressed my hand—
Forgive this foolish tear,
But let that old oak stand!

My heart-strings round thee cling
Close as thy bark, old friend!
Here shall the wildbird sing,
And still thy branches bend.
Old tree! the storm still brave!
And, woodman, leave the spot;
While I've a hand to save,
Thy axe shall harm it not.

LONDON DOCTOR HITS GLUTTONY IN HIS BOOK

Indictment is Made in Dr. Williams' Publication.

"TEA" CONDEMNED

Digestive Organs, Like Body, as Whole, Need Rest.

LONDON, Feb. — "The crime of this generation is gluttony begotten of an arrogant assumption of superiority."

This indictment is made by Dr. Leonard Williams in his recent book, "The Science and Art of Living."

Dr. Williams' denouncement of gluttony and particularly gluttony of Englishmen, has caused more than a mild sensation and aroused a considerable discussion of food and food values.

"An Englishman's breakfast, like his house, is his castle," says Dr. Williams. "Its foundations are laid in porridge; its battlements are of bacon and eggs and bread and butter; its minarets are of marmalade-in-all, a mortal gorge, which should move any moderate man to exempt his stomach from any further ordeal for at least 24 hours."

It comes pretty near being treason when Dr. Williams discusses that great national institution of England, "afternoon tea." One must differentiate between "afternoon tea" and "morning tea."

"A large and heavy blue pencil should obliterate the words 'afternoon tea' from the schedule of any sensible, self-respecting civilized community," Dr. Williams says. "Of all the inventions with which a cunning sprite seeks to lure people to physiolological perdition this stodgy assemblage of saccharine and starchy horrors, insinuated between luncheon and dinner is at once the most indefensible and deadly."

The digestive organs, like the body as a whole, have need of a certain amount of rest, Dr. Williams believes, and he advocates fasts as an occasional variant to heavy eating.

The average glutton, however, will be able to forgive the doctor much, for he comes out definitely in favor of the moderate use of alcoholic drinks.

"If I were asked what I mean by their moderate use," says the doctor, "I should reply first that they should not be taken as a matter of routine, but reserved for occasional use. And I should further express a very decided opinion that in any case alcoholic liquors should not be taken until the day's work is over."

There is much food for thought in Dr. Williams' statements, and they have led to much thought of food.

Protest Entered.

COLUMBUS, Feb. — Objection to supervision of their business by the state utilities commission is voiced by members of the Ohio Truckers' association, comprising operators of motor trucks over irregular routes. Claim is made that, inasmuch as they have no regular routes, they are not common carriers. Nature of their business is such, these members assert, that it is virtually impossible to make reports covering their mileage through municipalities and counties. They charge, also, that they are compelled to contribute to state highway funds while their business competitors are exempted from such payments.

"John Doe" Forwards $6,100 in Checks To Revenue Bureau

AUGUSTA, Me., Feb.—Collector Frank J. Ham, of the Internal Revenue department here, is in possession of three checks, totaling $6,100, from "John Doe & Company" and drawn upon three individual Chicago banks. A letter accompanied the checks, each for about $2,000, and merely explained "Tax and interest."

Inquiry made of the three banks revealed that the sender of the checks was not known to them and that he gave the name of "John Smith," of Cleveland, Ohio.

Dancing Musical Hit, "Lollipop," at Ceramic on Mar. 3

Henry W. Savage will offer his dancing musical hit, "Lollipop," with Ada May and the original New York cast and production, at the Ceramic theatre Tuesday, March 3.

Its small star, Ada May, has recently celebrated her twenty-first birthday. December was the month on and after which Miss Ada May qualified as a voter. In "Lollipop" she is playing her first star role, and as Zelda Sears, author of the libretto, declared in a curtain speech on the opening night in New York, "Ada May is the life of the party." Stardom in musical comedy, especially under the conservative management of Henry W. Savage, is unusual at twenty-one, but Ada May carries her big responsibilities lightly and delightfully. If she weren't so young she might not play her part with such youthful joy and abandon. As to experience, the little yellow-haired "Lollipop" star has danced in public since she was five, and has been playing prominent roles in musical productions for the past six years.

In "Lollipop" Ada May has a role that suits her perfectly, that of an orphan who determines to make her way in the world. There is comedy, romance and marvelous dancing as the story progresses, and the fine cast and chorus add to the joys of a delightful performance, and also enhance the charms of youthful Ada May. The company is one of 60 persons and embraces a thoroughly New York chorus of charming girls, also a troupe of twelve Tiller Girls from London, known as the "Dancing Lollipops." This same company has just completed an engagement at the Selwyn theatre, Chicago.

A Child Labor Warning

The New York World, which opposed the child labor amendment on the ground that it was better to leave such matters to the several states, gives this warning to those who have been rejoicing over the defeat of the amendment:

"You gentlemen of the textile mills and canneries and so forth had best remember that the non-ratification of this amendment does not mean its final defeat. If after a sincere effort is made to bring the states up to standard it becomes evident that the curse of child labor is ineradicable by state action, sentiment for this amendment will revive. The employers of child labor are today in the position of the liquor interests before the war. They have been granted a period of grace in which to reform themselves or at least let themselves be reformed by state action. If they are as stupid as the liquor interests they will bring down upon themselves and the country the whole force of the federal power."

It is a true statement of the situation. There is no question in the mind of the American people as to the importance of protecting children from exploitation, ignorance and physical impairment. The only question is as to the best method of affording protection. And if there is not rapid and general improvement in the backward states, either from legislation or from voluntary reform among employers of child labor, there will soon be an overpowering demand again for federal action.

The Iron Ring

Everyone, perhaps, has seen a tree circled with an iron wire and left to its fate. It means death to that tree as surely as an iron band around the waist would mean death to a growing child. The live wood widens and eventually covers the wire ring, and the tree may appear to be as vigorous and durable as its fellows. But the barrier is not really overcome. Inevitably, sooner or later, it cuts the tree in two, and the trunk falls.

A city may be like that. Chicago today is described as bound by an iron ring—its famous "Loop." That elevated line, built around the down-town business section when the city was comparatively small, is now squeezing the life out of it. The transportation facilities are inadequate for that seething center of commerce, industry and recreation, and business has difficulty in growing beyond it.

Wherefore Chicago is now facing the expenditure of more than $400,000,000 to escape from the iron band and continue growing.

How many American cities are likewise hampered, if not by a circular barrier, at least by artificial barriers of some kind on this side or that, hindering natural expansion and preventing the flow of modern traffic.

There was a time when the great problem of the American city was political. Municipal government is now greatly improved. The problem now is engineering, to meet the needs of business and traffic, lest growth be stifled.

Perfection Diet

Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters, author of a popular book on diet, has a recipe for a new race of Americans, healthy and energetic and neither fat nor lean. Here it is:

"Buy a quart of milk for each child and a pint for each adult. Divide the remainder of the food money into three parts, using one-third for fruits and vegetables, one-third for bread, cereal and fats and one-third for meat, eggs, sweets and miscellaneous."

Physical perfection may not be quite so simple a thing as this. Exercise, rest, sleep, fresh air and a few other factors play important roles. Yet Dr. Hunt's financial-dietetic formula would probably make a big improvement in most families.

Especially worth heeding is her warning against too much sweet and starchy food in the diet. She insists that 130 pounds of sugar per year, eaten by the average American, is far too much, and wants to put milk, fresh vegetables, fruits and whole-grain cereals ahead of candy and cake.

Three women dog-catchers in Brooklyn, N. Y., bagged 100 dogs the first day. Wonder how many mice they would catch in a rodent round-up?

The cost of living is still high in Germany, but it's something to have reduced the cost of reparation.

Say what you will about the futility of academic education, they do need some doctors of laws down in Washington.

THE FIGHT FOR MILEAGE TICKETS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The long drawn out fight between the commercial travelers of the United States and the railroads, known as the interchangeable mileage ticket case, is about to be closed. The interstate commerce commission has concluded its hearings, briefs have been filed and the oral arguments have been made, and within four or five weeks it is expected that the commission's decision will be handed down.

Then, unless the decision is adverse to the railroads and appeal is taken to the courts, as was done when the commission decided against the carriers about two years ago, the controversy will be at an end. Should the railroads secure another injunction in the lower courts and the case be carried to the supreme court of the United States, the fight may drag on interminably, for it is probable that congress will be asked to take action in the matter.

The question involved is whether the railroads shall be required to sell interchangeable mileage or scrip coupons at a rate less than the one-way full fare rate, the reduction asked being 20 per cent, or a $90 book for $72.

The reduction would not, of course, apply to commercial travelers alone, for anyone who desires to do so and who has the price can purchase the mileage books when they are on sale. However, the traveling men are the ones who will be most benefited by the reduction, and it is they who have made the fight for it through a central organization known as the National Council of Traveling Salesmen's association.

For almost 50 years the railroads of the country sold mileage books at reduced rates. They did this of their own volition, and not because it was forced upon them by any governmental regulation. As a rule, the discount from the regular fare represented by the cost of the mileage books was 33 1-3 per cent. That is, 1,000-mile books were sold for $20 when the regular fare was cents per mile and a one-way ticket for 1,000 miles would have cost $30.

WIPED OUT IN WAR TIME

This concession to what might be termed wholesale patrons of the railroads—those who bought their transportation in large quantities—was wiped out under government operation of the railroads during the Wrld war. The order of the railroad administration was issued in 1918, and the traveling men say they accepted it without a murmur as a war time necessity.

However, when in 1920 the interstate commerce commission increased passenger rates 20 per cent, or from 3 cents a mile to 3.6 cents, and that increase was made applicable to mileage books, the men who are said to spend on an average nine months out of every year on the road started an agitation to be reinstated in the advantage they once enjoyed.

They appealed to the railroad managements, but without avail, and then were told that the interstate commerce commission could do nothing for them. Then they turned to congress, and in 1922 the national legislative body passed an amendment to the transportation act of 1920 which directed the commission to take up the mileage ticket question.

On March 6, 1923, the commission issued an order, effective May 1 following, prescribing rules and regulations for the issuance by the railroads of the desired mileage tickets. However, the carriers would not take that as final and appealed to the courts, securing an injunction that restrained the commission from making its order effective.

Thereupon the government, the interestate commerce commission and the commercial travelers' organization took an appeal to the supreme court of the United States, which on January 24, 1924, affirmed the decision of the lower court. The supreme court took the position that the interstate commerce commission had not acted on its own independent judgment in reducing the rate for mileage tickets, but had construed the act of congress as mandatory upon it.

The commission then vacated its order and the traveling men began their fight anew in the proceedings that are now coming to a head.

POINTS OF DIFFERENCE

There are numerous points of difference between the travelers and the railroads. In the first place, although not of major importance, they are far from agreeing as to the number of commercial travelers there in the United States. The railroads cite the census reports, which say there are approximately 180,000 "traveling salesmen" in the country, whereas the travelers assert that their various organizations have a total membership of 700,000 and that undoubtedly there are many men and women who are in reality commercial travelers who do not belong, although they have some members who do travel as a business.

The railroads rather get on both sides of this question of numbers, for at one point they argue that there are not sufficient commercial travelers to entitle them to especial consideration in the matter of rates, and a little later they contend that there are so many of them that the proposed reduction would seriously impair the revenues of the carriers.

That question of revenue is the real bone of contention, and is considered from several angles. First, the carriers insist that they are not earning the 5.75 per cent net on valuation, which they are supposed to get, and that therefore there can be no reduction of any rates. In answer to this it is asserted that there is nothing in the law that guarantees or promises the railroads any specific rate of earnings, that the tentative valuation of the roads is too high anyhow, and that in any event the earnings of the roads would be increased through the issuance of mileage books because travel would be stimulated and encouraged.

The traveling men also contend that there is no evidence the railroads are not earning a fair return, andthat the commission may order mileage books at reduced rates irrespective of the carriers' rate of return on valuation. To hold otherwise, they say, would paralyze the commission's rate-making powers.

Another point stressed by the travelers is that by selling mileage books the railroads have the benefit of holding constantly a great sum of money for which they have not rendered service. For instance, the average traveling man uses a 2,500-mile book every two months, it is claimed, wherefore the roads have his $72 for a 60-day period before completing the service for which it pays. In the aggregate this would run into the millions.

Labor costs have materially decreased since transportation rates were raised in 1920 and the traveling men say that this should be reflected in reductions in passenger rates, especially to them since they are wholesale buyers. The individual commercial man, it is said, will on an average travel about 15,000 miles a year, as against 250 to 300 miles for the average of other patrons of the transportation industry.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—There is a rich man in Gotham whose love for Main street has endured since the day he packed the carpet bag and took the 8:15 for the metropolis. He made his fortune here and won success, but his heart is in his little home town.

In his home he has a replica of his favorite room back yonder. Here he spends his idle moments in an atmosphere of horse hair furniture, a basket of fruit chromo, a hanging coal oil lamp, onyx clock and rag carpet.

In the garage there is an old blacksmith's anvil. He likes to tap it now and then with a hammer so it will give forth that pleasant "ting-ting—ting-gg!" familiar to every resident of a village. He does not share these cherished views alone.

There are thousands of New Yorkers who remain on and on because their business interests hold them. They would rather have a two-line note of approval in their home town paper than a half column editorial of approval in the New York World.

The longer they live here the firmer the ties are cemented. Most of them day dream of the days they will return but they rarely do. New York inspires the continual greed for gold and they carry on until the end.

Suburban life out where the pavement ends only half satisfies. It is too much affected by city contact. The charm of Main street is not there. One misses the open forum at the village hotel, the back fence gossip and friendly intimacy.

Many suburban dwellers do not know their next door neighbors. The people who pass the front bay window are strangers. There is, of course, compensation in front yards, trees and porches. But the beloved intangible something of Main street is not there.

New York has single buildings which in value are the equivalent of entire cities. The Equitable, assessed for $30,000,000, is worth more than all the property in Amsterdam, N. Y., or Davenport, Ia. The Waldorf, valued at $12,225,000, is worth more than all the property in Columbia, S. C.; Joliet, Ill., or San Diego, Cal. Altman's, valued at $14,060,000, is worth more than all Decatur, Ill., or Sacramento, Cal. The total assessed valuation of property in New York is $13,125,457,745. It is more than the assessed valuation of the following states together: Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Arkansas, Nevada, Colorado, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Washington, Oregon and Minnesota. These 14 great commonwealths, comprising more than two-thirds of the entire United States west of the Mississippi, are—all of them—worth $13,050,000,000.

I believe the thing the transplanted Main streeter in the metropolis misses most is the clubby Pullman washroom intimacy of the small town. I don't believe small town people appreciate this simple neighborliness. Sticking the head into the barber shop door to see if Bill is there or to whistle out front for Tom to join you—well, it cannot be done here. If you stuck your head into a barber shop door suddenly you might be taken for a hold-up bandit, and a shrill whistle in front of any home might cause your arrest by the society for the prevention of unnecessary noises.

Carnegie hall is soon to be torn down and a modern office building will arise where one of the world's greatest musical centers has operated for 33 years. There is also a rumor that the Metropolitan opera house is soon to be demolished. A new site is now being considered.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By DANIEL O'CONNELL.

DUBLIN, Feb. 18.—Remarkable developments the Irish political situation have taken place during the past few months.

The two outstanding facts are these: First, it is no longer certain that the Republicans will stay outside the Dail and continue to carry on their guerrilla political tactics in the country. Secondly, the Free State or government party is no longer the power that it was, due to dissension within its ranks.

Many of the government party's former supporters have disagreed with President Cosgrave over matters of policy and have formed themselves into a party under the name of the national group, led by Joseph McGrath, a budding young statesman in the thirties. His party claims that President Cosgrave is not carrying out a sufficiently national policy and is ousting all those who assisted Michael Collins in the fight against the 'Black and Tans."

This new party looks as if it might be the genesis of a future big Irish party, for many of President Cosgrave's biggest supporters are inclined to agree with its ideals. It includes many of the ex-officers of the old Republican army who sided with Collins at the time of the treaty. General Liam Tobin is, perhaps, the biggest figure, next to McGrath, in the party, for he commands general support and respect because of his distinguished record in the rebellion and its results. Disappointed and disgruntled ex-officers of all political parties are flocking to the new party in hopes that it may be able to remedy their grievances.

Some Free State ministers, and Kevin O'Higgins, the minister for home affairs, in particular, describe the attitude taken by the new group as "incentive to mutiny," and say that the state and the welfare of the country should come before all things and personalities. He indicates that he will not hesitate to put down any attempt at mutiny or rebellion with all the means at his command.

The government has the support of General Mulcahy in its opposition to the National group. Mulcahy is very popular in the country; and should President Cosgrave resign for reasons of ill health, or for any other reason, it is considered likely that either Mulcahy or O'Higgins will be the next president.

Meantime Eamonn de Valera continues to decline to enter the Dail until the oath to which he objects is withdrawn. His party is gaining power as a result of the government party split, but it is considered that he still lacks strength to win a general election.

The Labor group is having its difficulties, too. Tom Johnson and Jim Larkin continue at loggerheads and are not likely to compose their differences yet. Larkin's influence over the workers is by no means as strong as it was, due to the unemployment problem, and he is continually in and about the courts over libel cases. He is now appearing before the courts in his examination for bankruptcy.

Therefore, though the government party is full of dissension, it seems certain that it will continue in power for some time yet, because the other parties have the same difficulties.

Irishmen should have enough elections this year to satisfy them.

Due to the action of the National group in resigning from the Dail, there will be a miniature general election a few weeks from now. Besides this, there is a probability of the government resigning in the summer and seeking a vote of confidence, while in December the entire Free State will be called upon to elect about 20 new senators to replace those automatically retiring from office. Distinct from these elections, there will be the usual municipal elections of local bodies, whose seven years' period of office is nearly ended.

Now that the political outlook has quieted following the formation of the National group, the country is threatened with a new party under the leadership of Lord Middleton, who, as St. John Brodrick, was British minister of war from 1900 to 1903.

Its chief plank is likely to be a constitutional opposition to the boundary between the Free State and Ulster. The party is likely to get considerable support in the cities and towns, and, in a coalition with the farmer party—the third strongest party in the Free State—it is considered extremely likely that it will loom largely in the near future in the political fortunes of the country.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

COLLINS DEAD—BETTER SO.

Floyd Collins' suffering is over. The rescue party found him dead, in the cave trap. He had been dead more than 24 hours when rescuers broke through the roof of his tomb.

Better dead than living, in any case, if only one or two days of the intense suffering were escaped.

This man's death illustrates the power, the weakness of human imagination. A hundred men risked their lives to save his. Doctors went to his rescue by flying machine, but could do nothing. The entire nation followed closely the tragic story.

Imagination showed the man lying in the low cave, his leg crushed by the 14,000 pound rock, existing day after day, for nearly two weeks, in horrible agony and discomfort.

OUR FEEBLE IMAGINATION

It was possible to imagine clearly that dreadful situation. And the nation sympathized. Any legislature would gladly have voted $100,000 to save Collins.

The same nation, through its legislators, refuses to pass the child labor amendment that would free tens of thousands of children from years of slow torment.

The feeble public imagination cannot see clearly those children in the mills.

A GREAT NATION'S DANGER

Brigadier General Mitchell, a brave man, staking his brigadier's star, as Cyrus H. K. Curtis has well said, on his fight for the national safety, deserves the thanks of this nation, and will have them.

If he has found no supporters high up in the army or navy, more shame to his superior officers that are controlled by battleship building interests, or have idled away their time in the public service, learning nothing.

Desk men that get extra flying pay without ever flying, fail to support General Mitchell, quite naturally. He flies and risks his neck in our inferior machines constantly. That puzzles them. But men that flew in the war are back of him, 2,000 of them. And whatever other 'heads" of the army and navy may do it is quite certain that President Coolidge, the real head of the army and navy, will see that Mitchell is properly treated.

Men of every branch of service, in the late war, saw with their own eyes the power of aircraft. Everyone of them should write to the president, if only 10 lines, urging an adequate air defense. President Coolidge will be glad to hear from any ex-soldier on any other citizen.

Every other citizen should read the testimony before the congressional committee yesterday by General Amos A. Fries, chief of the army chemical warfare service.

"There is no real answer to gas attacks, except airplanes with which to stop the enemy's onslaught, and gas him in turn."

General Fries further testified that gas warfare with the new chemicals would be 50 times as deadly as it was in the last war.

And, as for anti-aircraft guns, smoke curtains, and sprinkled smoke, combined with poison gases and rained down from the clouds would make anti-aircraft worthless artillery. The marksmen would be firing at a sky filled with smoke, while the flyers rained down their explosives and deadly gases.

EVERY MAN'S BUSINESS

The people's business is to realize what the next war will mean, and see that the nation is prepared for defense. Nice old maids in the navy quote Captain Mahan's book on sea power and his statement that command of the sea means command of the world.

Captain Mahan's, a great sea captain, knew as little about modern war, when he wrote his book, as Napoleon knew about transporting troops by rail, or using submarines to attack England.

Air power is now the only power. Who rules the air can rule the world. The great cities, the dwelling of every rules, president or king, is at his mercy.

This country needs fighting aircraft, ten thousand of them, the most efficient fleet in the world, to be used for the mails and other public use in peace, for fighting in war.

And, whether they "pay" or not, is of no importance. Safety is cheap at any price. One efficient grafting patriot, if a war came, could cost this nation more than all the flying machines necessary to save us from foreign aviators, and from home-bred corporation and individual grafters. If you believe that write to the president and tell him so. You'll help to pay the grafting bills and get your share of war from the sky, if war ever catches us unprepared.

You may say "too much aircraft talk in that column, I'll skip for a while."

All right, skip, if a war finds us lacking an adequate air force, you will remember this warning.

"This country is unprepared, defenseless as Germany was, when the French marched into the Ruhr. Any one of four nations, in a sudden attack, could destroy every great city in America and hold the nation to ransom.

The oceans no longer protect us. The Pacific coast is only 30 hours from Asia and the Atlantic coast 10 hours from Europe by airplane.

First would come the swift high power planes, throwing our cities and our unprepared government into confusion, with attacks on half a dozen cities at once, including Washington. Then would come the slower, heavy bombing machines, to force conviction upon us.

And, finally, would arrive in very safe machines, plenipotentiaries, with power to fix terms for us.

If they happened to be very polite gentlemen with exquisite manners and slanting eyes, courteously expressing their regret, and bringing us a new set of ready made immigration laws, we should not like it.

But that would not help us. Flying machines would help us and nothing else would.

Our army is at the mercy of gas and bombs from the sky. Our cities under airplane attack would be made horrible holes of suffocation and terror.

Our lumbering battleships would be a ghastly joke. And the government official that defends and urges reliance on the battleship in defiance of common sense, because his friends make millions in building battleships is a dangerous traitor and needs to have the truth told plainly.

God help those responsible from top to bottom, if an attack from the air ever finds this nation defenseless.

Q. Have Detroit and Pittsburgh any public schools where the "work-study-play" plan is followed? I. T. M.

A. Detroit has 85 schools on this plan. Pittsburgh has 40.

Q. Has football always been played by teams of eleven? H. J.

A. When the game of football was first played, 15 men were on a team. The number was reduced to 12 and then to 11, as it now stands.

Q. What is the story about the writing of the "Recessional" by Kipling? B. W. D.

A. Kipling wrote the poem called "Recessional" but regarding it as inadequate, threw away the manuscript. Mrs. Kipling found it in the waste basket from which she rescued it. The poem was sent immediately to the London Times and appeared in that paper on the date of the celebration of Queen Victoria's Great Jubilee.

Q. How have the four moons of Jupiter been responsible for the advancement of geography and navigation? I find this statement in a book. W. S. T.

A. The Naval Observatory says to determine his longitude a navigator or explorer gets the local time from astronomical observations and the Greenwich time from his chronometer. The difference between the two then gives the longitude from Greenwich. In the days before accurate chronometers were available the moons of Jupiter could be made use of as a substitute. Almanacs were published, as they still are, which gave in advance the time of all the eclipses of the four moons, which occur pretty frequently, and an explorer provided with such an almanac and a small telescope, by observing an eclipse, could get the Greenwich time at whatever other place in Europe the almanac was constructed for, though by no means so accurately as it would be got from a modern chronometer. The use of a telescope at sea being difficult, this method of determining longitude was not suited to mariners. The first almanac of the moons of Jupiter appeared at Bologna in 1688.

Q. Why is it stated that no one was ever bitten by a snake in Jerusalem? A. B. C.

A. The authorities we have consulted say that there are poisonous snakes in Jerusalem, and inasmuch as vipers are apt to attack people regardless of the vicinity where they are found, the statement made that persons in Palestine have never been bitten is not based on fact.

Q. When was the law passed reducing the flag to thirteen stripes? B. B.

A. The Continental Congress passed a resolution on June 14, 1777, that the flag have 13 stripes alternating red and white and a union consisting of 13 stars of white on a fold of blue. Vermont having been admitted to the Union in 1791, and Kentucky in 1792, Congress enacted on January 13, 1794, a law that the flag of the United States be 15 stripes, alternating red and white, and that the union be 15 stars. The number of states increased rapidly and for this reason in 1818, Congress enacted a law that the number of stripes be reduced to 13 to represent the 13 original states and that the number of stars be increased to 20, or one for each state in the Union.

Q. What was the remark that Dr. Lyman Abbott made about Jenny Lind's singing? A. O. S.

A. He said "It was impossible to doubt the Resurrection while she was singing 'I Know That My Redeemer Liveth.'"

Q. When did arithmetic originate? S. W. P.

A. Mathematics as a science made it first definite appearance among the Egyptians. There are evidences of its antiquity among the Chinese, Hindus and Babylonians, but the earliest written records of considerable mathetmatical progress are found in Egypt, and give an interesting view of the state of the science as early as the latter part of the third millennium before Christ.

During the last civil war in China ninety native banks in Canton were closed for more than three weeks.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of our dear Mother, Mrs. Clarinda Ellen Campbell Freshwater, who passed away February 18th, 1923.
Thou art gone but not forgotten,
Oh, how sad for us to part
And thou knowest not the anguish
That dwell within our hearts
We will strive to bear the burden
While we linger here alone
And our hearts will leap with rapture
When our God shall call us home.

Dancing Musical Hit, "Lollipop," at Ceramic on Mar. 3

Henry W. Savage will offer his dancing musical hit, "Lollipop," with Ada May and the original New York cast and production, at the Ceramic theatre Tuesday, March 3.

Its small star, Ada May, has recently celebrated her twenty-first birthday. December was the month on and after which Miss Ada May qualified as a voter. In "Lollipop" she is playing her first star role, and as Zelda Sears, author of the libretto, declared in a curtain speech on the opening night in New York, "Ada May is the life of the party." Stardom in musical comedy, especially under the conservative management of Henry W. Savage, is unusual at twenty-one, but Ada May carries her big responsibilities lightly and delightfully. If she weren't so young she might not play her part with such youthful joy and abandon. As to experience, the little yellow-haired "Lollipop" star has danced in public since she was five, and has been playing prominent roles in musical productions for the past six years.

In "Lollipop" Ada May has a role that suits her perfectly, that of an orphan who determines to make her way in the world. There is comedy, romance and marvelous dancing as the story progresses, and the fine cast and chorus add to the joys of a delightful performance, and also enhance the charms of youthful Ada May. The company is one of 60 persons and embraces a thoroughly New York chorus of charming girls, also a troupe of twelve Tiller Girls from London, known as the "Dancing Lollipops." This same company has just completed an engagement at the Selwyn theatre, Chicago.

MAY ESTABLISH TOURIST CAMP

Measure Introduced in Legislature Backed by Healthers.

The state health department, co-operating with the state road commission, is planning to create statewide interest in the bill that has been introduced in the state legislature to establish tourists' camps under supervision of the health department in various sections of the state.

Since West Virginia has been opened to tourists by means of good roads the state must have tourists camps, and the biggest question is that of sanitation, according to Chief State Sanitary Engineer Tisdale.

"The splendor of West Virginia' scenery is going to attract tourists from all parts of the union, and the high typhoid fever rate of the rural sections testifies to the number of springs and wells that are contaminated by human waste, and of the dangers of drinking water while traveling through the state," said Mr. Tisdale.

Numbers of impure water supplies were made pure last year, but the road building program is developing faster than organization against disease prevention, as West Virginia still stands third from the bottom of all states in the union in the amount expended for health sanitation. The opening of heretofore unpenetrated parts of the state adds a new burden to the already inadaquate organization is a statement made by the state health department.

New York, Ohio and other states having networks of good roads take yearly precaution to keep possible camp sites free from waste and to warn tourists of the dangers of polluted waters. Many states have special camp sites with posted rules and regulations for preserving sanitation. These states are also fortified by a staff of from 20 to 40 sanitary engineers and inspectors, and twice as many co operating district health officers, compared to three sanitary engineers and only six county health officers in West Virginia.

Dog Acts as Call Boy.

DeWolf Hopper, the comedian, maintains that he has one of the smartest dogs in the world. It is only a mongrel that he picked up in the streets, but "Mutt," as he is named, acts as a call boy in the theatre, barking and scratching at the door for an actor when it is his time to be on the stage. The dog learned his trick in three lessons, and now, after he has become acquainted with the play, does not have to be told when it is time to call an actor.

King of Gypsies, Violinist Rigo, of Romantic Past, Quits

NEW YORK, Feb.—Another royal crown is going begging today.

Who will be the next "King of the Gypsies?" The logical successor to "King" Nicholas John, of New London, Conn., who has just been buried as Youngers, is Rigo, the gypsy violinist. Through the haze of cigarette smoke and the aroma of stale wine of a little cafe on the Eastside, Rigo magnanimously disclaimed the honor.

"The 'King of the Gypsies' is not dead, for I am the king!" he declared and added, with emphasis, "But I don't want the job. There is no money in it, and there is no palace to live in."

Rigo once had a palace—as grand as any king's. It was on the fabled Nile, in romantic Egypt. He occupied it with Princess de Chimay, who was Clara Ward, of Detroit, daughter of a Michigan millionaire. Rigo was playing at a cafe in Montmartre, Paris, when he met her.

Flies With Rigo.

The princess had a husband and two children, but she surrendered everything for the dapper gypsy head of the Boulevards who had become known as one of the world's most famous lovers.

The younger generation will not remember Rigo. His name will come back as a pleasant memory to many women to whom alimony is no longer a novelty. His name is not such a pleasant memory to numerous men now well along into their second marriage.

Eighteen years ago, in Budapest, Hungary, 20,000 gypsies surrounded the hotel where Rigo was living with Princess de Chimay and formally offered him the crown—infact, they insisted that he accept it.

"I am poor today," Rigo said. I would like to wander with the gypsies, but I am not young; I am fifty-six, I said fifty-six, not sixty-five.

Romance Not Dead.

"Romance? No, it is not dead within me. I am an older man than I used to be. Time is no friend of man. I am fat. I have not so much hair. There is not so much color in my face. Eight years I have played here. I used to play at the Techau Tavern, San Francisco, and many other wonderful places. Once I got $2,000 a week in vaudeville. Beautiful women courted me. Ha! ha! They don't now. I don't get much money here, but it is a living. I am happily married. A beautiful girl, twenty-three years younger than I am; daughter of a rich Baltimore man. I am happy. I get home at 4, 5, 6, o'clock in the morning. My wife she brings breakfast to me in bed. She my wife. She is beautiful. The Princess de Chimay was a beautiful woman, too. I have a picture of her face tattooed on my arm. Twelve years ago I spent my bridal night. The very same bed was in the room. I wrote our names on it.

"No I don't want to be King of the Gypsies. I just want to be happy and think about the past."

Japan a Fish Eating Country.

Japan eats more fish per capita than any other large nation, and the Japanese are singularly free from goiter troubles. This, it is maintained, is due to the iodine value of salt watter fish foods. Physicians now are recommending that growing young girls eat fish at least three times a week where they have a tendency to thyroid trouble, which is indicative of goiter.

Berlin Builds Many New Homes; City is Now Overpopulated

BERLIN, Feb.—With the aid of the revenues accruing from the rent tax of the municipal authorities of Berlin have built 2,000 apartments, partly in semi detached houses, just outside Steglitz, a suburb in the southwest of Berlin.

Further, 3,000 flats are to follow shortly, thus providing accommodation for about 20,000 people. In the western outskirts of this city the building of tenement houses is ceasing and semi-detached houses with tiny gardens are being erected instead.

Since the war the housing conditions in Berlin have become alarming. Berlin, where hundreds of flats were empty before the war, has become thoroughly overpopulated.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy
Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about 8/. Easily and quickly prepared.
If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.
Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.
This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.
A dev's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.
Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.
To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Q. Have Detroit and Pittsburgh any public schools where the "work-study-play" plan is followed? I T. M.

A. Detroit has 85 schools on this plan. Pittsburgh has 40.

Q. Has football always been played by teams of eleven? H. J.

A. When the game of football was first played, 15 men were on a team. The number was reduced to 12 and then to 11, as it now stands.

Q. What is the story about the writing of the "Recessional" by Kipling? B. W. D.

A. Kipling wrote the poem called "Recessional" but regarding it as inadequate, threw away the manuscript. Mrs. Kipling found it in the waste basket from which she rescued it. The poem was sent immediately to the London Times and appeared in that paper on the date of the celebration of Queen Victoria's Great Jubilee.

Q. How have the four moons of Jupiter been responsible for the advancement of geography and navigation? I find this statement in a book. W. S. T.

A. The Naval Observatory says to determine his longitude a navigator or explorer gets the local time from astronomical observations and the Greenwich time from his chronometer. The difference between the two then gives the longitude from Greenwich. In the days before accurate chronometers were available the moons of Jupiter could be made use of as a substitute. Almanacs were published, as they still are, which gave in advance the time of all the eclipses of the four moons, which occur pretty frequently, and an explorer provided with such an almanac and a small telescope, by observing an eclipse, could get the Greenwich time at whatever other place in Europe the almanac was constructed for, though by no means so accurately as it would be got from a modern chronometer. The use of a telescope at sea being difficult, this method of determining longitude was not suited to mariners. The first almanac of the moons of Jupiter appeared at Bologna in 1688.

Q. Why is it stated that no one was ever bitten by a snake in Jerusalem? A. B. C.

A. The authorities we have consulted say that there are poisonous snakes in Jerusalem, and inasmuch as vipers are apt to attack people regardless of the vicinity where they are found, the statement made that persons in Palestine have never been bitten is not based on fact.

Q. When was the law passed reducing the flag to thirteen stripes? B. B.

A. The Continental Congress passed a resolution on June 14, 1777, that the flag have 13 stripes alternating red and white and a union consisting of 13 stars of white on a fold of blue. Vermont having been admitted to the Union in 1791, and Kentucky in 1792, Congress enacted on January 13, 1794, a law that the flag of the United States be 15 stripes, alternating red and white, and that the union be 15 stars. The number of states increased rapidly and for this reason in 1818, Congress enacted a law that the number of stripes be reduced to 13 to represent the 13 original states and that the number of stars be increased to 20, or one for each state in the Union.

Q. What was the remark that Dr. Lyman Abbott made about Jenny Lind's singing? A. O. S.

A. He said "It was impossible to doubt the Resurrection while she was singing 'I Know That My Redeemer Liveth.'"

Q. When did arithmetic originate? S. W. P.

A. Mathematics as a science made it first definite appearance among the Egyptians. There are evidences of its antiquity among the Chinese, Hindus and Babylonians, but the earliest written records of considerable mathetmatical progress are found in Egypt, and give an interesting view of the state of the science as early as the latter part of the third millennium before Christ.

During the last civil war in China ninety native banks in Canton were closed for more than three weeks.

MAY ESTABLISH TOURIST CAMP

Measure Introduced in Legislature Backed by Healthers.

The state health department, co-operating with the state road commission, is planning to create statewide interest in the bill that has been introduced in the state legislature to establish tourists' camps under supervision of the health department in various sections of the state.

Since West Virginia has been opened to tourists by means of good roads the state must have tourists camps, and the biggest question is that of sanitation, according to Chief State Sanitary Engineer Tisdale.

"The splendor of West Virginia' scenery is going to attract tourists from all parts of the union, and the high typhoid fever rate of the rural sections testifies to the number of springs and wells that are contaminated by human waste, and of the dangers of drinking water while traveling through the state," said Mr. Tisdale.

Numbers of impure water supplies were made pure last year, but the road building program is developing faster than organization against disease prevention, as West Virginia still stands third from the bottom of all states in the union in the amount expended for health sanitation. The opening of heretofore unpenetrated parts of the state adds a new burden to the already inadaquate organization is a statement made by the state health department.

New York, Ohio and other states having networks of good roads take yearly precaution to keep possible camp sites free from waste and to warn tourists of the dangers of polluted waters. Many states have special camp sites with posted rules and regulations for preserving sanitation. These states are also fortified by a staff of from 20 to 40 sanitary engineers and inspectors, and twice as many co-operating district health officers, compared to three sanitary engineers and only six county health officers in West Virginia.

STATE BUSINESS MEN TO ASSEMBLE

Gottleib, of New York city, economist of the National Industrial Board; Judge R. A. Hugins of Kansas, member of the League of Industrial Rights, and Captain Ivan O'Hay, world noted soldier, writer and humorist.

Dog Acts as Call Boy.

DeWolf Hopper, the comedian, maintains that he has one of the smartest dogs in the world. It is only a mongrel that he picked up in the streets, but "Mutt," as he is named, acts as a call boy in the theatre, barking and scratching at the door for an actor when it is his time to be on the stage. The dog learned his trick in three lessons, and now, after he has become acquainted with the play, does not have to be told when it is time to call an actor.

King of Gypsies, Violinist Rigo, of Romantic Past, Quits

NEW YORK, Feb.—Another royal crown is going begging today.

Who will be the next "King of the Gypsies?" The logical successor to "King" Nicholas Jean, of New London, Conn., who has just been buried at Yonkers, is Rigo, the gypsy violinist, although the haze of cigarette smoke and the aroma of stale wine of a little cafe on the Eastside, Rigo magnanimously disclaimed the honor.

"The 'King of the Gypsies' is not dead, for I am the king!" he declared and added, with emphasis, "But I don't want the job. There is no money in it, and there is no palace to live in."

Rigo once had a palace—as grand as any king's. It was on the fabled Nile, in romantic Egypt. He occupied it with Princess de Chimay, who was Clara Ward, of Detroit, daughter of a Michigan millionaire. Rigo was playing at a cafe in Montmartre, Paris, when he met her.

Flies With Rigo.

The princess had a husband and two children, but she surrendered everything for the dapper gypsy head of the Boulevards, who had become known as one of the world's most famous lovers.

The younger generation will not remember Rigo. His name will come back as a pleasant memory to many women to whom alimony is no longer a novelty. His name is not such a pleasant memory to numerous men now well along into their second marriage.

Eighteen years ago, in Budapest, Hungary, 20,000 gypsies surrounded the hotel where Rigo was living with Princess de Chimay and formally offered him the crown—infact, they insisted that he accept it.

"I am poor today," Rigo said. I would like to wander with the gypsies, but I am not young; I am fifty-six. I said fifty-six, not sixty-five.

Romance Not Dead.

"Romance? No, it is not dead within me. I am an older man than I used to be. Time is no friend of man. I am fat. I have not so much hair. There is not so much color in my face. Eight years I have played here. I used to play at the Techau Tavern, San Francisco, and many other wonderful places. Once I got $2,000 a week in vaudeville. Beautiful women courted me. Ha! ha! They don't now. I don't get much money here. But it is a living. I am happily married. A beautiful girl, twenty-three years younger than I am; daughter of a rich Baltimore man. I am happy. I get home at 4, 5, 6, o'clock in the morning. My wife she brings breakfast to me in bed. She my wife. She is beautiful. The Princess de Chimay was a beautiful woman, too. I have a picture of her face tattooed on my arm. Twelve years ago I spent my bridal night. The very same bed was in the room. I wrote our names on it.

"No I don't want to be King of the Gypsies. I just want to be happy and think about the past."

Japan a Fish Eating Country.

Japan eats more fish per capita than any other large nation, and the Japanese are singularly free from goiter troubles. This, it is maintained, is due to the iodine value of salt watter fish foods. Physicians now are recommending that growing young girls eat fish at least three times a week where they have a tendency to thyroid trouble, which is indicative of goiter.

Berlin Builds Many New Homes; City is Now Overpopulated

BERLIN, Feb.—With the aid of the revenues accruing from the rent tax of the municipal authorities of Berlin have built 2,000 apartments, partly in semi detached houses, just outside Steglitz, a suburb in the southwest of Berlin.

Further, 3,000 flats are to follow shortly, thus providing accommodation for about 20,000 people. In the western outskirts of this city the building of tenement houses is ceasing and semi-detached houses with tiny gardens are being erected instead.

Since the war the housing conditions in Berlin have become alarming. Berlin, where hundreds of flats were empty before the war, has become thoroughly overpopulated.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Answers to Questions

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Review-Tribune Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C. This offer applies strictly to information. The Bureau can not give advice on legal, medical and financial matters. It does not attempt to settle domestic troubles, nor undertake exhaustive research on any subject. Write your question plainly and briefly. Give full name and address and enclose two cents in stamps for return postage. All replies are sent direct to the inquirer.)

Q. Have Detroit and Pittsburgh any public schools where the "work-study-play" plan is followed? I. T. M.

A. Detroit has 85 schools on this plan. Pittsburgh has 40.

Q. Has football always been played by teams of eleven? H. J.

A. When the game of football was first played, 15 men were on a team. The number was reduced to 12 and then to 11, as it now stands.

Q. What is the story about the writing of the "Recessional" by Kipling? B. W. D.

A. Kipling wrote the poem called "Recessional" but regarding it as inadequate, threw away the manuscript. Mrs. Kipling found it in the waste basket from which she rescued it. The poem was sent immediately to the London Times and appeared in that paper on the date of the celebration of Queen Victoria's Great Jubilee.

Q. How have the four moons of Jupiter been responsible for the advancement of geography and navigation? I find this statement in a book. W. S. T.

A. The Naval Observatory says to determine his longitude a navigator or explorer gets the local time from astronomical observations and the Greenwich time from his chronometer. The difference between the two then gives the longitude from Greenwich. In the days before accurate chronometers were available the moons of Jupiter could be made use of as a substitute. Almanacs were published, as they still are, which gave in advance the time of all the eclipses of the four moons, which occur pretty frequently, and an explorer provided with such an almanac and a small telescope, by observing an eclipse, could get the Greenwich time at whatever other place in Europe the almanac was constructed for, though by no means so accurately as it would be got from a modern chronometer. The use of a telescope at sea being difficult, this method of determining longitude was not suited to mariners. The first almanac of the moons of Jupiter appeared at Bologna in 1688.

Q. Why is it stated that no one was ever bitten by a snake in Jerusalem? A. B. C.

A. The authorities we have consulted say that there are poisonous snakes in Jerusalem, and inasmuch as vipers are apt to attack people regardless of the vicinity where they are found, the statement made that persons in Palestine have never been bitten is not based on fact.

Q. When was the law passed reducing the flag to thirteen stripes? B. B.

A. The Continental Congress passed a resolution on June 14, 1777, that the flag have 13 stripes alternating red and white and a union consisting of 13 stars of white on a field of blue. Vermont having been admitted to the Union in 1791, and Kentucky in 1792, Congress enacted on January 13, 1794, a law that the flag of the United States be 15 stripes, alternating red and white, and that the union be 15 stars. The number of states increased rapidly and for this reason in 1818, Congress enacted a law that the number of stripes be reduced to 13 to represent the 13 original states and that the number of stars be increased to 20, or one for each state in the Union.

Q. What was the remark that Dr. Lyman Abbott made about Jenny Lind's singing? A. O. S.

A. He said "It was impossible to doubt the Resurrection while she was singing 'I Know That My Redeemer Liveth.'"

Q. When did arithmetic originate? S. W. P.

A. Mathematics as a science made it first definite appearance among the Egyptians. There are evidences of its antiquity among the Chinese, Hindus and Babylonians, but the earliest written records of considerable mathetmatical progress are found in Egypt, and give an interesting view of the state of the science as early as the latter part of the third millennium before Christ.

During the last civil war in China ninety native banks in Canton were closed for more than three weeks.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of our dear Mother, Mrs. Clarinda Ellen Campbell Freshwater, who passed away February 18th, 1923.
Thou art gone but not forgotten,
Oh, how sad for us to part
And thou knowest not the anguish
That dwell within our hearts
We will strive to bear the burden
While we linger here alone
And our hearts will leap with rapture
When our God shall call us home.

BURBON TAKES UP HIS DUTIES

New Deputy Sheriff to Launch Work Weighing Auto Trucks.

Herman Burbon of Salem, who was appointed deputy sheriff Monday by Sheriff George Wright will devote considerable time during the next few weeks in the weighing of trucks.

For a first offense, the law has levied a fine ranging from $25 to $100 and for a second offense the fine shall be not less than $100.

Two years ago the county commissioners purchased a complete truck weighing outfit, but it has not been in general use.

Mr. Burton who was appointed constable for Perry township by the Perry township trustees last year will resign immediately, and it has not been indicated by the trustees whether or not a successor will be appointed.

STATE TO OPEN GRADING BIDS

Bids for the grading and surfacing of the Harrisburg-Wellsville road will be opened by the State Highway department at Columbus at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, according to advices just received by County Surveyor Lloyd C. Kirk.

This road is to be graded to a width of 34.5 feet. The new waterbound macadam surface is to be 18 feet wide. The job will cost $109,033.97 for grading and surfacing, according to the estimates now on file. The improvement will extend for 25,546 feet or 4.859 miles. It is to be completed not later than November 1 next.

PLAN TO DISCUSS ROAD PROGRAMS

Trustees of Butler and Knox townships will meet with the county commissioners next Tuesday for the purpose of going over the road improvement in those townships for this year. In Butler township, it is proposed to improve that section of the Salem-Hanover road while Hanover township proposes to grade the section of this road in its township this year.

West township trustees are interested in improving several roads in that township, which would give an extension of highways leading to Salem, and also to the south from the Cox highway.

A WOMAN'S WORK WHILE NEVER DONE MADE VERY EASY

Good Health, Good Digestion, Good Sleep, Convert Day's Tasks Into Pleasant Ones —Ka-di-ok Points the Way.

MRS. JAMES GEPHARDT,
Charleston, W. Va.

"Man's work ends with the setting sun;
But woman's work is never done."

There is a great truth, theoretically, in these two lines, but a way has been discovered whereby the arduous tasks and daily routine of the housewife, borne down by aches and ills, can be made most pleasant.

Mrs. James Gephardt, residing at Flat 211, Goshorn St., Charleston, W. Va., is the discoverer of this way, and she tells of it in a statement to the Ka-di-ok representative. "I found that Ka-di-ok is a wonder as a tonic to build up one's nerves and to give one an excellent, healthy appetite so that you may eat what you like with no fear of indigestion," she said. "It gives one refreshing sleep and one gets up in the morning ready for a woman's work and a desire to do the tasks that come in a woman's way. I say Ka-di-ok is a wonder, and I for one, am boosting Ka-di-ok for all I am worth. It keeps one in perfect health and makes me feel good all the time."

So it is with woman's tasks. Some are naturally nervous and fretful, and to those, Ka-di-ok should appeal, as it did in the above case. Not only for nervousness, Ka-di-ok is highly recommended for kidney and liver troubles, rheumatism, headaches, bad blood, auto-intoxication, and other ills arising from a disordered stomach and impoverished blood.

Ka-di-ok is sold and recommended in East Liverpool by Mathews' Cut Rate Medicine Store, 129 W. Sixth Street.

Made Party Defendant.

On its own motion, the Valley Motor Transit Co., was made a party defendant in the case of Byrne Molleban against the Steubenville, East Liverpool and Beaver Valley Traction Co., which was a claim for $300 damages as a result of an automobile wreck, and appealed by the traction interests from a justice of the peace court in East Liverpool to common pleas court.

Suit Instituted

Claiming that there is a balance of $276.85 due on a note for $1,481.85 Eli Bricker and Fred Bricker, doing business as Eli Bricker & Son have filed a petition in common pleas court against Fred Hippley and Lina Hippley, residing on R. MAY ESTABLISH TOURIST CAMP

Measure Introduced in Legislature Backed by Healthers.

The state health department, co-operating with the state road commission, is planning to create statewide interest in the bill that has been introduced in the state legislature to establish tourists' camps under supervision of the health department in various sections of the state.

Since West Virginia has been opened to tourists by means of good roads the state must have tourists camps, and the biggest question is that of sanitation, according to Chief State Sanitary Engineer Tisdale.

"The splendor of West Virginia' scenery is going to attract tourists from all parts of the union, and the high typhoid fever rate of the rural sections testifies to the number of springs and wells that are contaminated by human waste, and of the dangers of drinking water while traveling through the state," said Mr. Tisdale.

Numbers of impure water supplies were made pure last year, but the road building program is developing faster than organization against disease prevention, as West Virginia still stands third from the bottom of all states in the union in the amount expended for health sanitation. The opening of heretofore unpenetrated parts of the state adds a new burden to the already inadaquate organization is a statement made by the state health department.

New York, Ohio and other states having networks of good roads take yearly precaution to keep possible camp sites free from waste and to warn tourists of the dangers of polluted waters. Many states have special camp sites with posted rules and regulations for preserving sanitation. These states are also fortified by a staff of from 20 to 40 sanitary engineers and inspectors, and twice as many co-operating district health officers, compared to three sanitary engineers and only six county health officers in West Virginia.

Dog Acts as Call Boy.

DeWolf Hopper, the comedian, maintains that he has one of the smartest dogs in the world. It is only a mongrel that he picked up in the streets, but "Mutt," as he is named, acts as a call boy in the theatre, barking and scratching at the door for an actor when it is his time to be on the stage. The dog learned his trick in three lessons, and now, after he has become acquainted with the play, does not have to be told when it is time to call an actor.

King of Gypsies, Violinist Rigo, of Romantic Past, Quits

Man Who Eloped With Princess Chimay Now Works Hard in Tiny New York Cafe.

NEW YORK, Feb.—Another royal crown is going begging today.

Who will be the next "King of the Gypsies?" The logical successor to "King" Nicholas Joun, of New London, Conn., who has just been buried at Yonkers, is Rigo, the gypsy violinist, through the haze of cigarette smoke and the aroma of stale wine of a little cafe on the Eastside, Rigo magnaminously disclaimed the honor.

"The 'King of the Gypsies' is not dead, for I am the king!" he declared and added, with emphasis, "But I don't want the job. There is no money in it, and there is no palace to live in."

Rigo once had a palace—as grand as any king's. It was on the fabled Nile, in romantic Egypt. He occupied it with Princess de Chimay, who was Clara Ward, of Detroit, daughter of a Michigan millionaire. Rigo was playing at a cafe in Montmartre, Paris, when he met her.

Flies With Rigo.

The princess had a husband and two children, but she surrendered everything for the dapper gypsy head of the Boulevards, who had become known as one of the world's most famous lovers.

The younger generation will not remember Rigo. His name will come back as a pleasant memory to many women to whom alimony is no longer a novelty. His name is not such a pleasant memory to numerous men now well along into their second marriage.

Eighteen years ago, in Budapest, Hungary, 20,000 gypsies surrounded the hotel where Rigo was living with Princess de Chimay and formally offered him the crown—infact, they insisted that he accept it.

"I am poor today," Rigo said. I would like to wander with the gypsies, but I am not young; I am fifty-six. I said fifty-six, not sixty-five.

Romance Not Dead.

"Romance? No, it is not dead within me. I am an older man than I used to be. Time is no friend of man. I am fat. I have not so much hair. There is not so much color in my face. Eight years I have played here. I used to play at the Techau Tavern, San Francisco, and many other wonderful places. Once I got $2,000 a week in vaudeville. Beautiful women courted me. Ha! ha! They don't now. I don't get much money here. But it is a living. I am happily married. A beautiful girl, twenty-three years younger than I am; daughter of a rich Baltimore man. I am happy. I get home at 4, 5, 6, o'clock in the morning. My wife she brings breakfast to me in bed. She my wife. She is beautiful. The Princess de Chimay was a beautiful woman, too. I have a picture of her face tattooed on my arm. Twelve years ago I spent my bridal night. The very same bed was in the room. I wrote our names on it.

"No I don't want to be King of the Gypsies. I just want to be happy and think about the past."

Japan a Fish Eating Country.

Japan eats more fish per capita than any other large nation, and the Japanese are singularly free from goiter troubles. This, it is maintained, is due to the iodine value of salt watter fish foods. Physicians now are recommending that growing young girls eat fish at least three times a week where they have a tendency to thyroid trouble, which is indicative of goiter.

Berlin Builds Many New Homes; City is Now Overpopulated

BERLIN, Feb.—With the aid of the revenues accruing from the rent tax of the municipal authorities of Berlin have built 2,000 apartments, partly in semi-detached houses, just outside Steglitz, a suburb in the southwest of Berlin.

Further, 3,000 flats are to follow shortly, thus providing accommodation for about 20,000 people. In the western outskirts of this city the building of tenement houses is ceasing and semi-detached houses with tiny gardens are being erected instead.

Since the war the housing conditions in Berlin have become alarming. Berlin, where hundreds of flats were empty before the war, has become thoroughly overpopulated.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Century of Love Keeps Aged Woman Unmarried to End

Wealthy Southern Father Refused to Permit Marriage 100 Years Ago, and She Never Wed.

OKMULGEE, Okla., Feb. — Cherishing for more than a century a love of her girlhood, Miss Nancy Boyd of Okmulgee, has lived 119 years without marrying. Her life has been a round of disappointments; but as she sits in the deepening twilight of life she is happy in the thought that soon she and her lover will be reunited.

The daughter of a rich Tennessee plantation owner, her love for Jem Turner, the son of a poor man, was frowned upon by her father, who visioned for her a marriage into the ranks of the old southern aristocracy. Turner's persuasion that she not defy her father caused Miss Boyd to put aside hopes of an immediate marriage.

"I didn't stop loving him, though," she says. "Jem and I loved each other more than ever and began planning how we could get married later, when father might soften. You see, I refused to marry any one else.

Could Not Forget.

"Father thought I had forgotten Jem, and in the weeks that followed he had entertainment after entertainment in my honor, and young men for miles around attended them. I received many proposals of marriage, but I refused them, to the great anger of my father.

"Every week-end our big plantation house would be thronged with guests, and I was sure to get at least one proposal at each party, but no one could take the place of Jem.

"Finally my father asked me why I continually refused to marry. I told him. He vowed then that I should not marry Jem during his life. But we continued to hope."

This was in 1824. Years passed. Nancy grew to womanhood, Jem to manhood. Then came the year that began the southland's greatest tragedy—1861.

Still Hoped.

But Nancy and Jem still hoped. She was considered an old woman and he an old man. One evening as the war shadows were deepending, they stood on a small bridge near the Boyd plantation, discussing the seemingly inevitable conflict. Suddenly a brae-legged negro boy dashed past on a mule, shouting at them as he went:

"De wah is stahted! Dey's killin' ev'rybody!"

"Nancy," said Jem, "I'm going."

"I felt then—instinct, maybe," Miss Boyd says—"that I would never see Jem again. I told him so, but he laughed.

"'That is not a very cheerful thing to say,' he told me. But it was a true prophecy. I never saw him again. Throughout that bitter war I never heard from him. Father gave all we had to the Southern army, and in the last days of the war he was killed by a negro he once owned.

Killed at Front.

"The war ended, and I learned Jem was killed three days after he left Nashville in 1861. I was the last of our family, and as all our property was gone there was nothing for me to do but go to an aunt that had a small farm in Arkansas."

"The war ended, and I learned Jem was killed three days after he left Nashville in 1861. I was the last of our family, and as all our property was gone there was nothing for me to do but go to an aunt that had a small farm in Arkansas."

There she remained, working hard for a living from 1865 to 1918. She was off the farm but once.

Miss Boyd rode on a train for the first time in 1918, when she came to Okmulgee, and she has never ridden in an automobile.

"I'd rather like to ride in one of those automobiles some time, when I feel better," she says. "I don't like them as well as I did our fine coaches, drawn by beautiful horses. Ours were among the best in the South," she adds with pride.

"But then there are many things of this day and time that I don't care for. Everything is so cheap and artificial. Even love is not prompted by the sentiments and emotions, as it was in my day. You will think me old fashioned. I am dreadfully so."

Miss Boyd, apparently, is in good health, but her eyesight is rapidly failing.

She has a collection of Civil War newspapers, with brief stories of many important battles. She obtained all papers available searching for news of her lover.

Sirens Used To Scare Birds.

Sirens used for marine signalling, will be used in the orchards at Sydney, New South Wales, to scare away birds from the orchards and vineyards in the irrigated districts. The sirens would be operated electrically from the farm house whenever a flock appeared. The irrigation Commission of the government has set aside a sum of money to carry on this unique experiment.

Zane Grey's New Film, "Border Legion," Booked at Ceramic

The "Old West" has come back! Once again in the far North country where Zane Grey wrote the novel "The Border Legion," cowboys in picturesque garb ride through the great stretches where wire fences have not come.

Once again, the tinkle of spurs and the creak of saddle leather break the lazy hush of midday.

Once again, in a cloud of dust that darkens the sun, great herds of cattle move through the sagebrush wilderness with the steady rumble of a thousand hoofs.

Once again the rolling hills hear the shrill "coo-ee" of the cowboys, riding herd with one knee thrown nonchalantly over the saddle horn.

The old west was reborn for Paramount's picturiatiozn of "The Border Legion," in locations personally selected by Zane Grey. Far in the North country, a selected cast of Paramount players headed by Antonio Moreno, Helene Chadwick, Charles Ogle, Rockcliffe Fellows and Gibson Gowland, brought to life the characters that lived long ago.

Approximately 100 minor players, chiefly cowboys, take part in the spectacluar production, directed by William Howard.

"The Border Legion," which opens at the Ceramic Theatre on Thursday was filmed true to life.

The story, adapted to the screen by George Hull, has to do with the activities of a band of ruthless outlaws who preyed upon settlers and gold towns in the early days of Idaho.

A replica of one of the great cattle drives of the early days is a striking sight.

Here is, perhaps one of the greatest of all Zane Grey tales, produced as is fitting such a story, with a cast that approaches perfection. Moreno and Miss Chadwick have featured roles, and others, besides those already mentioned, include Charles Ogle, James Corey, Edward Gribbon and Luke Cosgrave.

He who fears all germs does not know that most of them are our very good friends, without which we could not exist.

BURBON TAKES UP HIS DUTIES

New Deputy Sheriff to Launch Work Weighing Auto Trucks.

Herman Burbon of Salem, who was appointed deputy sheriff Monday by Sheriff George Wright will devote considerable time during the next few weeks in the weighing of trucks.

For a first offense, the law has levied a fine ranging from $25 to $100 and for a second offense the fine shall be not less than $100.

Two years ago the county commissioners purchased a complete truck weighing outfit, but it has not been in general use.

Mr. Burton who was appointed constable for Perry township by the Perry township trustees last year will resign immediately, and it has not been indicated by the trustees whether or not a successor will be appointed.

STATE TO OPEN GRADING BIDS

Bids for the grading and surfacing of the Harrisburg-Wellsville road will be opened by the State Highway department at Columbus at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, according to advices just received by County Surveyor Lloyd C. Kink.

This road is to be graded to a width of 34.5 feet. The new waterbound macadam surface is to be 18 feet wide. The job will cost $109,033.97 for grading and surfacing, according to the estimates now on file. The improvement will extend for 25,546 feet or 4,839 miles. It is to be completed not later than November 1 next.

PLAN TO DISCUSS ROAD PROGRAMS

Trustees of Butler and Knox townships will meet with the county commissioners next Tuesday for the purpose of going over the road improvement in those townships for this year. In Butler township, it is proposed to improve that section of the Salem-Hanover road while Hanover township proposes to grade the section of this road in its township this year.

West township trustees are interested in improving several roads in that township, which would give an extension of highways leading to Salem, and also to the south from the Cox highway.

A WOMAN'S WORK WHILE NEVER DONE MADE VERY EASY

Good Health, Good Digestion, Good Sleep, Convert Day's Tasks Into Pleasant Ones —Ka-di-ok Points the Way.

MRS. JAMES GEPHARDT, Charleston, W. Va.

"Man's work ends with the setting sun;
But woman's work is never done."

There is a great truth, theoretically, in these two lines, but a way has been discovered whereby the arduous tasks and daily routine of the housewife, borne down by aches and ills, can be made most pleasant.

Mrs. James Gephardt, residing at Flat 211, Goshorn St., Charleston, W. Va., is the discoverer of this way, and she tells of it in a statement to the Ka-di-ok representative. "I found that Ka-di-ok is a wonder as a tonic to build up one's nerves and to give one an excellent, healthy appetite so that you may eat what you like with no fear of indigestion," she said. "It gives one refreshing sleep and one gets up in the morning ready for a woman's work and a desire to do the tasks that come in a woman's way. I say Ka-di-ok is a wonder, and I for one, am boosting Ka-di-ok for all I am worth. It keeps one in perfect health and makes me feel good all the time."

So it is with woman's tasks. Some are naturally nervous and fretful, and to those, Ka-di-ok should appeal, as it did in the above case. Not only for nervousness, Ka-di-ok is highly recommended for kidney and liver troubles, rheumatism, headaches, bad blood, auto-intoxication, and other ills arising from a disordered stomach and impoverished blood.

Ka-di-ok is sold and recommended in East Liverpool by Mathews' Cut Rate Medicine Store, 129 W. Sixth Street.

Made Party Defendant.

On its own motion, the Valley Motor Transit Co., was made a party defendant in the case of Byrne Molleban against the Steubenville, East Liverpool and Beaver Valley Traction Co., which was a claim for $300 damages as a result of an automobile wreck, and appealed by the traction interests from a justice of the peace court in East Liverpool to common pleas court.

Suit Instituted

Claiming that there is a balance of $276.85 due on a note for $1,481.85 Eli Bricker and Fred Bricker, doing business as Eli Bricker & Son have filed a petition in common pleas court against Fred Hippley and Lina Hippley, residing on R. F. D. No. 6 Salem. The petition shows that $1,205 has been paid the plaintiffs by the defendants.

May Improve Road

The improvement of the Benton road north of Salem is proposed by the County Commissioners and this work will no doubt be ordered at a very early date.

At a meeting of the Commissioners this week the board discussed this project, and it may follow that detailed plans will be made a matter of record next Monday.

Karesia had returned to apparent calm. Some of the things Rossiter had said were like divination, only strangely perverted. There was only one being on earth who could shake her belief in John Dascome and that was John Dascome himself, and she had his declaration of innocence. What drove a chill through Karesia was the realization that there were others who would think as Rossiter did; her discovery had not cleared Dascome of guilt; it had plunged him into further trouble. There rose before her the grim face of the law; was it possible that he would be forced into court on another charge, made to endure another term of agony? He knew the law, she did not; was that the reason he had paced the floor, thinking, thinking, his face gray-white? Was that the reason he had determined upon secrecy? Was he being racked by suspense, hoping from day to day that he might lay his hand on the criminal, fearing that he would not, knowing that, if he did not, he would be called to account? That was a thing he would not tell her; he knew that she would be in agony—as she was now. Then another fear gripped her; would Rossiter betray what she had told him?

The extremity of her terror froze her into calm. "I am sorry I spoke so sharply," she said through stiff lips. "I realize, as you say, that every individual has a right to his convictions. I don't agree with you, but that is no reason why I should be angry with you. I am glad, really, that we have had this talk. You are too big for hatred—you couldn't do a mean thing. What I have told you is in confidence—I know you will not speak of it."

Rossiter flashed a glance at her. "You love him pretty completely, don't you, Kara!" he said half bitterly, half sadly, and at the same time with a touch of amusement. "No, Kara dear, I may be all sorts of things I shouldn't be, but I don't think that I am an out-and-out cad. What you have told me is as safe with me as it is with you—don't worry over that. And, Kara, if ever there is anything I can do for you, personally, call on me. I bear you no grudge, dear—you've been honest throughout."

Even in her acute anxiety, Karesia did not forget Dascome's daughter. "Thank you, Rand, I'll remember. . . . Clarice wanted you to know—that's why I came."

"She'll come out all right, Kara. Real talent is scarce—that's been one of my troubles these last weeks. Tell her that I said she must go on in pictures."

He put Karesia in her car and patted her hand in parting: "You're not the kind to go under, either. No matter what happens, we must stay friends." He seemed very anxious that she should understand that he bore her no ill-will.

XL

Karesia did not know how she reached her house; she drove mechanically, went up to her room wrapped in the same ludir cloud of fear; Dascome was in danger. If they did not find out very soon who was the criminal, he would go through that agony all over again; he would not live through it, for there is a limit to endurance. She was not looking down a gray vista now, she was looking down a precipice.

When the telephone rang, she went to it mechanically. It was Dascome speaking, his voice deep and even. "Karesia?"

"Oh—John!" She had not meant it to be a cry, but it was.

"What is it?" he asked, alarm in every word.

Karesia controlled herself instantly. "I was—so surprised—and pleased."

"Are you ill?"

"No, no—I was thinking of something else when you called. I am well."

Evidently Dascome was doubtful. "If you hear anything that frightens you, you must tell me, Karesia. You must call me at once, no matter what hour of the day or night."

Not for anything would she have told him of the misery she was in; he had carefully concealed from her what he was enduring; it would only add to his anxiety. "May I call you at any time? I am so glad!"

His voice had a note of relief. "Yes, here at the apartment," and he gave her the number. "I want to tell you about Elaine. First of all, we found the identification marks of which I told you—there is no doubt at all in the mind of any one. Then, today, they made their examination, two other physicians and Dr. Kreppler. It's a growth, they say, the result of the injury she received when a child. In her present condition, she can live only a short time—they think another attack, such as she has had, would prove fatal—convulsions would induce hemorrhage. It's your care of her that has kept her alive. They held a consultation—the case is desperate. They advise an operation—it's the only chance of saving her."

It passed through Karesia's mind, "And if she should die, there are those who will say that he meant it to be so." She asked as steadily as she could: "Wh[illegible] John?"

"In a few days. The examination had to be under an anesthetic. She has come out of it safely and is sleeping."

Karesia's thoughts had moved on. "Would an operation bring back her memory?"

"We hope so."

"Oh, John! Then she can tell us——"

"If she lives through it," Dascome said evenly.

It's a dangerous operation?"

"Very. But it has been done before."

Karesia was driven to the question. "Have you found out anything yet, John? Can't Colt help you to find out?"

"I sent him to Crisonby Lakes at once, Karesia, but he has discovered nothing."

What Rossiter had said passed through Karesia's mind: "I'll wager he has Colt busy covering up their tracks." Whatever Dascome did would be misconstrued.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

Century of Love Keeps Aged Woman Unmarried to End

Wealthy Southern Father Refused to Permit Marriage 100 Years Ago, and She Never Wed.

OKMULGEE, Okla., Feb. — Cherishing for more than a century a love of her girlhood, Miss Nancy Boyd of Okmulgee, has lived 119 years without marrying. Her life has been a round of disappointments; but as she sits in the deepening twilight of life she is happy in the thought that soon she and her lover will be reunited.

The daughter of a rich Tennessee plantation owner, her love for Jem Turner, the son of a poor man, was frowned upon by her father, who visioned for her a marriage into the ranks of the old southern aristocracy. Turner's persuasion that she not defy her father caused Miss Boyd to put aside hopes of an immediate marriage.

"I didn't stop loving him, though," she says. "Jem and I loved each other more than ever and began planning how we could get married later, when father might soften. You see, I refused to marry any one else.

Could Not Forget.

"Father thought I had forgotten Jem, and in the weeks that followed he had entertainment after entertainment in my honor, and young men for miles around attended them. I received many proposals of marriage, but I refused them, to the great anger of my father.

"Every week-end our big plantation house would be thronged with guests, and I was sure to get at least one proposal at each party, but no one could take the place of Jem.

"Finally my father asked me why I continually refused to marry. I told him. He vowed then that I should not marry Jem during his life. But we continued to hope."

This was in 1824. Years passed. Nancy grew to womanhood, Jem to manhood. Then came the year that began the southland's greatest tragedy—1861.

Still Hoped.

But Nancy and Jem still hoped. She was considered an old woman and he an old man. One evening as the war shadows were deepending, they stood on a small bridge near the Boyd plantation, discussing the seemingly inevitable conflict. Suddenly a brae-legged negro boy dashed past on a mule, shouting at them as he went:

"De wah is stahted! Dey's killin' ev'rybody!"

"Nancy," said Jem, "I'm going."

"I felt then—instinct, maybe," Miss Boyd says—"that I would never see Jem again. I told him so, but he laughed.

"'That is not a very cheerful thing to say,' he told me. But it was a true prophecy. I never saw him again. Throughout that bitter war I never heard from him. Father gave all we had to the Southern army, and in the last days of the war he was killed by a negro he once owned.

Killed at Front.

"The war ended, and I learned Jem was killed three days after he left Nashville in 1861. I was the last of our family, and as all our property was gone there was nothing for me to do but go to an aunt that had a small farm in Arkansas."

"The war ended, and I learned Jem was killed three days after he left Nashville in 1861. I was the last of our family, and as all our property was gone there was nothing for me to do but go to an aunt that had a small farm in Arkansas."

There she remained, working hard for a living from 1865 to 1918. She was off the farm but once.

Miss Boyd rode on a train for the first time in 1918, when she came to Okmulgee, and she has never ridden in an automobile.

"I'd rather like to ride in one of those automobiles some time, when I feel better," she says. "I don't like them as well as I did our fine coaches, drawn by beautiful horses. Ours were among the best in the South," she adds with pride.

"But then there are many things of this day and time that I don't care for. Everything is so cheap and artificial. Even love is not prompted by the sentiments and emotions, as it was in my day. You will think me old fashioned. I am dreadfully so."

Miss Boyd, apparently, is in good health, but her eyesight is rapidly failing.

She has a collection of Civil War newpapers, with brief stories of many important battles. She obtained all papers available searching for news of her lover.

Sirens Used To Scare Birds.

Sirens used for marine signalling, will be used in the orchards at Sydney, New South Wales, to scare away birds from the orchards and vineyards in the irrigated districts. The sirens would be operated electrically from the farm house whenever a flock appeared. The irrigation Commission of the government has set aside a sum of money to carry on this unique experiment.

Zane Grey's New Film, "Border Legion," Booked at Ceramic

The "Old West" has come back! Once again in the far North country where Zane Grey wrote the novel "The Border Legion," cowboys in picturesque garb ride through the great stretches where wire fences have not come.

Once again, the tinkle of spurs and the creak of saddle leather break the lazy hush of midday.

Once again, in a cloud of dust that darkens the sun, great herds of cattle move through the sagebrush wilderness with the steady rumble of a thousand hoofs.

Once again the rolling hills hear the shrill "coo-ee" of the cowboys, riding herd with one knee thrown nonchalantly over the saddle horn.

The old west was reborn for Paramount's picturiatiozn of "The Border Legion," in locations personally selected by Zane Grey. Far in the North country, a selected cast of Paramount players headed by Antonio Moreno, Helene Chadwick, Charles Ogle, Rockcliffe Fellows and Gibson Gowland, brought to life the characters that lived long ago.

Approximately 100 minor players, chiefly cowboys, take part in the spectacular production, directed by William Howard.

"The Border Legion," which opens at the Ceramic Theatre on Thursday was filmed true to life.

The story, adapted to the screen by George Hull, has to do with the activities of a band of ruthless outlaws who preyed upon settlers and gold towns in the early days of Idaho.

A replica of one of the great cattle drives of the early days is a striking sight.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Lover Was Gased.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: While away on my vacation this summer I met a man six years older than myself. We went places together and had a wonderful time. When I left he said he loved me and later wanted me as his wife. When I came back we corresponded with each other and now he says he is in a position to marry. My parents do not approve of him and he wants me to leave home and go back to his home with him. He has a lovely bungalow and a position that pays fine. While he was at war he was gassed twice. Do you think that would have any effect later on?

TROUBLED FRIEND.

You and not your parents are choosing a husband and therefore you should let the extent of your love answer your question. If you have any doubt about your desire to marry the man, put off your decision until you know more definitely what you want. The fact that he was gassed twice might cause trouble later on and again it might not. He might always suffer from stomach trouble and spells of dizziness. If he seems in good condition now, however, you have little to worry you in that respect

Dictates of Heart Should Determine Cause.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am only 22 and have been married four years and have two darling children. I have never loved my husband but was persuaded to marry him by my parents although they knew I loved a boy my own age. This man had money and to my parents that meant everything. The boy I loved is still single and just getting a start in life now. I believe he still cares for me although he never says anything about our love for each other when we meet. My husband no longer wants me and he takes no interest in the children. I have talked to him of divorce and he says he will settle a sum of money on me or give me monthly sums. Although I cannot trust him in many ways I really believe he would do that faithfully for the sake of his children. I want to do the right thing for my babies and it seems to me it would not injure their name if their father and I separated now. He enjoys the company of other women so much that I have to suffer all the time and I think such a life as he leads would be just as hard on their name. But my mother and father still urge me to stay with my husband. I have always tried to do as they have wanted because they have been very good to me, but their advice in the first place was wrong and so now I doubt their opinion. What would you say?

METTA.

You are a very fortunate young woman to take your two children and leave your husband, knowing that there will be means of support. Follow the dictates of your own heart in this matter. I see no reason why you should stay tied to a man who no longer wants you.

Wants To Dance.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been in this town two years. I do admire dancing, but am undecided whether to start going to dances or not. Mother and father wouldn't mind if I went except for what other people would think and say. What should I do?

BROWN EYES.

If you go to dances at respectable places people will not talk. You should not, however, go alone but should join a party of friends. You might enter a dancing class. Even if you do not need lessons you will meet people in that way.

Overworked Mother.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: To begin with, I am 47 years old and the mother of six children, three boys and three girls. I have two boys and a girl married, and they were all home yesterday with their children. My 15-year-old high school daughter is a good enough girl, but she worries me so. She won't take her lunch to school even when I'm short of money; she has to have her hair dressed in town and won't wear any but the best silk stockings, and of course the 12 and 19-year old boys, still at home, are an expense, too. Now I work every day away from home, and do all the housework myself. My children simply won't help me unless I fuss, and then they don't half do the work. I earn $18 a week and spend it all on the home. This morning I had to borrow 15 cents carfare to give the last cent I had to this daughter who refuses to take her lunch, so she could buy lunch in town. My husband only gives me $12 a week for grocery bill, lights, gas bill and never buys either the children or myself anything, not even a book. Yet he fusses at us all the time and says everything is all my fault, and he doesn't like it if I buy them anything. I have been failing in health the last six months and they all know it. Yet the children have to have things to go to school; he fusses when I don't work, and won't even bring in a bucket of coal to help. I was told to stay in bed by my doctor, but I couldn't, because the children came and none of them would help. They just sat around and played games and laughed. Finally, when I had managed to get the dinner ready at last I was dirty and so sick I had an ugly look on my face, and then the girls said I was getting to be the ugliest woman they ever saw, and if I didn't fix up I would lose my husband, their stepfather. I couldn't help but cry, and that made him mad, and then there was a row. I want to do what is right by them all, and see my children nice men and women. My husband is a good man in his way, but he was a selfish old bachelor and stingy when we married, so though we have our own home, I have to help, and I don't know what is best to do.

WELL-MEANING MOTHER.

Evidently you have always been too fond. You have spoilt them all so badly by taking on your tender and plucky shoulders burdens thay should have at least helped to bear, that they have come to have contempt for you so often the portion of the too-kind and considerate, unjust as it may be. Your 12-year old son is the only one who ought to be an expense to you now and even he should be doing his bit to help. High school daughter should not only be doing the housework for you, but earning enough spending money to buy her own lunches, silk hose and hair dressing if she must have them. The 19-year old son should be fending for himself entirely and your husband should have only you and the 12-year old to support altogether. Your who'e mistaken attitude toward your children is epitomized in the incident of robbing yourself of carefare in order to humor your spoilt young daughter. She should have been made to take a luncheon with her or go hungry. It may now be too late, but you need an entire reorganization of your household. Your time has come to rest and you should take your rest, not as a pensioner asking a favor of your inconsiderate family, but as a person coming into what she has honestly earned. You should not attempt to work away from home, should let your husband know how you expect to be supported as is your right, and even in the matter of housework you should map out a generous share of it for the children at home to do.

WHEN KIDNEYS HURT DRINK MORE WATER

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

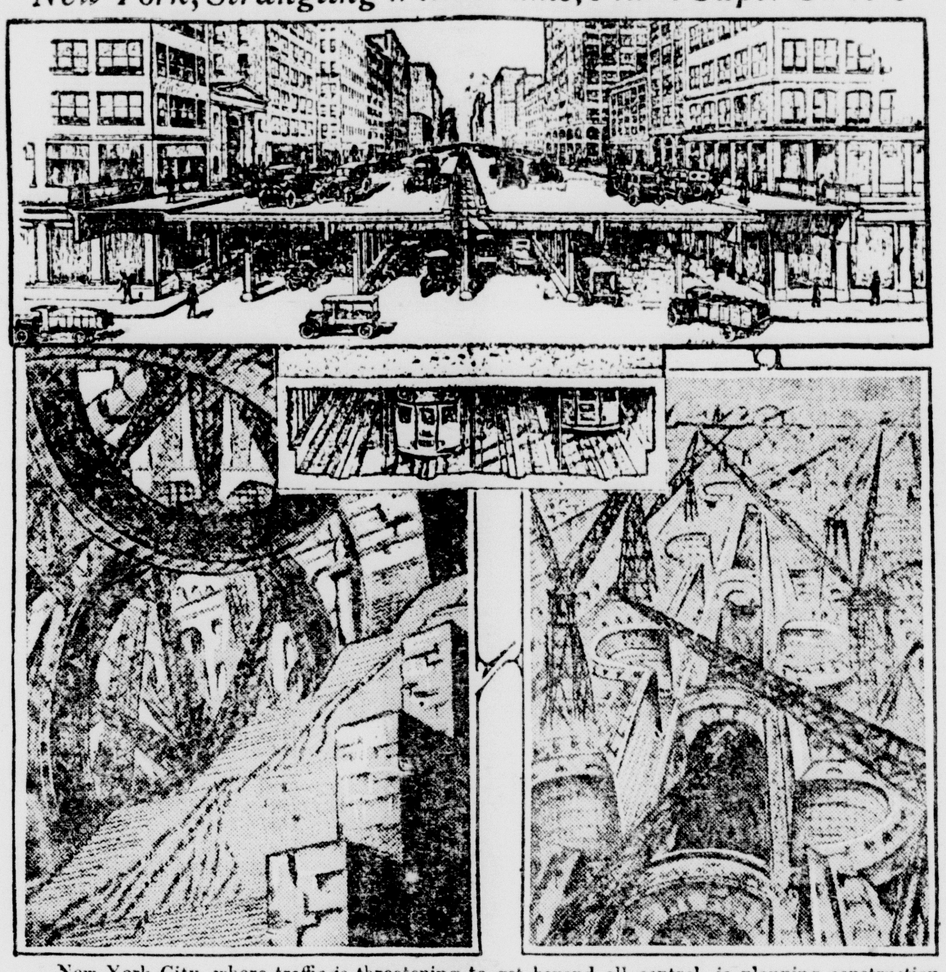
New York, Strangling With Traffic, Plans Super-Streets



New York City, where traffic is threatening to get beyond all control, is planning construction of super-streets of two, and possibly three levels. Stores would have entrances on all levels, which would be for vehicles, buses and pedestrians. Cars would run underground. New York is faced with the problem of providing for a population in 1960 twice as large as the present 6,000,000. Some idea of how the city will appear in the future is suggested in the drawing below, by Dobuzhinsky, a Russian artist. The sketch at top illustrates the super-street plan.

This Is the Road That Gets the Traffic

No matter how many roads there are leading in or out of your town, the ones best paved get the traffic.

This is especially true if these roads are of Concrete. For every motorist appreciates the many advantages of driving over its true, rigid, unyielding surface.

No wonder Concrete Highways are crowded for mile after mile. More than 17,000,000 motor vehicles are using them today. And new cars are being produced at the rate of 4,000,000 a year.

Here is a situation of vital concern to you. Everywhere we need more or wider Concrete Roads, or both, to take care of the ever-increasing traffic. And now is the time to plan for their construction.

Your highway officials want to be of the greatest possible service to you. Get behind them with ways and means that will provide more Concrete Roads and Streets. Such an investment will pay you big dividends year after year.

Bread Makes Fish More Appetizing

FISH, while appetizing and appealing to the taste, are not particularly high in food-value. An analysis for food-value shows them to be almost totally lacking in carbohydrates. Their nutrient content being chiefly protein with a small proportion of mineral salts.

THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth Dejeans

Karesia had returned to apparent calm. Some of the things Rossiter had said were like divination, only strangely perverted. There was only one being on earth who could shake her belief in John Dascome and that was John Dascome himself, and she had his declaration of innocence. What drove a chill through Karesia was the realization that there were others who would think as Rossiter did; her discovery had not cleared Dascome of guilt; it had plunged him into further trouble. There rose before her the grim face of the law; was it possible that he would be forced into court on another charge, made to endure another term of agony? He knew the law, she did not; was that the reason he had paced the floor, thinking, thinking, his face gray-white? Was that the reason he had determined upon secrecy? Was he being racked by suspense, hoping from day to day that he might lay his hand on the criminal, fearing that he woudd not, knowing that, if he did not, he would be called to account? That was a thing he would not tell her; he knew that she would be in agony—as she was now. Then another fear gripped her; would Rossiter betray what she had told him?

The extremity of her terror froze her into calm. "I am sorry I spoke so sharply," she said through stiff lips. "I realize, as you say, that every individual has a right to his convictions. I don't agree with you, but that is no reason why I should be angry with you. I am glad, really, that we have had this talk. You are too big for hatred—you couldn't do a mean thing. What I have told you is in confidence—I know you will not speak of it."

Rossiter flashed a glance at her. "You love him pretty completely, don't you, Kara!" he said half bitterly, half sadly, and at the same time with a touch of amusement. "No, Kara dear, I may be all sorts of things I shouldn't be, but I don't think that I am an out-and-out cad. What you have told me is as safe with me as it is with you—don't worry over that. And, Kara, if ever there is anything I can do for you, personally, call on me. I bear you no grudge, dear—you've been honest throughout."

Even in her acute anxiety, Karesia did not forget Dascome's daughter. "Thank you, Rand, I'll remember. . . . Clarice wanted you to know—that's why I came."

"She'll come out all right, Kara. Real talent is scarce—that's been one of my troubles these last weeks. Tell her that I said she must go on in pictures."

He put Karesia in her car and patted her hand in parting: "You're not the kind to go under, either. No matter what happens, we must stay friends." He seemed very anxious that she should understand that he bore her no ill-will.

XL

Karesia did not know how she reached her house; she drove mechanically, went up to her room wrapped in the same ludir cloud of fear; Dascome was in danger. If they did not find out very soon who was the criminal, he would go through that agony all over again; he would not live through it, for there is a limit to endurance. She was not looking down a gray vista now, she was looking down a precipice.

When the telephone rang, she went to it mechanically. It was Dascome speaking, his voice deep and even. "Karesia?"

"Oh—John!" She had not meant it to be a cry, but it was.

"What is it?" he asked, alarm in every word.

Karesia controlled herself instantly. "I was—so surprised—and pleased."

"Are you ill?"

"No, no—I was thinking of something else when you called. I am well."

Evidently Dascome was doubtful. "If you hear anything that frightens you, you must tell me, Karesia. You must call me at once, no matter what hour of the day or night."

Not for anything would she have told him of the misery she was in; he had carefully concealed from her what he was enduring; it would only add to his anxiety. "May I call you at any time? I am so glad!"

His voice had a note of relief. "Yes, here at the apartment," and he gave her the number. "I want to tell you about Elaine. First of all, we found the identification marks of which I told you—there is no doubt at all in the mind of any one. Then, today, they made their examination, two other physicians and Dr. Kreppler. It's a growth, they say, the result of the injury she received when a child. In her present condition, she can live only a short time—they think another attack, such as she has had, would prove fatal—convulsions would induce hemorrhage. It's your care of her that has kept her alive. They held a consultation—the case is desperate. They advise an operation—it's the only chance of saving her."

It passed through Karesia's mind, "And if she should die, there are those who will say that he meant it to be so." She asked as steadily as she could: "Whe[illegible] John?"

"In a few days. The examination had to be under an anesthetic. She has come out of it safely and is sleeping."

Karesia's thoughts had moved on. "Would an operation bring back her memory?"

"We hope so."

"Oh, John! Then she can tell us——"

"If she lives through it," Dascome said evenly.

It's a dangerous operation?"

"Very. But it has been done before."

Karesia was driven to the question. "Have you found out anything yet, John? Can't Colt help you to find out?"

"I sent him to Crisomby Lakes at once, Karesia, but he has discovered nothing."

What Rossiter had said passed through Karesia's mind: "I'll wager he has Colt busy covering up their tracks." Whatever Dascome did would be misconstrued.

(Copyright, 1925, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

An outlaw golf ball, priced at 35 cents, threatens to revolutionize link standards, knock parity all askew and enable even the dub to stand in Ohio and perform a birdie on a course in Montana.

Wilmar Dunbar is responsible for it all. He's the raventressed child who created the ball which has such a carry that even the dub will be able to smack it for 300 or 325 yards—and boast not of the achievement.

The ball is "taboo" for tournament play. The youths and the elders who parcel out the laws that govern club, city and state and national championships have solemnly declared that the new ball cannot be used in championship matches—and that anyone caught using it will be served up the next day in the form of fricasse to his link victims.

The very fact that this new ball is priced at 35 cents and that a good profit is derived from its sale at that figure will give manufacturers of standardized balls quite a bit to think about. No doubt their thoughts will be toward a reduction from present "profiteering" mark of $1, which is assessed for the standard ball of today.

For many years the golfing students have maintained that the distance a fairly hit ball will travel depends almost entirely upon its center. The opinion was given that the more the center was solidified the greater would be the distance. And that set Dunbar to thinking, then to working—and a 35 cent ball that can be whacked 300 yards without herculean effort is the result.

"My ball has a MOULDED center—not a wound center, as is the case with other balls," explains Dunbar. "My solid center overcomes many of the objectionable features of a wound ball. It will last longer than the old type of ball, it will carry further on all drives and it is perfection itself on the green where a perfect roll is vital.

"When the club head hits a wound ball, the result frequently is that the power of the blow distorts the shape of the center of the ball. That may be called knocking the ball out of perfect balance. Naturally, when that happens, the ball does not carry as truly as it should, its roll is not perfect and certainly it is not a perfect rolling ball on the green—where perfection of roll is absolutely essential.

"My ball is moulded into a perfect sphere. It has all the life and the resiliency of a wound ball. Its center can't be battered out of shape. The ball is treated with Balata—the standardized covering for all golf balls of today. It is identical in size, weight and balance with the standard ball.

"This ball of mine retains perfect balance—and perfect balance is the thing which means that golfers who can't get more than 200 or 225 yards with the standard ball, can drive 300 yards or more with mine—for the simple reason that my ball gives them perfection in flight, perfection of balance and perfection in the roll."

Boulevards Trounce M.E. Five, 24-12

First Presbyterians Victors Over U. P. Quint, 48 to 15.

The First Presbyterians and the Park Boulevards came out on top in their Sunday school league games last night with the United Presbyterians and Methodist Episcopals, respectively. The scores were 48 to 15 and 24 to 12.

The First Presbyterians displayed an effective brand of basketball in their clash with the U. P. lads. Only in the first period did the losers appear to have a chance. Their hopes dimmed gradually as the evening wore on.

Allison and Cooper were the big guns in the Presbyterian scoring attack. Hall played a good game. Calhoun, Hoffman and Roberts were the chief U. P. performers.

The Park Boulevards and M. E. put on more of a battle. The teams played practically even in the first quarter, the count being 4 to 3. But the Parks had the better of it in the second period, the half-time score being 11 to 4. The M. E. lads rallied in the third period and, scoring four straight field goals, came within a point of tying things up. But the flash died out. The Boulevards resumed the business of making more field goals and at the three-quarter post were out in front with the score of 21 to 12.

As a result of their conquest, the Parks are tied with the Lutherans for second place in the league race. Barnes, Guyton and McKee played stellar roles for the winners while Bromby, Nease and Irwin were the M. E. mainstays.

Lineups:

First U. P.		First Presby.
Hoffman	F	Cooper

British Fighters Capture Opening Scraps in Gotham

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—Inspired by the victories of G. Gogay, lightweight, and James O'Hanrahan, welterweight, in the preliminary rounds last night, England's representatives will enter the finals of the International Amateur Boxing tourney tonight more than hopeful of success. They will be opposed by men representing the Metropolitan and Pittsburgh districts.

Gogay scored a merited victory over Murray Israel, Metropolitan champion, at the end of three rounds, and O'Hanrahan won as he pleased from Ed. Tiernan, local welterweight.

Move, Sponsored by Athletic Director O. V. Boone, Will Aid in Development of Material for Future High School Teams.

With an eye to the development of future high school basketball stars, O. V. Boone, director of physical education, has practically completed the organization of a grade school court circuit which will set into action at least nine school teams in the district.

The entries are: Lincoln, Pleasant Heights, Maplewood, Washington, Sixth street, McKinley, Garfield, Neville and Central, with Glenmore and Walker questionable.

A series of games will be played on the high school court on March 2, 4, 9, 11 and 16. A schedule for the contests is now being drawn up by Director Boone.

On March 20 and 21, the grade passers will compete in a tournament, the grand finale to their brief season. To the tourney winner will be awarded a silver loving cup.

Central may have two teams in the circuit, on account of the large amount of material available. Glenmore and Walker have not indicated definitely yet whether they will be able to organize teams.

Members of the high school basketball squad will be assigned to coach the grade lads, the selections to be made as follows: Central—McConville; Garfield—E. English and McVey; Lincoln—Pusey; McKinley—McKeever; Maplewood—Liebschner; Neville—McGraw; Pleasant Heights—Hall and Allison; Sixth street—P. English; Washington—Bough and Hamilton.

Grade students who are passing in three of the five subjects in which examinations are required, are eligible to play on the teams. Lists of eligibles are to be filed by school principals with Director Boone before the first scheduled games.

Practice dates have been announced as follows: Monday—Lincoln and Pleasant Heights; Tuesday—Maplewood and Washington; Wednesday—Sixth street and McKinley; Thursday—Garfield and Neville; Saturday—Central. Practice periods will be held in the evenings between 6 and 7.

Jimmy Slattery Jars Their Slats

By Norman E. Brown.

Some months ago Paul Berlenbach was headed for the center of the middleweight stage. He had set up an impressive record against a mixed field of opponents. Then Jack Delaney, a socker of some fame, was picked as an opponent for him. In view of Berlenbach's record Delaney was placed as sort of a "set up."

When the bout ended Berlenbach couldn't set up—for several seconds.

Berlenbach had to start his drive all over again. Delaney drew much attention for a time—until he, too, was licked.

Then Tiger Flowers plunged to the foreground by virtue of his clever boxing and deadly punching. The promoters offered him a bout with Delaney and he took it—and one on the jaw. Another swell start ruined.

Enter Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Slattery, up to a few nights ago, had followed the footsteps of Berlenbach and Flowers. He had hung up an impressive record. He was credited with 59 fights and knockout victories in 21 of them. Thirty-six were decision victories. He had lost but two decisions and had never been knocked out.

He had fought twice in New York and the promoters decided he was about ready to tackle Delaney, who had become sort of a testing block for hopeful contenders for Harry Greb's crown. Slattery was willing. Some of his friends wept.

Delaney and Slattery met a few nights ago.

Now Slattery's tender age prevented the bout going more than six rounds.

Under the New York rules a mitt pusher must be twenty-one to engage in long bouts. Some of Slattery's adherents claimed he was old enough to vote but the jolly birth records in Buffalo's city hall showed James was born Aug. 25, 1904.

Delaney and his backers figured he wouldn't need six rounds to finish up his evening's task. But at the end of six rounds Mr. James Buffalo Slattery was not only up but doing—the majority of the leading. The judges gave Slattery the decision on points and the verdict was well received.

Now, having passed the Delenay hazard the world lies bright ahead of the young easterner.

And fewer middleweights cringe now when Jack Delaney says "woof" and looks mean.

Wills Refuses Bout With Gibbons; Wants Chance At Champion

Hoppe Continues To Lead Cannefax In Seventh Block

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Willie Hoppe continued to lead Bob Cannefax today at the outset of the seventh block of their 600 point match for the unofficial world's championship in three cushion billiards, the balkline king being in front by a score of 360 to 352. A total of 439 innings have been consumed in reaching this score.

Hoppe suffered a net loss of five points as a result of the fifth and sixth blocks yesterday, although Willie won the former by sixty to 48, increasing his lead to 25 points. In the evening, however, Cannefax came back and won the block by 77 to 60.

Here, Hoppe, whose safety play in the afternoon had been a revelation, made the mistake of leaving a number of open shots for Cannefax and the three cushion champion lost no time in taxing advantage of the situation.

Johnson 'Holds Out' In Order to Get in Some More Hunting

RENO, Nev., Feb. 18—His love for hunting rather than preliminary training at Hot Springs is believed here to be back of Walter Johnson's "holdout," rather than a hitch over terms.

Johnson denied today that he was holding out and declared he would sign with the Washington Senators within the next three days.

Asked if his decision was definite, he replied that "he expected to sign up," and would leave either late this week or on March first for training camp.

Johnson denied he had negotiations on for the purchase of any club. He has been spending the winter on hunting trips and friends say he believes outdoor sports a better conditioning than training camp just now.

Willie Ritola to Attempt Another Two-mile Record

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—Willie Ritola, holder of the world's two-mile record for only 48 hours, will again attempt to set new figures at that distance tonight at the annual games of the Knights of St. Anthony in Brooklyn. Ritola has mapped out a careful time schedule through which he hopes to better Paavo Nurmi's record of 8:58 1-5, established last Saturday night.

Claims He's Already Qualified for Title Scrap; Rickard's Interest Said to Lie in Return go Between Dempsey and Tom.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18. — Harry Wills drew the "colar line" on Tom Gibbons today, after indulging himself in the annual formality of posting his $2,500 check with the State Athletic Commission to bind another challenge to Jack Dempsey. Harry made no secret of his attitude toward the white heir apparent to the heavyweight crown. To him, Thomas is out like a broken window and Mr. T. Rickard can bundle up his idealistic plans for a Gibbons-Wills bout and take a running jump in the nearby lake.

"Why should I meet Gibbons?" Wills asked. "He had his shot at Dempsey and couldn't win. I don't see why I should be going around meeting the losers. I took on Firpo and beat him easily. All I got out of it was a lot of abuse. Now, they want me to meet Gibbons in order to qualify for a match with Dempsey. If I haven't qualified already, I'd like to know who has."

Paddy Mullins, the man of monosyllables, stood by and nodded solemn concurrence with these sentiments. Mr. Mullins is nearly always silent as befits a man with an important mission in life. He must ever hold himself in readiness to post the checks, and when requested, come around and take them down again.

"Wills is the logical opponent for Dempsey," Mr. Mullins enunciated in accents rusty from lack of use. "He will not fight any contender until he gets a crack at the title."

Many followers of fistic affairs will be pleased to note in this statement a bright future for Mr. Wills along the Hoboken docks. They believe that a Dempsey-Wills bout will never transpire and that if Wills passes up all contenders he will, of necessity, pass up eating as a regular and daily form of amusement.

A few others, however, claim that Wills is nearer his title shot than ever before. How near that may be is a matter for careful estimate by a lick telescope. Yet those who make this statement are of what might be termed the outer-inner circle of boxing politics; in other words, just close enough possibly to have heard a faint echo of official sentiment toward the project. They claim that the State Athletic Commission is favorably disposed toward the proposition, in spite of chairman Brower's guarded reply to Mullins yesterday that the board "would take the challenge under consideration," means nothing.

Ostensibly Wills' objection to a Gibbons meeting will throw Rickard and his announced plans for the outdoor season for a ten yard loss behind the line of scrimmage. In reality, it will interfere with them hardly at all. Rickard's real interest lies in another meeting between Gibbons and Dempsey with Wills merely forming an excellent and literal screen in the background.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Lover Was Gased.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: While away on my vacation this summer I met a man six years older than myself. We went places together and had a wonderful time. When I left he said he loved me and later wanted me as his wife. When I came back we corresponded with each other and now he says he is in a position to marry. My parents do not approve of him and he wants me to leave home and go back to his home with him. He has a lovely bungalow and a position that pays fine. While he was at war he was gassed twice. Do you think that would have any effect later on?

TROUBLED FRIEND.

You and not your parents are choosing a husband and therefore you should let the extent of your love answer your question. If you have any doubt about your desire to marry the man, put off your decision until you know more definitely what you want. The fact that he was gassed twice might cause trouble later on and again it might not. He might always suffer from stomach trouble and spells of dizziness. If he seems in good condition now, however, you have little to worry you in that respect

Dictates of Heart Should Determine Cause.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am only 22 and have been married four years and have two darling children. I have never loved my husband but was persuaded to marry him by my parents although they knew I loved a boy my own age. This man had money and to my parents that meant everything. The boy I loved is still single and just getting a start in life now. I believe he still cares for me although he never says anything about our love for each other when we meet. My husband no longer wants me and he takes no interest in the children. I have talked to him of divorce and he says he will settle a sum of money on me or give me monthly sums. Although I cannot trust him in many ways I really believe he would do that faithfully for the sake of his children. I want to do the right thing for my babies and it seems to me it would not injure their name if their father and I separated now. He enjoys the company of other women so much that I have to suffer all the time and I think such a life as he leads would be just as hard on their name. But my mother and father still urge me to stay with my husband. I have always tried to do as they have wanted because they have been very good to me, but their advice in the first place was wrong and so now I doubt their opinion. What would you say?

METTA.

You are a very fortunate young woman to take your two children and leave your husband, knowing that there will be means of support. Follow the dictates of your own heart in this matter. I see no reason why you should stay tied to a man who no longer wants you.

Wants To Dance.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been in this town two years. I do admire dancing, but am undecided whether to start going to dances or not. Mother and father wouldn't mind if I went except for what other people would think and say. What should I do?

BROWN EYES.

If you go to dances at respectable places people will not talk. You shou'd not, however, go alone but should join a party of friends. You might enter a dancing class. Even if you do not need lessons you will meet people in that way.

Overworked Mother.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: To begin with, I am 47 years old and the mother of six children, three boys and three girls. I have two boys and a girl married, and they were all home yesterday with their children. My 15-year-old high school daughter is a good enough girl, but she worries me so. She won't take her lunch to school even when I'm short of money; she has to have her hair dressed in town and won't wear any but the best silk stockings, and of course the 12 and 19-year old boys, still at home, are an expense, too. Now I work every day away from home, and do all the housework myself. My children simply won't help me unless I fuss, and then they don't half do the work. I earn $18 a week and spend it all on the home. This morning I had to borrow 15 cents carfare to give the last cent I had to this daughter who refuses to take her lunch, so she could buy lunch in town. My husband only gives me $12 a week for grocery bill, lights, gas bill and never buys either the children or myself anything, not even a book. Yet he fusses at us all the time and says everything is all my fault, and he doesn't like it if I buy them anything. I have been failing in health the last six months and they all know it. Yet the children have to have things to go to school; he fusses when I don't work, and won't even bring in a bucket of coal to help I was told to stay in bed by my doctor, but I couldn't, because the children came and none of them would help. They just sat around and played games and laughed. Finally, when I had managed to get the dinner ready at last I was dirty and so sick I had an ugly look on my face, and then the girls said I was getting to be the ugliest woman they ever saw, and if I didn't fix up I would lose my husband, their stepfather. I couldn't help but cry, and that made him mad, and then there was a row. I want to do what is right by them all, and see my children nice men and women. My husband is a good man in his way, but he was a selfish old bachelor and stingy when we married, so though we have our own home, I have to help, and I don't know what is best to do.

WELL-MEANING MOTHER.

Evidently you have always been too fond. You have spoilt them all so badly by taking on your tender and plucky shoulders burdens thay should have at least helped to bear, that they have come to have contempt for you so often the portion of the too-kind and considerate, unjust as it may be. Your 12-year old son is the only one who ought to be an expense to you now and even he should be doing his bit to help. High school daughter should not only be doing the housework for you, but earning enough spending money to buy her own lunches, silk hose and hair dressing if she must have them. The 19 year old son should be fending for himself entirely and your husband shou'd have only you and the 12-year old to support altogether. Your whole mistaken attitude toward your children is epitomized in the incident of robbing yourself of carefare in order to humor your spoilt young daughter. She should have been made to take a luncheon with her or go hungry. It may now be too late, but you need an entire reorganization of your household. Your time has come to rest and you should take your rest, not as a pensioner asking a favor of your inconsiderate family, but as a person coming into what she has honestly earned. You should not attempt to work away from home, should let your husband know how you expect to be supported as is your right, and even in the matter of housework you should map out a generous share of it for the children at home to do.

WHEN KIDNEYS HURT DRINK MORE WATER

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

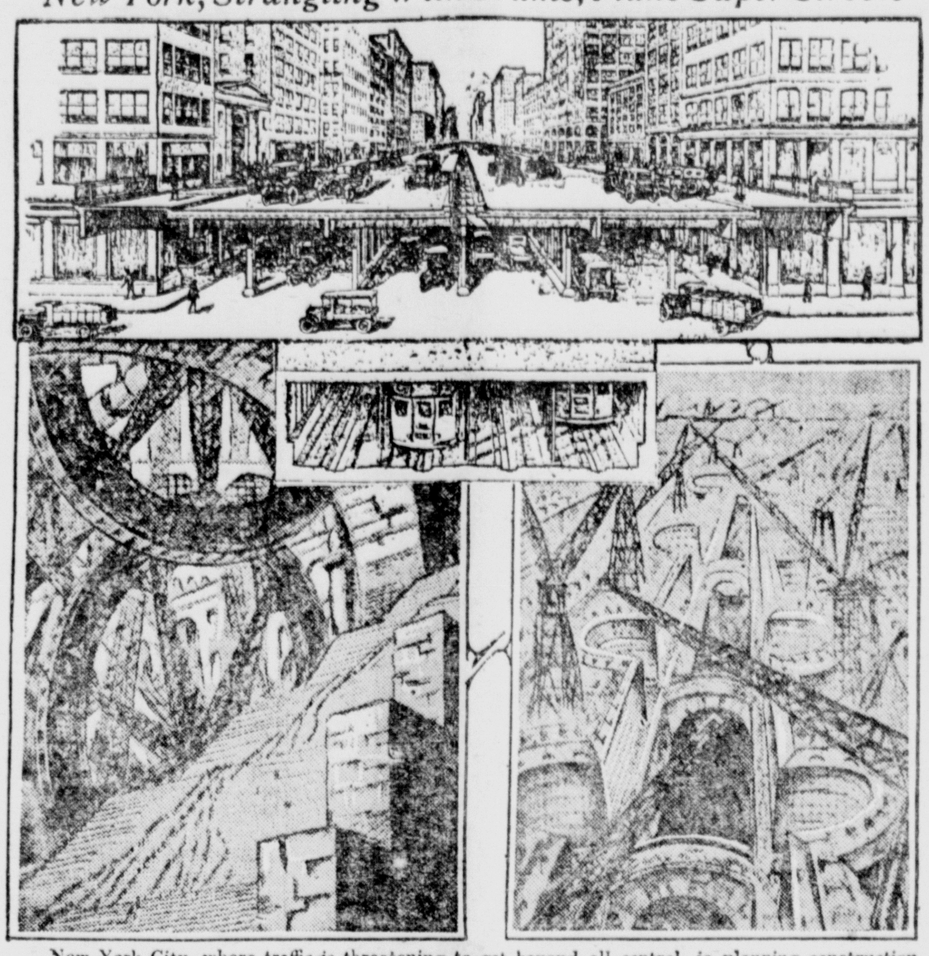
New York, Strangling With Traffic, Plans Super-Streets



New York City, where traffic is threatening to get beyond all control, is planning construction of super-streets of two, and possibly three levels. Stores would have entrances on all levels, which would be for vehicles, buses and pedestrians. Cars would run underground. New York is faced with the problem of providing for a population in 1960 twice as large as the present 6,000,000. Some idea of how the city will appear in the future is suggested in the drawing below, by Dobuzhinsky, a Russian artist. The sketch at top illustrates the super-street plan.

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

This Is the Road That Gets the Traffic

No matter how many roads there are leading in or out of your town, the ones best paved get the traffic.

This is especially true if these roads are of Concrete. For every motorist appreciates the many advantages of driving over its true, rigid, unyielding surface.

No wonder Concrete Highways are crowded for mile after mile. More than 17,000,000 motor vehicles are using them today. And new cars are being produced at the rate of 4,000,000 a year.

Here is a situation of vital concern to you. Everywhere we need more or wider Concrete Roads, or both, to take care of the ever-increasing traffic. And now is the time to plan for their construction.

Your highway officials want to be of the greatest possible service to you. Get behind them with ways and means that will provide more Concrete Roads and Streets. Such an investment will pay you big dividends year after year.

Reduce Your Fat Without Dieting

Years ago the formula for fat reduction was "diet"—"exercise." Today, it is "Take Marmola Prescription Tablets." Friends tell friends—these friends tell others. They eat substantial food, live as they like and still reduce steadily and easily without going through long siege of tiresome exercise and starvation diet. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists the world over at one dollar for a box, or if you prefer you can order direct from the Marmola Co., General Motors B'dg., Detroit, Mich.

Not to spread a cold—Stop it today

Cover your sneeze and coughs. They spread infection. Deal promptly with colds. Every hour lost may add hours of discomfort. Treat colds effectively. Use a treatment that is quick, reliable, complete—the best men know.

That means Hill's Cascara Bromide-Quinine. It stops colds in 24 hours, and La Grippe in 3 days.

So sure that druggists guarantee it. So reliable that millions now employ it. Experience that years have developed no way to improve it.

Colds are dangerous. Nobody can foretell their end. So don't take chances. Be sure you get the genuine Hill's. A tonic, a laxative, a cold relief combined. And don't delay.

Bread Makes Fish More Appetizing

FISH, while appetizing and appealing to the taste, are not particularly high in food-value. An analysis for food-value shows them to be almost totally lacking in carbohydrates. Their nutrient content being chiefly protein with a small proportion of mineral salts.

But when breaded with BETSY-ROSS crumbs their food-value is greatly increased, for BETSY-ROSS supplies the carbohydrates needed and adds to the supply of protein and mineral salts.

This is just another way to use more bread—but, because "There's a difference in bread" be sure that yours is the high food-value loaf. When ordering, don't just say "bread"—say BETSY-ROSS.

How to Solve Puzzle.

The best way to solve this cross-word puzzle is to run over the list of horizontal and vertical synonyms in search of evident or "easy" words. If horizontal, the word you are looking for must extend crosswise from the number to the first shaded stop on the right; if vertical, it must extend downward from the number to the first shaded stop below. When finished, the words should read equally well crosswise and downward.

Lutherans In Winning Role In Cage Tilt

Defeat Chester Presbyterian Passers by Big Score.

The Chester Presbyterians of the Sunday school cage loop last night offered very little opposition to the Lutherans who ran away with the affair by the tally of 46 to 11. The clash took place on the high school court.

The First M. E. Juniors were victors over the Lutheran Juniors in the preliminary, the score being 43 to 15.

The Lutheran Intermediates were too strong for the West Virgilians in every department. They had the game sewed up practically at the end of the first half when the count stood 20 to 6, and scored even more in the last half than they did in the first.

The Lutheran defense was on a par with their offense, and as a result, the opposition collected only three field goals during the engagement.

G. Woessner, R. Woessner, Schneidmiller and Anthony were scoring stars for the Lutherans while Kibble and Dawson performed well at guards. Cox, Haney, Wallace and Bartly were outstanding performers on the Chester squad.

An outlaw golf ball, priced at 35 cents, threatens to revolutionize link standards, knock parity all askew and enable even the dub to stand in Ohio and perform a birdie on a course in Montana.

Wilmar Dunbar is responsible for it all. He's the raventressed child who created the ball which has such a carry that even the dub will be able to smack it for 300 or 325 yards—and boast not of the achievement.

The ball is "taboo" for tournament play. The youths and the elders who parcel out the laws that govern club, city and state and national championships have solemnly declared that the new ball cannot be used in championship matches—and that anyone caught using it will be served up the next day in the form of fricasse to his link victims.

The very fact that this new ball is priced at 35 cents and that a good profit is derived from its sale at that figure will give manufacturers of standardized balls quite a bit to think about. No doubt their thoughts will be toward a reduction from present "profiteering" mark of $1, which is assessed for the standard ball of today.

For many years the golfing students have maintained that the distance a fairly hit ball will travel depends almost entirely upon its center. The opinion was given that the more the center was solidified the greater would be the distance. And that set Dunbar to thinking, then to working—and a 35 cent ball that can be whacked 300 yards without herculean effort is the result.

"My ball has a MOULDED center—not a wound center, as is the case with other balls," explains Dunbar. "My solid center overcomes many of the objectionable features of a wound ball. It will last longer than the old type of ball, it will carry further on all drives and it is perfection itself on the green where a perfect roll is vital.

"When the club head hits a wound ball, the result frequently is that the power of the blow distorts the shape of the center of the ball. That may be called knocking the ball out of perfect balance. Naturally, when that happens, the ball does not carry as truly as it should, its roll is not perfect and certainly it is not a perfect rolling ball on the green—where perfection of roll is absolutely essential.

"My ball is moulded into a perfect sphere. It has all the life and the resiliency of a wound ball. Its center can't be battered out of shape. The ball is treated with Balata—the standardized covering for all golf balls of today. It is identical in size, weight and balance with the standard ball.

"This ball of mine retains perfect balance—and perfect balance is the thing which means that golfers who can't get more than 200 or 225 yards with the standard ball, can drive 300 yards or more with mine—for the simple reason that my ball gives them perfection in flight, perfection of balance and perfection in the roll."

Trotters Capture Clash With Power Class Court Team

The Power basketball five was unable to summon enough strength last night to cope with the Trotter Chevrolets, the contest going to the auto men by the count of 38 to 23.

Boulevards Trounce M.E. Five, 24-12

First Presbyterians Victors Over U. P. Quint, 48 to 15.

The First Presbyterians and the Park Boulevards came out on top in their Sunday school league games last night with the United Presbyterians and Methodist Episcopals, respectively. The scores were 48 to 15 and 24 to 12.

The First Presbyterians displayed an effective brand of basketball in their clash with the U. P. lads. Only in the first period did the losers appear to have a chance. Their hopes dimmed gradually as the evening wore on.

Allison and Cooper were the big guns in the Presbyterian scoring attack. Hall played a good game. Calhoun, Hoffman and Roberts were the chief U. P. performers.

The Park Boulevards and M. E. put on more of a battle. The teams played practically even in the first quarter, the count being 4 to 3. But the Parks had the better of it in the second period, the half time score being 11 to 4. The M. E. lads rallied in the third period and, scoring four straight field goals, came within a point of tying things up. But the flash died out. The Boulevards resumed the business of making more field goals and at the three-quarter post were out in front with the score of 21 to 12.

As a result of their conquest, the Parks are tied with the Lutherans for second place in the league race. Barnes, Guyton and McKee played stellar roles for the winners while Bromby, Nease and Irwin were the M. E. mainstays.

Lineups:

First U. P.		First Presby.
Hoffman	F	Cooper
Berg	F	Allison
Calhoun	C	Householder
Roberts	G	Hall
Shenkel	G	Todd

Substitution—Sample for Roberts.

Field goals—Allison 7, Cooper 6, Hall 3, Todd, Householder, Hoffman 2, Calhoun 2, Roberts.

British Fighters Capture Opening Scraps in Gotham

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—Inspired by the victories of G. Gogay, lightweight, and James O'Hanrahan, welterweight, in the preliminary rounds last night, England's representatives will enter the finals of the International Amateur Boxing tourney tonight more than hopeful of success. They will be opposed by men representing the Metropolitan and Pittsburgh districts.

Gogay scored a merited victory over Murray Israel, Metropolitan champion, at the end of three rounds, and O'Hanrahan won as he pleased from Ed. Tiernan, local welterwegiht.

Move, Sponsored by Athletic Director O. V. Boone, Will Aid in Development of Material for Future High School Teams.

With an eye to the development of future high school basketball stars, O. V. Boone, director of physical education, has practically completed the organization of a grade school court circuit which will set into action at least nine school teams in the district.

The entries are: Lincoln, Pleasant Heights, Maplewood, Washington, Sixth street, McKinley, Garfield, Neville and Central, with Glenmore and Walker questionable.

A series of games will be played on the high school court on March 2, 4, 9, 11 and 16. A schedule for the contests is now being drawn up by Director Boone.

On March 20 and 21, the grade passers will compete in a tournament, the grand finale to their brief season. To the tourney winner will be awarded a silver loving cup.

Central may have two teams in the circuit, on account of the large amount of material available. Glenmore and Walker have not indicated definitely yet whether they will be able to organize teams.

Members of the high school basketball squad will be assigned to coach the grade lads, the selections to be made as follows: Central—McConville; Garfield—E. English and McVey; Lincoln—Pusey; McKinley—McKeever; Maplewood—Liebschner; Neville—McGraw; Pleasant Heights—Hall and Allison; Sixth street—P. English; Washington—Bough and Hamilton.

Grade students who are passing in three of the five subjects in which examinations are required, are eligible to play on the teams. Lists of eligibles are to be filed by school principals with Director Boone before the first scheduled games.

Practice dates have been announced as follows: Monday—Lincoln and Pleasant Heights; Tuesday—Maplewood and Washington; Wednesday—Sixth street and McKinley; Thursday—Garfield and Neville; Saturday—Central. Practice periods will be held in the evenings between 6 and 7.

Officers of the organization are: President, Edward Harris; vice president, H. D. Rist; secretary, Miss Andrews; treasurer, Miss Gill.

Jimmy Slattery Jars Their Slats

By Norman E. Brown.

Some months ago Paul Berlenbach was headed for the center of the middleweight stage. He had set up an impressive record against a mixed field of opponents. Then Jack Delaney, a socker of some fame, was picked as an opponent for him. In view of Berlenbach's record Delaney was placed as sort of a "set up."

When the bout ended Berlenbach couldn't set up—for several seconds.

Berlenbach had to start his drive all over again. Delaney drew much attention for a time—until he, too, was licked.

Then Tiger Flowers plunged to the foreground by virtue of his clever boxing and deadly punching. The promoters offered him a bout with Delaney and he took it—and one on the jaw. Another swell start ruined.

Enter Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Slattery, up to a few nights ago, had followed the footsteps of Berlenbach and Flowers. He had hung up an impressive record. He was credited with 59 fights and knockout victories in 21 of them. Thirty-six were decision victories. He had lost but two decisions and had never been knocked out.

He had fought twice in New York and the promoters decided he was about ready to tackle Delaney, who had become sort of a testing block for hopeful contenders for Harry Greb's crown. Slattery was willing. Some of his friends wept.

Delaney and Slattery met a few nights ago.

Now Slattery's tender age prevented the bout going more than six rounds.

Under the New York rules a mitt pusher must be twenty-one to engage in long bouts. Some of Slattery's adherents claimed he was old enough to vote but the jolly birth records in Buffalo's city hall showed James was born Aug. 25, 1904.

Delaney and his backers figured he wouldn't need six rounds to finish up his evening's task. But at the end of six rounds Mr. James Buffalo Slattery was not only up but doing—the majority of the leading. The judges gave Slattery the decision on points and the verdict was well received.

Now, having passed the Delenay hazard the world lies bright ahead of the young easterner.

And fewer middleweights cringe now when Jack Delaney says "woof" and looks mean.

Wills Refuses Bout With Gibbons; Wants Chance At Champion

Hoppe Continues To Lead Cannefax In Seventh Block

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Willie Hoppe continued to lead Bob Cannefax today at the outset of the seventh block of their 600 point match for the unofficial world's championship in three cushion billiards, the balkline king being in front by a score of 360 to 352. A total of 439 innings have been consumed in reaching this score.

Hoppe suffered a net loss of five points as a result of the fifth and sixth blocks yesterday, although Willie won the former by sixty to 48, increasing his lead to 25 points. In the evening, however, Cannefax came back and won the block by 77 to 60.

Here, Hoppe, whose safety play in the afternoon had been a revelation, made the mistake of leaving a number of open shots for Cannefax and the three cushion champion lost no time in taxing advantage of the situation.

Johnson 'Holds Out' In Order to Get in Some More Hunting

RENO, Nev., Feb. 18—His love for hunting rather than preliminary training at Hot Springs is believed here to be back of Walter Johnson's "holdout," rather than a hitch over terms.

Johnson denied today that he was holding out and declared he would sign with the Washington Senators within the next three days.

Asked if his decision was definite, he replied that "he expected to sign up," and would leave either late this week or on March first for training camp.

Johnson denied he had negotiations on for the purchase of any club. He has been spending the winter on hunting trips and friends say he believes outdoor sports a better conditioning than training camp just now.

Willie Ritola to Attempt Another Two-mile Record

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—Willie Ritola, holder of the world's two-mile record for only 48 hours, will again attempt to set new figures at that distance tonight at the annual games of the Knights of St. Anthony in Brooklyn. Ritola has mapped out a careful time schedule through which he hopes to better Paavo Nurmi's record of 8:58 1-5, established last Saturday night.

Claims He's Already Qualified for Title Scrap; Rickard's Interest Said to Lie in Return go Between Dempsey and Tom.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18. — Harry Wills drew the "colar line" on Tom Gibbons today, after indulging himself in the annual formality of posting his $2,500 check with the State Athletic Commission to bind another challenge to Jack Dempsey. Harry made no secret of his attitude toward the white heir apparent to the heavyweight crown. To him, Thomas is out like a broken window and Mr. T. Rickard can bundle up his idealistic plans for a Gibbons-Wills bout and take a running jump in the nearby lake.

"Why should I meet Gibbons?" Wills asked. "He had his shot at Dempsey and couldn't win. I don't see why I should be going around meeting the losers. I took on Firpo and beat him easily. All I got out of it was a lot of abuse. Now, they want me to meet Gibbons in order to qualify for a match with Dempsey. If I haven't qualified already, I'd like to know who has."

Paddy Mullins, the man of monosyllables, stood by and nodded solemn concurrence with these sentiments. Mr. Mullins is nearly always silent as befits a man with an important mission in life. He must ever hold himself in readiness to post the checks, and when requested, come around and take them down again.

"Wills is the logical opponent for Dempsey," Mr. Mullins enunciated in accents rusty from lack of use. "He will not fight any contender until he gets a crack at the title."

Many followers of fistic affairs will be pleased to note in this statement a bright future for Mr. Wills along the Hoboken docks. They believe that a Dempsey-Wills bout will never transpire and that if Wills passes up all contenders he will, of necessity, pass up eating as a regular and daily form of amusement.

A few others, however, claim that Wills is nearer his title shot than ever before. How near that may be is a matter for careful estimate by a lick telescope. Yet those who make this statement are of what might be termed the outer-inner circle of boxing politics; in other words, just close enough possibly to have heard a faint echo of official sentiment toward the project. They claim that the State Athletic Commission is favorably disposed toward the proposition, in spite of chairman Brower's guarded reply to Mullins yesterday that the board "would take the challenge under consideration," means nothing.

Ostensibly Wills' objection to a Gibbons meeting will throw Rickard and his announced plans for the outdoor season for a ten yard loss behind the line of scrimmage. In reality, it will interfere with them hardly at all. Rickard's real interest lies in another meeting between Gibbons and Dempsey with Wills merely forming an excellent and literal screen in the background.

Has-Beens Defeated By Tri-State-Keils In Ten Pin Contest

The "Has-Been" bowlers were has-beens for the Tri State-Keils last night at the Liberty alleys. The Tri State-Keils trounced their arch opponents at ten pins by a total margin of 305 pins in a three-game match, taking every game by a decisive margin.

The winners passed the 1,000 mark in the first game by 60 pins while the Has-Beens were making 857. The Has-Beens came a little closer in the second game, with the winners taking honors by a margin of 88 pins. This was cut still further in the third match which was won by the Tri State-Keils by only 14 pins.

How to Solve Puzzle.

The best way to solve this cross-word puzzle is to run over the list of horizontal and vertical synonyms in search of evident or "easy" words. If horizontal, the word you are looking for must extend crosswise from the number to the first shaded stop on the right; if vertical, it must extend downward from the number to the first shaded stop below. When finished, the words should read equally well crosswise and downward.

Lutherans In Winning Role In Cage Tilt

Defeat Chester Presbyterian Passers by Big Score.

The Chester Presbyterians of the Sunday school cage loop last night offered very little opposition to the Lutherans who ran away with the affair by the tally of 46 to 11. The clash took place on the high school court.

The First M. E. Juniors were victors over the Lutheran Juniors in the preliminary, the score being 43 to 15.

The Lutheran Intermediates were too strong for the West Virginians in every department. They had the game sewed up practically at the end of the first half when the count stood 20 to 6, and scored even more in the last half than they did in the first.

The Lutheran defense was on a par with their offense, and as a result, the opposition collected only three field goals during the engagement.

G. Woessner, R. Woessner, Schneidmiller and Anthony were scoring stars for the Lutherans while Kibble and Dawson performed well at guards. Cox, Haney, Wallace and Bartly were outstanding performers on the Chester squad.

AN APPETITE IS ASSURED

Earle's Hypo-Cod Guaranteed to Create a Hearty Appetite for Good Wholesome Food.

Lost appetite means lost vitality, lost strength, lost weight and general discouragement. Ten out of every ten weak, thin, frail, wornout men, women and children can't eat—their systems need the proper rebuilding to create a genuine desire for food Earle's Hypo-Cod contains an abundance of the greatest of all appetite creators, Cod Liver Oil, and everybody can take it because medical science has eliminated the terrible fishy taste of the oil. Hypo-Cod is as easy to swallow as rare wine or a pleasant-tasting cordial.

Other blood enrichers and general system rebuilders, combined with Cod Liver Oil extractives, make Hypo-Cod one of the best known and most reliable health tonics sold anywhere. It can be had at all good drug stores in liquid or tablet form at $1.00 per bottle. Heartily recommended in East Liverpool by Mathews Cut Rate, Economy Drug Store, Bulger's Pharmacy, Gamble's Drug Store, McCutcheon's Pharmacy and Huff's Drug Store in Chester.

Horses Used by Mailmen.

ATHENS, Feb.—Some rural mail carriers in Athens county for the past few days, have been traveling the dirt road sections on horseback and carrying the mail in sacks on another horse which they lead. The springlike weather recently rendered the roads "bottomless."
